IS DECIDED BY ¾ LENGTH

EPINARD CAUGHT IN POCKET

Record Eastern Turf Crowd Cheers Victor—Many Notables in Society Attend.

PRESENTATION BY PRINCE

Congratulates Winning Owners and Gives Them English Cup 150 Years Old.

Coming from behind like a great race horse, Wise Counsellor, the three-year-old colt of F. A. Burton and John S. Ward, won the first of the international races at Belmont Park yesterday afternoon, catching and passing Epinard in the last sixteenth of a mile of the six-furlong contest and defeating Pierre Wertheimer's French champion by three-quarters of a length.

The winner was the favorite in a field of nine starters and 60,000 race followers, among them the Prince of Wales—also holiday making—witnessed a contest that thrilled from the fall of the flag to the last stirring struggle down the homestretch. At the very end the two chestnut colts ran side by side. Both faltered slightly, and then the Western colt recovered and went on to win.

The attendance was the largest in the history of Eastern racing and far outnumbered the crowd which witnessed the Sev-Fabyrne race last October, when about 45,000 passed inside the gates. Estimates have been made that as high as 75,000 have attended the Kentucky Derby, but it is believed that those figures were far too high, since the plant at Churchill Downs is much smaller than that at Belmont Park.

The Prince and his party motored to the course, entered through the grounds of the Turf and Field Club and witnessed the third race from the box of Major August Belmont. He was then escorted to the stewards' pagoda for the running of the International Special No. 1. He saw a truly run contest in company with Pierre Wertheimer, owner of the Continental champion of last year, which, in the words of the French sportsman, "was beaten but not disgraced."

Wise Counsellor carried 125 pounds, scale weight for a three-year-old and five pounds less than the four-year-old Epinard. He was ridden by Frankie Keogh, the American jockey recently returned from France, and in that momentous final struggle in the homestretch, when jockeys were straining every nerve and the princes of the thoroughbred world were giving of their very last ounce of strength, he fought and won the riding duel against that other American jockey Everett Haynes, who has ridden Epinard in most of his races on the other side.

Wise Counsellor ran the distance in 1:11 4-5 over a fast track, covering the quarter in 0:23 and the half in 0:46, the time for the full distance being one-fifth of a second slower than Sarazen ran it during the mile race which followed, some consolation for the supporters of Mrs. Vanderbilt's gelding, which was not eligible for the first of the international series. By his victory Wise Counsellor earned $29,000 for his owner. Epinard's share of the sweepstakes was $5,000, $2,000 going to Major Belmont, the owner of Ladkin, which finished third, three lengths in back of Epinard.

Field Closely Bunched.

The field was well together at the finish, less than ten lengths separating the first and last horses. J. S. Cosden's Snob II. was a length and a quarter behind Ladkin, leading the Rancocas Stable's Zev, the latter at one time being in front in the stretch by a length and a quarter. A length separated Zev and R. T. Wilson Jr.'s Willemem, which showed the way to the Nine Hour Farm Stable's Baffling by the wide margin. Two lengths back came the Audley Farm's Miss Star, the only entry in the field, leading Gifford A. Cochran's Goshawk by two lengths. Miss Star received the filly allowance, carrying 121 pounds.

While Wise Counsellor opened an equal choice with Epinard at 3 to 1, the latter went to 4 to 1 and was later forced back to 7 to 2 under a heavy play. That also was the best price that could be obtained for the Western colt and he was hammered back under a flood of play to the original price at post time. It had been expected that Zev would be the favorite and the first quotations made him first choice at 5 to 2. He was almost neglected, however, in the rush for Wise Counsellor and his price quickly mounted to 4 to 1 and remained there until the field went to the post.

There was a great deal of support for Baffling, which had turned in the fastest performance of the season among the candidates for international honors, having run six furlongs at Latonia in 1:10 2-5. Some of the Westerners be-

"I feel satisfied with the colt's showing. Of course, we wanted to win, and with better racing luck we might have done so. It was a great race, and Wise Counsellor is a great horse. Jockey Haynes tells me that Epinard was very sluggish, and this no doubt was due to his not having had a race recently. However, at a longer distance and under as favorable circumstances, and with our share of racing luck, we believe we can win next time."

Jockey Haynes, who rode Epinard, said: "He was sluggish at the post and throughout the race. He did not seem to have the vim that he usually has. I was in a pocket on the turn home and had to go to the rail. I did not have a chance to let Epinard out until we straightened out for the run down the stretch, and then Wise Counsellor was coming like mad on my outside. Epinard did not have his usual jump at this stage, and, though he was gaining speed, he could not get up to Wise Counsellor. I think Epinard needed a race before this big test, but of course that was impossible. He is a great horse, and so is Wise Counsellor."

F. A. Burton, one of the owners of the winner, said: "Wise Counsellor showed that Mr. Ward's judgment in regard to the colt was correct. He was in perfect condition and ran a beautiful race. The credit must go to Ward and to Jockey Keogh. Keogh rode a masterful race and rated Wise Counsellor flawlessly."

Jockey Frankie Keogh, who rode the winner, said: "Epinard is a great horse and made a grand finish, but Wise Counsellor was ready for that finish and responded just as I figured he would. I think Wise Counsellor was the better horse, of course, but Epinard certainly is a good horse, too."

THOUSANDS AT RACES CHEER THE PRINCE

ROYAL GUEST HAS BUSY DAY

New York, or such of it as goes to the races, had its first opportunity yesterday to show the Prince of Wales that even though several years have elapsed since his first visit, he still is its cordially remembered friend. The opportunity really to welcome him back came when the Prince went to Belmont Park and saw Epinard's international misfortune.

Belmont Park is much more ideally laid out to foster the Prince's own desire for obscurity than it is as a stage for the public appearance of one of the world's favorite characters. Yet sufficient thousands were within seeing and hearing and cheering distance to leave the Prince in absolutely no doubt as to how he is regarded on this side of the Atlantic.

The crowd, indeed, achieved a nice balance between its own good-naturedly American wish to make a wide gesture of friendliness and the Prince's manifest inclination to have his holiday comings and goings create as little commotion as possible. Not nearly all of the 60,000 persons who saw the first of the international races saw Prince Edward to know that it was he; even fewer heard the band blare "God Save the King," and a still smaller number could see the Union Jack that fluttered from August Belmont's box.

So there was not the mass demonstration there would have been under more favorable conditions, and the fifty private policemen at the race track were not overwhelmed. Just enough people crowded around to say "Hello, Prince," to keep them busy.

The Prince Has a Busy Day.

The indefatigable vacationist did other things yesterday besides going to the races. Such items as two swims, a hard morning's polo, a lawn party luncheon and dance at the Harold I. Pratt's and a dinner and dance at some place not announced, contributed to a fairly full day in which the Long Island country set claimed the Prince for its own and made much of him.

Today his engagement book, so far as anything set and formal is concerned, is a blank. It is known that he is to participate in a polo match at the Howard Phipps estate at 5:30 in the afternoon. Otherwise his plans, if he has any, are known only to himself and his intimates.

It was a little after 3 o'clock, and Belmont Park already was the scene of a brilliant gathering, when a Hispano-Suiza car rolled out of the Burden place at Syosset which is the Prince's home for his Long Island visit. In it sat Mrs. H. R. Winthrop, his hostess; Major Edward D. Metcalfe, his equerry, and the Prince himself.

The first thing noticed by those whose duty it is to notice such things was that the Prince has two Panama hats. Gone was that comfortable, if somewhat senile, Panama that he wears to polo practice and such. Instead the smooth blond head was covered by a thing of graceful shape and fine texture, as youthful-looking as its wearer, with just a narrow black band to set it off. The rest of his costume was as informal, a gray check suit, very like the one he wore when he landed; blue shirt with matching collar, tan suede shoes and a merry tie.

An effort was made to escort the Prince in style, but as the automobile neared Glen Cove, followed by two others in which rode his suite, the young man noticed that two motorcycle patrolmen flanked his car. He spoke to Major G. N. Seibert, his American military aide, and Seibert shouted over

LABOR CELEBRATES HOLIDAY WITH ARMY

DAVIS DEPLORES STRIKES

Celebration of Labor Day in New York yesterday centred at Fort Hamilton. More than 15,000 men, women and children withstood the sultry weather to remain during a program which included a dramatic and instructive sham battle in the air, a polo game, athletic events and dancing, and in which the speakers included Secretary of Labor James J. Davis, Major Gen. Robert Lee Bullard, Congressman Loring M. Black Jr. and others.

The event, in which the army played host by extending full use of the parade ground at Fort Hamilton, was under the direction of the Central Trades and Labor Council of Greater New York and vicinity. There were times during the day when the discomfort of the thousands moving restively in the heat was emphasized by the paucity of applause. Only when two airplanes swooped to about 150 feet above the heads of the crowd did the thousands find themselves able to stir actively.

President Samuel Gompers of the American Federation of Labor, who is so ill that his representative described him as being "near the grave," did not appear. But a carrier-pigeon which made the trip from Washington in five and one-half hours brought this message from him:

"Upward and onward this Labor Day for humanity, for right, for justice, for freedom and democracy in the name of labor and through our great labor movement."

Attack on Klan Applauded.

Secretary Davis said that America was the one bright spot in the world's economic gloom. He called for a day's work every day and warned against visionaries demanding Government ownership of industries. He deplored the striking of one group of workers against members of another craft as a disgrace to civilization and predicted the day when workers and industrial leaders would come to know each other's problems and work toward substitution of reason for force to settle disputes.

Major General Bullard, commanding the Second Corps Area, told the crowd the army wanted to understand labor and be understood by labor and called for cooperation of the two groups. Congressman Black's attack on the Ku Klux Klan was applauded.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—The American Red Cross has sent an additional $4,000 to alleviate suffering in the Virgin Islands resulting from the hurricane that swept them Thursday night, causing many casualties and considerable property damage. Governor Williams and E. B. Boardman, Collector of the Port and Chairman of the Red Cross Chapter there, both cabled brief reports of the disaster to the national headquarters of the society.

The tropical hurricane which was reported 175 miles northeast of Turks Island yesterday may strike New York City tomorrow, according to local observers of the United States Weather Bureau atop the Whitehall Building.

PARIS, Sept. 1.—The Reparation Commission today officially proclaimed the Dawes plan to be in effect as from noon today.

"From today the periods commence which are fixed for economic evacuation of the Ruhr and Rhineland. By Dec. 5, the Reparation Commission must attest that re-establishment of the economic and fiscal unity of the Ruhr and Rhineland has been accomplished. Immediately thereafter the railroads will be transferred to the newly formed international company.

"Tomorrow the commission will receive Owen D. Young, Reparation Agent-General, who with Mr. MacFadyan, Commissioner of Revenues, is going to Berlin Wednesday. There Mr. Young will find 20,000,000 gold marks, which were deposited today to his account under the London agreement. On Sept. 10 the Reich will make a second payment of 20,000,000 gold marks, then a third of the same amount.

"On the other hand, France and Belgium must hand over the sums collected by the customs in the Ruhr and Rhineland and the revenues from the railroads now under control of the Franco-Belgian Regie, subtracting, however, 2,000,000 gold marks monthly in order to pay the expenses of collection during the transitory period.

"Meanwhile General Degoutte is taking the necessary measures to evacuate the Dortmund-Hoerde zone by Dec. 5, as well as the other districts occupied after Jan. 11 last year."

REFUSAL BY HUGHES IS SENT TO GENEVA AS ASSEMBLY OPENS

SAYS OUR VIEW IS KNOWN

By Cable and Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

GENEVA, Sept. 1.—Simultaneously with the opening today of the fifth assembly of the League of Nations came the announcement that the League Secretariat had received a refusal from Secretary Hughes to accept the invitation to send an American delegate to participate in the work of the Third Committee of the Assembly in discussing the draft, prepared by the temporary mixed commission of the League, for a treaty controlling traffic in arms.

Americans participated in the work of the temporary commission, but Mr. Hughes takes the view that all America's ideas on the subject were there expressed and that, therefore, no good would come of American representation on the third committee. It was the feeling of the League Council that if America sent a delegate the League would be enabled to know if any changes asked by League members in the committee would receive approval in Washington. The reply of Mr. Hughes says that if the Assembly decides to call a conference to consider the plan adopted by the League, representatives of the United States will attend it.

Distinctions Made by Mr. Hughes.

The general impression given by the American reply is that Mr. Hughes thinks that the United States must keep just so far from the League and get no nearer. The United States takes part in the discussion of a given subject by a League commission sitting in Geneva when the Assembly is not meeting. But that is apparently held to be different from taking part in a discussion in an Assembly committee of the same subject. The United States would take part in "an appropriate international conference of the powers" to discuss a treaty for the control of armaments, but it would not discuss it with the same powers assembled under the League roof-tree.

Some Americans in the galleries today thought M. Hymans, the temporary presiding officer, referred to the attitude of the United States when he said in his opening speech:

"That the idea of the League of Nations has met opposition from skeptics is a matter of small importance, since skepticism is nothing but intellectual sloth or lack of insight. There is a tendency in certain quarters to oppose the idea of patriotism to the idea of international solidarity, as if they were conflicting and irreconcilable conceptions. The League of Nations does not supersede individual countries; it extends them, develops them and enlarges them, and countries that are members of the League do not lose an iota of those inalienable sovereign rights which are their protection and their pride."

Opening Address by Hymans.

In his address of greeting Paul Hymans, Foreign Minister of Belgium, the Temporary Chairman, declared that the whole world was looking to the League to do something about disarmament this year, and advanced the argument that nations must receive material assurances of security before they could be asked to disarm. Ex-President Motta of Switzerland, who was elected President of the Assembly this afternoon, devoted his inaugural address to a plea for compulsory arbitration of all international disputes. It is interesting to note that the first two speeches on disarmament reflect the two opposing ideas to be presented at Geneva by the French and English. M. Hymans today upheld the French view that security means military guarantees against aggression, after receiving which nations could disarm, whereas the English, or rather the MacDonald view, on which Dr. Motta touched, is that a spirit of international good-will should be established by arbitration arrangements which will give the best security, and that, the security problem being thus solved, nations may proceed to reduce or do away with their armies.

In a word, the French demand that France and her allies shall receive assurances of military support if they reduce their armies radically, whereas

The hottest Sept. 1 in the history of the local Weather Bureau was yesterday, when the official thermometer recorded 92 degrees at 3 P. M. The only other hotter day this Summer was on Aug. 7, when the mercury reached 93. The next hottest Sept. 1 was in 1898, when it was 91.5.

While a heat record was being set here, reports of heavy frosts were received from Montana and North Dakota, but the local forecaster could not hold out any hopes of the cool wave extending this far East.

One death and six prostrations from the heat were reported in the metropolitan area. Heat and the holiday combined to send to the beaches crowds that equaled those of any day of the Summer.

The death attributed to the heat was that of Michael Delfino, 32 years old, a steward, stricken at 171 Oak Street, Yonkers.

Those overcome and the hospital to which they were taken were:

WITTIGER, JULIUS, 35, of 98 New Jersey Avenue, overcome in front of 49 Jamaica Avenue, Brooklyn; Bradford Street Hospital.

The minimum temperature yesterday was 74 degrees at 6:30 A. M. The humidity at that hour was 68. The climb of the mercury was shown by the Weather Bureau record to have been as follows:

PRESIDENT GREETS WORKERS

He Sees "No Change Needed in Capital and Labor Relations."

AGGRESSIVE CAMPAIGN ON

President Will Now Employ Offensive Tactics, His Advisers Assert.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—President Coolidge began the more active phase of his campaign for election today by attacking the "radicalism and paternalism" attributed to Senator La Follette, and defending a "common sense" Government. He declared that restrictive immigration and tariff for protection made for prosperity for labor.

His policies as to labor, and the relations between capital and labor, were made known to several hundred labor leaders in the East Room of the White House. The representatives of labor present lauded Republican principles and the policies pursued by President Coolidge respecting labor, and promised support to the Republican Party. Some labor leaders had indicated their desire to see the President while he was in Plymouth. They had swelled to several hundred today, which encouraged Republicans to say that labor would not be delivered by the American Federation of Labor to Senator La Follette.

Captain George Frietas, President of the Licensed Tugmen's Association, presided and introduced his colleagues. He read letters from John L. Lewis, President of the United Mine Workers; E. M. Foley, Secretary of the International Brotherhood of Dredging Engineers and Crane Men, and W. N. Doak, Vice President of the Brotherhood of Trainmen, expressing inability to be present. Daniel Smith of the Switchmen's Union, John Dransey of the Lackawanna Veterans' Association, a branch of the Locomotive Engineers; Joseph Ryan, First Vice President of the Longshoremen, and Joseph P. McArdle spoke in praise of President Coolidge. They assured him of their support, and indicated that labor could not be voted as the leaders dictated.

Start of Aggressive Campaign.

In addressing the delegates, following speeches by labor leaders, President Coolidge stated his position and that of the party as to issues of interest to labor. His campaign advisers said this marked the beginning of a policy of aggression, and that he would follow offensive tactics throughout his campaign.

The President asserted that the two big domestic factors today entering into the situation which had made prosperity for labor were restrictive immigration and tariff for protection. These, he said, had maintained employment for Americans and American standards of living.

"By restrictive immigration, by adequate protection, I want to prevent America from producing cheap men," he said.

Attacking the policies of Senator La Follette, he said:

"We do not need to import any foreign economic ideas or any foreign Government. We had better stick to the American brand of government, the American brand of equality and the American brand of wages. America had better stay American."

There is no need for any change in our relations between capital and labor, the President concluded, saying: "We have outlawed all artificial privilege. We have had our revolution and our reform. I do not favor a corporation Government, a bank Government, a farm Government or a labor Government. I am for a common-sense Government, by all the people, according to the American policy and under the American Constitution."

"Compulsory arbitration," said the President, discussing the relations between employer and employed, "has sometimes been proposed, but to my mind, it cannot be reconciled with the rights of individual freedom. Along with the right to organize goes the right to strike, which is recognized in all private employment."

Wants Taxes to Be Less.

He also told the delegates that of the 24,000,000 heads of families in the United States it takes 5,000,000 of these working at $5 a day to pay the present cost of government. He impressed upon them that, after all, these taxes were paid by the toilers, and "the people pay the taxes of Government, often many times over in the increased cost of living."

"I want the taxes to be less," he said, "that the people may have more."

His foreign policy was outlined briefly in these sentences:

"I want to have America cooperate in securing speedy settlement of European differences and assist in financing a revival of business which would be of world-wide benefit to wage earners. I am in favor of continuing and extending the policy of covenants between nations

LA FOLLETTE VOWS WAR ON THE 'TRUSTS'

CONDEMNS THE DAWES PLAN

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—Senator La Follette opened his campaign as the Progressive candidate for President with a radio speech this afternoon in which he assailed monopoly, criticized the influence of American bankers in Europe, condemned "corruption" at Washington and charged that neither the Republican nor the Democratic Party had any real or effective remedy for the evils which had arisen "under their respective Administrations and as a result of their policies."

Senator La Follette spoke from Washington over the same radio system which several hours previously had broadcast the speech of John W. Davis, the Democratic nominee, from Wheeling, W. Va., as far West as Kansas City. The Senator stated that he had entered the campaign as an independent candidate to "convict" the "monopoly system," charging that it was protected by certain laws and by the failure to enforce others, and "whose power is so great that both the old parties have become merely the instruments of its will."

"The Progressives come to you," he said, "with a constructive national program, framed in the interests and for the benefit of the mass of the people.

"We believe our Government, ruled by Republican and Democratic Parties, has fallen under the domination and control of men and interests * * * who subvert the great powers of the Government and secure to themselves the fruits of the labor of the mass of the American people."

The message carried to the people by the Republican and Democratic Parties, he went on, was only "a message of despair."

Denounces Foreign Affairs Issues.

"We have enlisted in this campaign to restore this Government to the service of the people, to secure the laborer and producer in all lines a greater share of the product of his toil, while protecting the consumer against the trust-fixed prices on all he buys, and to drive out of the Government at Washington the corrupting influences now so dominant."

Promises were made by the Senator that, if elected, he would strive to repeal the Transportation act, to readjust tax schedules, to conserve national resources, to promote cooperative marketing, to reorganize the Federal Trade Commission and the Tariff Commission and to "use the appointive power of the Executive to free every department of the Government from the control of special interests."

"I would place at the head of the Department of Justice and in the office of every United States District Attorney," he said, "men who would vigorously enforce all laws, and I would instruct them to bring and prosecute criminal actions against every profiteering monopoly which violates the anti-trust laws with the same vigor which I should require of them in the prosecution of a bootlegger."

The Senator did not expatiate on foreign affairs. The two major parties, he asserted, sought to divert attention from domestic subjects by saying that the solution of economic ills lay in curing the European situation.

"The original source of the Democratic and Republican plans respecting Europe is the same," he declared. "That source is the well known banking house of J. P. Morgan & Co. The connection of this banking house with the candidates of both old parties and with the leaders of those parties is close and intimate and confidential. The so-called Dawes plan is merely the Morgan plan."

Attacking the "trusts," the Senator

DAVIS AGAINST RAIL BOARD

He Declares for Child Labor Amendment and Curb on Injunctions.

EDUCATION FOR WORKERS

He Also Advocates Collective Bargaining and World Cooperation to Prevent War.

EXCEEDS PARTY PLATFORM

Special to The New York Times.

WHEELING, W. Va., Sept. 1.—Ratification of the proposed Child Labor amendment, abolition of the Railroad Labor Board by rewriting the Esch-Cummins act, and prevention of the abuse of the writ of injunction in labor disputes—three cardinal points in the program of organized labor—were advocated today by John W. Davis, Democratic nominee for President, in a speech before the Ohio Valley Trades and Labor Council at Wheeling Park.

Preservation of equality of opportunity, with no caste system; preservation of equality of right and the adaptation of our political and commercial policies to new conditions to secure the nation against war—the latter interpreted to be a plea for the League of Nations—were declared by Mr. Davis to be the three great constructive duties before the American people.

Eight thousand men and women, who were attending the Council's Labor Day picnic, heard Mr. Davis and gave him a cordial greeting and his speech enthusiastic applause. In an address that was relatively short and avowedly non-political Mr. Davis managed to pack many matters of current public interest. He was greatly pleased at his reception from his former constituents in the First Congressional District of West Virginia.

Mr. Davis went beyond and against the Democratic national platform in expressing his views on labor, and practically wrote a labor plank of his own in delivering his speech. He went beyond the platform in declaring definitely for the proposed child labor constitutional amendment, now pending before the various State Legislatures for ratification, as he did in denouncing the Ku Klux Klan by name in his speech at Seagirt, N. J.

He expressed a divergent view from the platform by asserting his belief that wages and hours of labor for adult workmen should be fixed by contract reached by voluntary agreement, instead of being fixed by a "paternalistic Government." The nominee reaffirmed his belief in the principle of collective bargaining, the basis of the organized labor movement.

Against State Education Monopoly.

Mr. Davis declared against a "State monopoly of education," thereby aligning himself with the Supreme Court decision in the Oregon case, in which that State sought to establish its right to prohibit private and parochial schools, and opposing the proposed Federal Department of Education indorsed by President Coolidge. He condemned the theory that the education of children of any class should be limited to the manufacture of hands for industry, and asserted that any tendency in this direction must be resisted.

Telling his hearers that, although war had ended slavery in this country, it invariably placed heavier burdens on labor in the aggregate than it pretended to remove, Mr. Davis appealed to organized labor in this country to lead the movement to end America's policy of isolation in international affairs. In what seemed almost a plea for support for the entrance of the United States into the League of Nations, which he has said he expected as an ultimate solution, the nominee said:

"We shall have world peace and world disarmament if we are willing to work for it. We will not get it on any other terms. I call upon the laboring men and women of America, as those on whom the burdens of war fall with the most crushing weight, to lead their fellow-countrymen on this great subject, to make sure that America takes her rightful place in the councils of humanity and that she becomes the first among the nations in the service of mankind."

Mr. Davis was introduced by Michael Mahoney, former President of the council, who answered some local labor criticism of the invitation to the Democratic nominee by saying that the speech would be non-political and that Mr. Davis had been invited as a distinguished son of the State. The resentment over Mr. Davis's invitation was said to have extended little beyond the local Cigarmakers' Union, which was the organization to protest and which is supporting the third party ticket.

Certainly none was evident in the warm welcome which Mr. Davis received. It was said that the crowd might have been larger if the Central Trades and Labor Assembly, just across the river in Ohio, had united with the Ohio Valley Council, as has been its custom.

Mr. Davis's speech was filled with epigrams, which elicited the plaudits of the crowd, and he was compelled to pause frequently because of these interruptions.

He declared that education was the door to equal opportunity, and caused a laugh when he referred to the theory that education of the brain might leave no one to do the labor of the hand as the "mud-sill theory," denounced by Abraham Lincoln.

Mr. Davis was applauded when he declared that equality of opportunity was a mere phrase unless all men were left free to grasp it, and asserted that laws must not only be just and equal, but must not evade natural rights which no agency might restrict.

"Freedom of speech, which means the right to say things that displease as well as the things that please those in power; freedom of assembly, freedom of labor; freedom of contract, freedom of the press, freedom in matters of religious belief and practice; these are rights too sacred to be trifled with," he said. "There is no danger in their exercise. It is the attempt at their suppression that leads to excess or explosion."

Mr. Davis added, with obvious reference to some of the recent remarks of General Charles G. Dawes, Republican nominee for Vice President, "I do not envy the frame of mind which causes some men, some of them candidates for high office, to charge all who disagree with them with plotting the destruction of the Republic. To judge from some recent utterances, there are those in this country who see a conspiracy whenever three workmen get together, a riot when their number grows to ten and a revolution if it reaches 100. Around every corner lurks a Red, and nothing but the utmost vigilance of these self-appointed savers will rescue the country from the destruction he is plotting."

Before arriving at Wheeling Mr. Davis made half a dozen stops and as many speeches at towns in the First Congressional District, which he formerly represented. Because of the arrival of his special train earlier than expected, there were only small crowds at Grafton and Fairmont, the latter the home of Clement L. Shaver, Democratic National Chairman. The largest crowd was at Mannington, where more than a thousand men and women gathered and cheered the nominee as he came to the rear platform and shook hands with those nearest his car.

"I have fought the fights of the Democratic Party up and down the First District too often for my views to be mistaken or there to be any doubt about where I stand," Mr. Davis said.

"I stand in this campaign where I have always stood, with the Democratic ideal of government by the people and for the people; for honesty in government; for a Government not for any privileged class but a Government for all, and I expect to see such a Government succeed in November next."

Mr. Davis was even more optimistic in a speech to six hundred or seven hundred persons at Hundred, a mining town.

"I feel that no introduction to the people of Hundred and Wetzel County is necessary," he said. "Whatever else may happen this Fall, I feel sure that the Democrats, as for many years in the past, are going to carry Wetzel County. I have reason to think that they will carry a great deal more. I think they will carry the rest of West Virginia, and I expect them to carry for their national ticket the United States."

Mr. Davis made other short speeches at Gilcoryan and Moundsville. After a visit to the West Virginia State Fair, in progress on its grounds on the outskirts of Wheeling, Mr. Davis with his party left here at 6:15 for Chicago, where he will remain for two or three days before going further West on his speaking trip.

TEXT OF MR. DAVIS'S SPEECH.

WHEELING, W. Va., Sept. 1.—The full text of John W. Davis's speech before the Ohio Valley Trades and Labor Council reads:

When I left Clarksburg after my acceptance speech three weeks ago, I did not hope to find myself so soon again within the borders of my native State. This is a wide country, and one who wishes to know or to be known by the 110,000,000 people who dwell within its borders must travel far if he is to accomplish that result. But when the Ohio Valley Trades and Labor Assembly invited me to speak at Wheeling on Labor Day I could not get my own consent to refuse their invitation. I felt that I owed too much to them and too much to the good people of Wheeling to turn aside.

It was in the hall of the Carroll Club, in the City of Wheeling, fourteen years ago, that a Democratic Convention drafted me as its nominee for Congress. My subsequent election was due in large part to the support which I received in Ohio County and the northern Panhandle. Two years later, upon my legislative record before you, you renewed my commission, and from that day to this I have been given in countless ways evidence of your friendship and good-will.

Today I find myself again a candidate for office. I have not come, however, to plead my cause or the cause of the party which I represent. Indeed, in extending your invitation you made it clear that you did not expect—which was a polite way of saying that you did not desire—a political address. You had, of course, as I have, a different thought in mind. This is a celebration and a holiday in which Republicans and Democrats, Progressives, Socialists and men of all political beliefs unite, and I would be the last to wish to introduce any political discord into such a gathering. We meet as Americans on an American holiday. We seem afloat for the moment to forget political parties and the issues that divide them, and speak of things concerning which all true Americans should agree.

Labor's Struggle for Its Rights.

This is labor's holiday. It was made a national holiday in the second Administration of Grover Cleveland. It is the day of those who, as the Wise Man said 2,000 years ago, "put their trust in their hands, and each becometh wise in his own work." And then the Wise Man goes on truthfully to say that "Without these shall not a city be inhabited and men shall not sojourn nor walk up and down therein." They will maintain the fabric of the world, and in the handiwork of their craft is their prayer.

If I had the ability to sermonize I would want to make better text than the one which these sentences present. I would dwell on the self-reliance of labor which puts its trust in its own hands; the service of labor which gives the man food and shelter and clothing, and without which shall not this or any other city be inhabited, and men shall not sojourn, nor walk up and down therein; the necessity for labor, that the fabric of the world may be maintained, and, last of all, the duty of labor, so to perform its great tasks that they may become daily offerings to the God of all the earth for "the handiwork of their craft is their prayer." But, since I cannot pretend to be a sermonizer, I leave that task to those who are better fitted to perform it.

Labor has traveled a long road since those words were written. Chattel slavery, which bound the slave to his master, and serfdom, which bound the worker to the land, have stained many centuries of human history. Six hundred years ago there were laws that made it a crime for a workman to demand or an employer to pay more than the going wage, and bailiffs and sheriffs were sent on the trail of workmen who left their county without permission. Combinations of workmen to secure a raise in wages or better conditions of labor were unlawful under the laws of England as late as sixty years ago, and men still live who felt in America the cruel bondage of a slavery that it took a bloody war to destroy.

Today involuntary servitude, except as a punishment for crime, is forever forbidden in these United States, and the right of labor fully to organize and freely to bargain for its own interest is recognized both by public opinion and by law. It has been no easy struggle that has brought labor to the position in which it stands today. At every stage its advance has been opposed by the forces of human greed and avarice, and retarded by ignorance and prejudice. Autocracy in government and in industry has made a hard fight to hold its ground, for privilege never yields without a struggle.

Not once but many times war has cast its shadow across the pathway and although in this country war broke the chains of the slave, it will be found, when the account is added up, that war has always put the heaviest burdens on the backs of labor than it has ever pretended to remove.

The Equality of Opportunity.

If labor is to hold the ground that it has gained, which is but another way of saying that if America is to remain American, there are three great constructive duties before the American people. The first is to preserve equality of opportunity and make the nation secure against any tendency to harden into a system of caste. We do not want men and women in this country to remain tied to the stations which their fathers occupied. We wish all fathers and all mothers to nurse the hope that their children may lead happier and broader lives than they themselves have known.

The second duty is to so arrange and so administer our Government as to preserve equality of right. Whether we are dealing with the tariff, with taxation, with finance, with the railroads, with agriculture, with industry or what subject soever, we must make sure than there is no discrimination in our laws either for or against the farm or the factory, the countryside or the city, the East or the West. And our laws must be so framed and so applied as to leave all men every liberty which is consistent with the equal liberties of others. This was intended as the land of freedom. We must keep it so.

And in the third place, we must make the nation secure against war or the threat of war by adjoining our political and commercial policies to the new conditions that exist in the modern world.

The key to the door of equal opportunity is education. Now and again a misguided voice is raised to suggest that we may become overeducated. The thought seems to be that if we educate the brain there will be not one left to do the labor of the hand. It is the same "mud-sill" theory which Abraham Lincoln denounced when he said that "By the mud-sill theory it is assumed that labor and education have no connection. Now, I think, both of them impossible. According to that theory, a blind horse upon a treadmill is a perfect illustration of what a laborer should be—all the better for being blind, that he may not kick undeservingly." According to that theory, the education of laborers is not only useless but pernicious and dangerous. In fact, it is, in some sort, deemed a misfortune that laborers should have heads at all. Those same heads are regarded as explosive material, only to be safely kept in damp places, as far as possible from the peculiar sort of fire which ignites them. A Yankee who could invent a strong-handed man without a head would receive the everlasting gratitude of the 'mud-sill' advocates. But free labor says 'No.' Every head should be cultivated and improved by whatever will add to his capacity for performing its charge. In one word, free labor insists on universal education."

We must not enter on the fatal path of a State monopoly of education, nor should we load upon an already overburdened Government at Washington the educational duties which properly belong to the States and cities and local communities. But we must sustain, support and strengthen in every way our indispensable system of public schools so that every child may be assured of an education, and of such an education as will fit him not only to earn his living but also to live. We must resist every tendency to limit the education of children of any class merely to the manufacture of hands for others, and every tendency to produce a standardized American.

It is the business of the schools to turn out free citizens of the Republic, and not merely docile human machines. And if we open wide by education the door of opportunity to the child, we owe it to him to see that human greed does not close it again. It is a blot upon our good name that child labor should be permitted anywhere in the United States to dwarf the minds and bodies of the future citizens of the Republic. To stunt the growth of a child in his most critical years, to rob him of his opportunity for education and make him a juvenile drudge for the purposes of profit, is a crime against the future of the race.

For Child Labor Law.

Of course the several States can, and they should, prevent this thing; I would not wish that power taken from them. When Congress passed, in 1916, its first Child Labor law, however, it became my duty, as Solicitor General, to argue in its favor before the Supreme Court of the United States. I urged in its support that unless a uniform standard was adopted throughout the United States, the States that wished to legislate against child labor would be deterred because of the economic disadvantages they would suffer in competition with their less progressive neighbors. I called attention to the fact that for like reasons more than one international conference had been called to bring about equality among the nations on similar subjects. The reasons which I put forward in support of the law of 1916 seem to me still to obtain and lead me now to favor the ratification of the pending child labor amendment. Responsibility for decision on that subject now rests with the States themselves, but were I a member of a State Legislature my vote would be cast to ratify the amendment.

Equality of opportunity, however, is an empty phrase unless all men are left free to grasp it. Not only must laws be just and equal, but we must see that they do not evade those natural rights which neither Congresses nor Legislatures, Presidents or Governors, courts or commissions may rightfully restrict. Freedom of speech—which means the right to say the things that displease as well as the things that please those in power; freedom of assembly, freedom of labor, freedom of contract, freedom of the press, freedom in matters of religious belief and practice—these are rights too sacred to be trifled with. There is no danger in their exercise. It is the attempt at their suppression that leads to excess or explosion.

I do not envy the frame of mind which causes some men to charge all who disagree with them with plotting the destruction of the Republic. To judge from some recent utterances, there are those in this country who see a conspiracy whenever three workmen meet together, a riot when their numbers grow to ten, and a revolution if it reaches a hundred. Around every corner lurks a Red, and nothing but the utmost vigilance of these self-appointed savers will rescue the country from the destruction he is plotting.

Of course, in a country so diversified as ours many mistaken ideas are set afloat. Wild theories of government and of society are thrown up in a population that contains so many sorts of men. But I am one of those who continue to believe that the best disinfectant, moral or physical, is fresh air. The best defense against the tyranny of the few or the despotism of the many is free and open debate. I prefer liberty with all its perils, including the liberty to make mistakes, to any system by which the Government seeks to set itself up as the universal shepherd of us all.

Urges Right to Contract.

Not the least of these natural rights is the right of free contract. Toward grown men and women, responsible citizens of the Republic, we cannot and we should not take a paternalistic and protective attitude. It is well enough for the Government as an employer to fix by statute the hours of labor of those whom it employs. It is proper and right that it should pass factory laws to protect the health and safety of those who work. Where it undertakes to regulate a business such as transportation it cannot ignore the conditions that surround the labor engaged in that industry. It must defend the future citizenship of the nation by restrictions on child labor, and in view of the burdens which the duties of maternity cast upon them it may exercise a special care for those who are or are to become the mothers of the race.

But, such cases aside, it should leave adult citizens to make their own contracts, in their own way as to the terms and conditions on which their labor is to be performed. If Government can fix the limit of a day's work in ordinary industrial and commercial pursuits it can, at its own discretion, make those limits long or short. It should attempt to do neither, but leave the parties to all such contracts to bargain with each other as their mutual benefit requires. The wage contract of the adult, no less than any other contract, should be a voluntary agreement. Anything other than this I believe to be impossible, undesirable, corrupting and tyrannical.

It is only when contracts rest upon consent that those who make them are bound in morals to their observance. When labor bargains on equal terms with its employer, both parties to the contract own it to themselves and owe it to society to keep and perform with scrupulous honesty the contracts they have made.

While employer and employe should be left to bargain with each other in such manner as they see fit, it must not be forgotten that violent disputes between them are not only the sources of great loss to both, but are disastrous to the industry and commerce of the country. In view of these facts it is the duty of Government to lend its aid and encourage every peaceful possible way to settle such disputes. It should provide machinery through which there may be fair and calm discussion of the subject of dispute by the employer and employe; mediation, arbitration and conciliation, persons and thorough-going publicity of all facts.

Two things seem to me to be fundamental in setting up such machinery. Of these the first is that when an adjustment board is created it should consist of representatives of the employers on the one hand and representatives of the particular craft concerned in the controversy on the other; the second, that it is better in every way that boards of adjustment or boards of investigation and review, instead of being fixed in their personnel, should be filled by appointments made from time to time as controversies arise. Nothing is more difficult than for a permanent board to retain the confidence of employer and employe. Each decision it is called upon to make exposes it to the charge of having unduly favored one side or the other, and is pointed to as a precedent when subsequent decisions are to be made. Human nature is quick to charge other men with preconceived opinions—and labor disputes deal not with fixed rules of law, they deal with human nature.

Whether or not legal authority exists to compel the submission of labor disputes to such a board, or whether or not the decisions of any such board may be enforced, is of minor consequence if the board itself enjoys the confidence of the parties to the dispute, and if it realizes that its chief function is to encourage a spirit of cooperation and friendship between employer and employe.

It is the light of those principles and of accumulated experience that we should rewrite those provisions of the Esch-Cummins Transportation act that deal with the settlement of labor disputes.

It is because I believe in a liberty that is above and beyond all governmental control that I cannot sympathize with those who would give to Congress, State Legislatures, or, yet, to a popular majority, the power to do whatever they might see fit. There is no such thing in America as government at discretion. It is not the strong who need protection against narrow and unjust laws, or against the encroachments of power; it is the weak on whom the burden of such things is most apt to fall. They have the right to call upon the courts to say to every governmental autocrat, great or small, "Thus far shalt thou go and no further."

I know Judges are human and that they make many mistakes. Men do not cease to be men simply because you put them in a black silk gown and set them in a judicial chair; but on the other hand they do not become prophets or seers or sages simply by being elected Senators or Members of Congress or delegates to a State Legislature.

Condemns the Injunction.

There is one complaint, however, which labor has had cause to make against judicial process which is well founded. In my judgment, there have been many cases in the past where the writ of injunction has been abused in connection with labor disputes. Injunctions have been issued which by their terms went beyond any proper limit and sought to deprive men of a lawful exercise of indisputable rights. They have been framed with partisan zeal and their effect has been to cast upon the courts the performance of duties which properly belong to the executive officers of the State or nation who are primarily charged with the preservation of public peace and public order.

It is not well for society, it is not well for the courts, it is not well for the parties themselves, that these things should be so. My views on this subject are not the result of any newly formed conviction. When I was your representative in Congress I was given opportunity to take part in framing and defending legislation intended to correct these evils, to limit to its proper functions the writ of injunction and to give the right of trial by jury to those who are charged with criminal contempt. I believe that that legislation was demanded. If the legislation already passed is not sufficient guidance in this matter we must write it in plainer terms.

The age in which we live differs vastly in its social and economic relation and in facts of its industrial life from the age in which our Government was founded. The glory of our system has been that it adapts itself to meet the new problems of an ever-changing life. Labor has shares and must continue to share in the responsibility of its adoption. It still remains to be shown, however, whether we ourselves are able to rise to the new conception of international relations that these changes demand.

The generation needs no further lesson of the peril and destructiveness of war. We must bring ourselves to think in terms of lasting peace. When American fliers about to complete the circuit of the globe by air, with the human voice carrying across the ocean and with men becoming every day more and more dependent upon products brought from foreign soil, those who counsel isolation are blind leaders of the blind.

We shall have world peace and world disarmament if we are willing to work for it. We will not get it on any other terms. I call upon the laboring men and women of America as those on whom the burdens of war fall with most crushing weight to lead their fellow-countrymen on this great subject, to make sure that America takes her rightful place in the council of humanity, and that she becomes the first among the nations in the service of mankind.

Promises to Emulate Wilson.

ON BOARD THE DAVIS SPECIAL TRAIN, ZANESVILLE, Ohio, Sept. 1.—A promise to be guided by the example of the Administration of Woodrow Wilson, if elected President, was made tonight by John W. Davis, Democratic nominee, in speech to 500 persons from the rear platform of his car at Cambridge, Ohio. "The Democratic Party under Woodrow Wilson gave this country more beneficial legislation than any other Administration in the same length of time," he said.

"It gave the country an administration that was free from corruption and scandal. That administration raised American prestige throughout the world to a greater height than ever before and gave us a place among the nations of wonderful influence and power. If I am elected, I expect to emulate that record."

FOSTER ATTACKS RIVAL.

Red Candidate Says La Follette Could Not Abolish Capitalism.

OMAHA, Sept. 1.—Control of the country by labor is inevitable, William Z. Foster, Presidential candidate of the Workers' Party, declared here in an address last night. He asserted that England's Labor Prime Minister, Ramsay MacDonald, was only "carrying on capitalism."

"La Follette, the independent candidate for President," he continued, "can only curtail the power of the moneyed class rather than abolish it. Capitalism will remain in complete power until labor assumes that control.

"I want to see our institutions more and more humane. But I do not want to see any of the people cringing suppliants for the favor of Government, when they should all be independent masters of their own destiny. I want to encourage business that it may provide profitable employment. I want to see jobs hunting for men rather than men hunting for jobs."

In the delegation of labor men whom the President addressed were T. V. O'Connor, Chairman of the United States Shipping Board and a former President of the International Longshoremens' Union; Joseph McArdle, Field Agent for the Interstate Commerce Commission and a member of the Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen; G. W. Moore Jr., Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, Philadelphia; Thomas J. Healey, Business Agent, Marine Engineers' Beneficial Association, New York; William Delaney, former Chairman of the Legislative Committee, Central Trade and Labor Council, New York; C. E. Musser, Brotherhood of Railway Trainmen, Philadelphia; John D'Arcy, Marine Engineers, Philadelphia; Harmon Drew, Legislative Chairman of the Railway Conductors, New York.

TEXT OF THE PRESIDENT'S SPEECH.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—President Coolidge's speech to the visiting labor delegation was as follows:

Labor Day is more entitled than any other to be called a national holiday. Other holidays had their origin in State legislative action. Labor Day had its origin in national legislative action. After Congress had taken the lead the States followed; it is moreover, a peculiarly American holiday. It is a most characteristic representation of our ideals. No other country, I am told, makes a like observance. But in America this high tribute is paid in recognition of the worth and dignity of the men and women who toil.

You come here as representative Americans. You are true representatives. I cannot think of anything characteristically American that was not produced by toil. I cannot think of any American man or woman preeminent in the history of our nation who did not reach their place through toil. I cannot think of anything that represents the American people at a whole holiday so honest from work. We perform different tasks, but the spirit is the same. We are proud of work and ashamed of idleness. With us there is no task which is menial, no service which is degrading. All work is ennobling and all workers are ennobled.

To my mind America has but one main problem, the character of the men and women it shall produce. It is not fundamentally a Government problem, although the government can be of great influence in its solution. It is the real problem of the people themselves. They control its property, they have determined its government, they manage its business. In all things they are the masters of their own destiny. What they are, their intelligence, their fidelity, their courage, their faith, will determine our material prosperity, our success and happiness at home and our place in the world abroad.

For Common-Sense Government.

If anything is to be done, then, by the Government for the people who toil, for the cause of labor, which is the sum of all other causes, it will be by continuing its efforts to provide healthful surroundings, education, reasonable conditions of employment, fair wages for fair work, stable business prosperity and the encouragement of religious worship. This is the general American policy, which is working out with a success more complete for humanity with its finite limitations, than was ever accomplished anywhere else in the world. The door of opportunity swings wide open in our country. Through it, in constant flow, go those who toil. America recognizes no aristocracy save those who work. The badge of service is the sole requirement for admission to the ranks of our nobility.

These American policies should be continued, we have outlawed all artificial privilege. We have had our revolution and our reforms. I do not favor a corporation Government, a bank Government, a farm Government or a labor Government.

I stand for a common-sense Government by all the people according to the American policy and under the American Constitution. I want all the people to continue to be participants in self-government. We never had a Government under our Constitution that was not put into office by the votes of the toilers.

It is only necessary to look about you to observe the practical effect of this policy. It is commonly different to find men in government positions who did not in their beginnings live by the work of their own hands. Of those who sit at the Cabinet table of the nation none was born to the purple, save only as all men were born to become American citizens, and nearly all in early life earned their living by actual manual labor.

The Secretary of Labor comes from union labor ranks. In each important national conference in which labor is interested labor has been represented. On several occasions under this Administration that has been the practice.

It was so at the conference on unemployment, on transportation, on agriculture, on the business cycle, on intermittent employment in construction industries and on the great Washington Conference for Limitation of Armament. The same policy prevails in the membership of many of our important commissions. The Chairman of the United States Shipping Board, one of the most important places of business administration in the Government, is filled by a man who was prominent in organized labor.

The St. Lawrence River, the Interstate Commerce and the United States Employes' Compensation Commissions, the Vocational Education and the Railway Labor Boards are examples of this policy and are results of the open door of opportunity. Those who have been identified with toil are now and will continue to be in important places of Government authority. The wage earners of America have been mixing their work with brains ever since the day of George Washington.

But the government of the United States is not for the gratification of the people who happen to hold office. It is established to promote the general welfare of all the people. That is the American ideal.

Says Labor Retains Its Gains.

No matter how many officeholders there may be, or what their origin, our institutions are a failure unless they serve all the citizens in their own homes. It is always necessary to find out what effect the institutions of government and society have on the wage earner in order to judge of the desirability of their continuation.

One of the outstanding features of the present day is that American wage earners are living better than at any other time in our history. They have not only retained, but actually increased, the gains they made during the war. The cost of living has been high, but the increase in wages has been greater. Compilations of the Department of Labor demonstrate that the wages of an hour or a day buy more now than it ever did before.

Not only are the American wage earners now receiving more money, and more of the things that money will buy, for their work, than any other wage earners in the world, but more than was ever before received by any community of wage earners. We have here in the United States not only the best-paid workers in the world, but the best-paid workers that ever lived in this world.

All this has been accomplished in spite of a general shortening of the hours of labor in the industries. The mines of the iron and steel and the building industry are particularly noticeable in this regard. As a direct result of President Harding's initiative, the iron and steel manufacturers were brought together and an agreement was reached under which the twelve-hour day and the seven-day week have been eliminated. Secretary Davis did the same with the board of directors.

Yet this has been done without any loss in wages. On the other hand, there has been actual gain. The Department of Labor statistics show that in 1924 the customary working time per week in blast furnaces has been reduced to 70 per cent. of the customary working time per week in 1912. But earnings per hour in 1924 are more than two and one-half times the earnings per hour in 1913. Despite the great reduction in hours, weekly earnings in this industry stand today 90 per cent. above weekly earnings of 1912.

In the open-hearth furnace department of the iron and steel industry working hours are only 56 per cent. of the working hours of 1913. But earnings per hour are more than two and two-thirds times the earnings per hour of 1913. Earnings per week are 68 per cent. above the weekly earnings of 1913. All other workers of the iron and steel industry have enjoyed large increases in earnings per hour and per week.

I know that figures are sometimes tiresome. But these I am quoting are so eloquent that I am sure you will pardon other illustrations. In the shoe industry regular working hours are now 11 per cent. lower than in 1913, hourly wages are two and one-seventh times those of 1913 and full-time weekly earnings are 92 per cent. above those of 1913.

In cotton manufacturing hourly earnings are more than two and one-half times those of 1913. Working hours have been reduced 8 per cent., and wages by piece rates are almost two and one-third times what they were in 1913.

Compares Advances in Wages.

The figures I have quoted apply to workers in these industries, regardless of whether they are organized or unorganized. A study of wages in organized trades shows that in 1923 the average wage per hour was two and one-ninth times that in 1913 and two and one-third times that of 1907. Taking the entire body of union men, working hours have been reduced 4 per cent. as against 1913 and 8 per cent. as against 1907. But their weekly pay in 1923 was 99 per cent. higher than in 1913 and two and one-sixth times as high as in 1907. And let it be added, the figures show that average wages of organized workers in 1924 are higher than in 1923.

But increased wages, in terms of money, mean little if they are entirely absorbed by higher prices of the necessaries of life. In order to know whether an increase in the money wage is also an increase in the real wage, we must know how much the prices have advanced.

On that point, I find that the cost of living of the average family, for the same standard of living, has been falling since the high point was reached in 1920, and is now, in terms of money, only 60 per cent. above the level of 1913. That is, the increase in wages has far outrun the advance in the cost of living. Real wages, as determined by the things that money will buy, are higher today than ever before in our history.

A moment ago I said that the American workman is now not only better paid than he ever was before, but better paid than any other workman in the world. I think I can give one or two illustrations to show his advantage over wage earners of other countries.

Some very recent figures have made it possible to compare British and American wage earnings. They show that the average British cotton mill worker earned $7.85 per week in June this year, while the average American cotton mill worker earned $14.05. The British woolen mill operative earned $9.56 per week to the American $26.21. The British potter earned $8.34, compared to the American potter's $26.70.

But once more we must inquire about the comparative buying power of money in the two countries before we can be assured that the actual wages of the American are higher than those of the British wage earner.

It happens that the British Government has made a study of wages and living costs in 92 of the principal cities of several countries as of 1923. It was found that a bricklayer in Madrid receives a wage which buys only 50 per cent. as much as the London bricklayer can buy with his wage. The Vienna bricklayer's wage is whose purchasing power is 57 per cent. of that of the London bricklayer. The Berlin bricklayer's wage has 61 per cent. of the buying power of the London bricklayer, while the Paris bricklayer's wage will purchase 74 per cent. as much as will the wage of the London bricklayer.

Those figures show that the British workingman is easily the aristocrat of all Europe. He earns much higher wages, measured in buying power, than any workingman on the Continent. And yet this same British authority shows that the New York bricklayer earns a wage whose effective buying power is two and three-fourths times that of the London bricklayer.

In other trades and occupations the comparisons lead to similar conclusions. Wherever you turn, the statistics of wages and living costs show that the American is the most efficient, to find men in government positions who did not in their beginnings live by the work of their own hands. Of those who sit at the Cabinet table of the nation none was born to the purple, save only as all men were born to become American citizens, and nearly all in early life earned their living by actual manual labor.

The Secretary of Labor comes from union labor ranks. In each important national conference in which labor is interested labor has been represented. On several occasions under this Administration that has been the practice.

It was so at the conference on unemployment, on transportation, on agriculture, on the business cycle, on intermittent employment in construction industries and on the great Washington Conference for Limitation of Armament. The same policy prevails in the membership of many of our important commissions. The Chairman of the United States Shipping Board, one of the most important places of business administration in the Government, is filled by a man who was prominent in organized labor.

The St. Lawrence River, the Interstate Commerce and the United States Employes' Compensation Commissions, the Vocational Education and the Railway Labor Boards are examples of this policy and are results of the open door of opportunity. Those who have been identified with toil are now and will continue to be in important places of Government authority. The wage earners of America have been mixing their work with brains ever since the day of George Washington.

But the government of the United States is not for the gratification of the people who happen to hold office. It is established to promote the general welfare of all the people. That is the American ideal.

Says Labor Retains Its Gains.

No matter how many officeholders there may be, or what their origin, our institutions are a failure unless they serve all the citizens in their own homes. It is always necessary to find out what effect the institutions of government and society have on the wage earner in order to judge of the desirability of their continuation.

One of the outstanding features of the present day is that American wage earners are living better than at any other time in our history. They have not only retained, but actually increased, the gains they made during the war. The cost of living has been high, but the increase in wages has been greater. Compilations of the Department of Labor demonstrate that the wages of an hour or a day buy more now than it ever did before.

Not only are the American wage earners now receiving more money, and more of the things that money will buy, for their work, than any other wage earners in the world, but more than was ever before received by any community of wage earners. We have here in the United States not only the best-paid workers in the world, but the best-paid workers that ever lived in this world.

All this has been accomplished in spite of a general shortening of the hours of labor in the industries. The mines of the iron and steel and the building industry are particularly noticeable in this regard. As a direct result of President Harding's initiative, the iron and steel manufacturers were brought together and an agreement was reached under which the twelve-hour day and the seven-day week have been eliminated. Secretary Davis did the same with the board of directors.

Yet this has been done without any loss in wages. On the other hand, there has been actual gain. The Department of Labor statistics show that in 1924 the customary working time per week in blast furnaces has been reduced to 70 per cent. of the customary working time per week in 1912. But earnings per hour in 1924 are more than two and one-half times the earnings per hour in 1913. Despite the great reduction in hours, weekly earnings in this industry stand today 90 per cent. above weekly earnings of 1912.

In the open-hearth furnace department of the iron and steel industry working hours are only 56 per cent. of the working hours of 1913. But earnings per hour are more than two and two-thirds times the earnings per hour of 1913. Earnings per week are 68 per cent. above the weekly earnings of 1913. All other workers of the iron and steel industry have enjoyed large increases in earnings per hour and per week.

I know that figures are sometimes tiresome. But these I am quoting are so eloquent that I am sure you will pardon other illustrations. In the shoe industry regular working hours are now 11 per cent. lower than in 1913, hourly wages are two and one-seventh times those of 1913 and full-time weekly earnings are 92 per cent. above those of 1913.

In cotton manufacturing hourly earnings are more than two and one-half times those of 1913. Working hours have been reduced 8 per cent., and wages by piece rates are almost two and one-third times what they were in 1913.

Compares Advances in Wages.

The figures I have quoted apply to workers in these industries, regardless of whether they are organized or unorganized. A study of wages in organized trades shows that in 1923 the average wage per hour was two and one-ninth times that in 1913 and two and one-third times that of 1907. Taking the entire body of union men, working hours have been reduced 4 per cent. as against 1913 and 8 per cent. as against 1907. But their weekly pay in 1923 was 99 per cent. higher than in 1913 and two and one-sixth times as high as in 1907. And let it be added, the figures show that average wages of organized workers in 1924 are higher than in 1923.

But increased wages, in terms of money, mean little if they are entirely absorbed by higher prices of the necessaries of life. In order to know whether an increase in the money wage is also an increase in the real wage, we must know how much the prices have advanced.

WHEELER CONDEMNS BOTH OLD PARTIES

BOSTON, Sept. 1.—Proclaiming the arrival of a new political cleavage based on economic division, assailing by name his adversary candidates, and summoning the citizens of Massachusetts to what he declared was their hereditary tradition of innovating in national affairs, Senator Wheeler of Montana opened on Boston Common today his campaign as Vice Presidential candidate on the La Follette ticket.

Again and again in his main address Senator Wheeler criticised President Coolidge, whom he termed the "mythically strong, courageous, silent, watchful man who occupies the Presidential chair," and attacked satirically Charles G. Dawes, the Republican Vice Presidential nominee, for "his gallant service in war on organized labor," while he referred to John W. Davis, the Democratic candidate, as "a man who would be willing, it seems, to out-Coolidge Coolidge as a servant of Wall Street."

For himself, Senator Wheeler said, he would welcome a classification as radical to help the revolt against "living under the dictatorship of a small class that controls the financial resources of the country." He asserted that the only issue of the day was that of "returning the Government to the representatives of the people," for, he added, the two old parties, in everything but name, were alike in their subserviency to "control of a single dominant power of financial, industrial and commercial interests" centring in Wall Street.

Cites Corruption in Government.

For ammunition to support his attack, the Montana Senator depended much upon the record of the Senatorial committee which investigated the official conduct of former Attorney General Daugherty, most of which was brought out by himself as prosecutor. Corruption in government, which he said had been exposed, he treated as an inevitable result of "financial control."

Declaring that the Republican and Republican Democratic Parties have long since ceased to "represent distinct lines of economic thought and interest," the candidate continued:

"They have fallen under control of a single dominant power which uses them to further its own interests. Instead of a government of the people, by the people, for the people, we have a government of Wall Street, by Wall Street and for Wall Street. I use the term 'Wall Street' to designate the industrial and commercial interests centring in that crooked line in lower New York City.

"A chance presented itself this Summer to break this stranglehold which big business has obtained on Government, a chance for the nomination of a man by one or the other of the two parties who would place the common good above the will of Wall Street.

"This opportunity was not embraced, of course, by the representatives of the predatory class who met at Cleveland in June. They nominated Calvin Coolidge. We all hoped that the Democratic Convention would accept this open challenge to the people, but in this hope and this belief the subtle power of Wall Street was underestimated.

Assails Democratic Candidate.

"The Democratic Convention brought forth for its Presidential candidate a man who would out-Coolidge Coolidge as a servant of the people; a man who would be willing, it seems, to out-Coolidge Coolidge as a servant of Wall Street. Corrupt as the Republican Party is, controlled by big business as it is, even it would not have dared to go to the very heart of Wall Street and flaunt in the faces of the American people the attorney for Mr. Morgan and the Standard Oil Company.

"Now, the long-suffering people must listen to an aimless discussion as to which is the more reactionary, Coolidge or Davis. Between them there is, of course, no choice. Behind the curtains of both parties sit the financial autocrats and say:

"'Quarrel it out among yourselves—whichever side of you loses, we of Wall Street win.'

"Party government at this moment of our history is a myth. We are living under the dictatorship of a small class that controls the financial resources of the country.

"There is but one issue before the country today. It is: Shall the control of the Government be left in the hands of a small group that has cornered the national wealth and exploited the people? Or shall the control of the Government be returned to the representatives of the people, to be administered in the interest of the masses, to be so administered that the right of every man, woman and child to food and clothing and shelter and health and happiness is placed above property rights and the claims of profit?

Says Dawes Finds No Issue.

"'General Dawes (I use the title 'General' in memory of his gallant service as commander of the minute men in his war on organized labor) says the issue is conservatism vs. radicalism. He attempts to picture Coolidge and Dawes as representing conservatism and La Follette and Wheeler as representing radicalism.

"The General, blunt soldier that he is, finds no issue between his party and the Democratic Party and names none. He could tell the truth by explaining that behind the word conservatism there is hiding his business, representing less than 5 per cent. of our population, who want things to go on as they are and, if he could tell the truth, by further explaining that by radicalism is meant the desire for a change for the better on the part of the great mass of the people who produce the wealth of the nation, he would have you believe that all those who desire that the people, and not Wall Street, shall rule, are radicals. We will meet him on this day by day until it shall finally be settled at the polls next November by the people themselves. * * *

"'In all my studies of political history I cannot recall an Administration more venal, more corrupt, more destructive of the rights of the people than the Administration of the Republican Party during the last three and one-half years. We need not go beyond the records. There is Albert B. Fall, Edwin Denby and Harry M. Daugherty driven from the Cabinet by an outraged public sentiment.

"'I ask you, Mr. Coolidge, to explain to the people of your own State, if you can, why Fall and Forbes and Daugherty were allowed to go scot free?

"'As a matter of fact, the guilty are not being prosecuted and will not be prosecuted as long as the Daugherty spirit remains in control of the Department of Justice. Mr. Coolidge says the law will be enforced. Judging the future by the past, they also know that the law will not be enforced against those within the inner circle as long as the Republican machine controls the administration of justice. * * *

"'The time has come in the life of this nation when it is necessary to create a new party, because the patience of the people is worn out with the broken pledges of the two old parties—broken pledges that strew the political plains of this Republic as corpses strewed the battlefields of the Vosges.'"

BRITISH UNIONS CONVENE.

Moderate Views Prevail at Congress—London Agreement is Praised.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—The annual Trades Union Congress opened today at Hull. In some quarters diligent efforts had been made to paint the gathering in "red" colors, but so far as today's proceedings went there was little evidence of extremist views.

A. A. Purcell, M. P., presided. In his address he referred to the Dawes report, saying that all were hoping that as a result of the London Conference a way out of the present chaos had been found. As usual, it was the worker of the German working class, he said, who was making the supreme sacrifice.

Mr. Purcell said that British trade-unionism ought to insist that if reparations had to be paid, the burden should fall upon the exploiter and profiteer. They must insist, he said, that the eight-hour day should not be sacrificed in Germany, and in that spirit they tendered their greetings to German trade unionists.

Mr. Purcell declared that the political and diplomatic recognition of Russia by this country would do much for Russia and also help British labor.

He suggested that opposition to the projected treaty might decide the fate of the Government. In this connection it may be mentioned that in innermost political circles it is believed that the rock upon which Ramsay MacDonald and his colleagues are more likely to come to grief is the Irish boundary question.

GOV. BRYAN APPEALS FOR FARMERS' VOTES

Tells South Dakotans That the Republican Party Has Betrayed Their Trust.

HITS "SPECIAL PRIVILEGE"

ELK POINT, S. D., Sept. 1.—Governor Charles W. Bryan, Democratic nominee for Vice President, opened his party's Middle Western campaign here today with a spirited attack against the Republican Administration for corruption in office, a high tariff, and failure to provide relief to the farmer.

Speaking from the front porch of the farm home of Louis N. Crill, South Dakota Democratic Chairman, the Vice Presidential nominee addressed his Labor Day message to an audience made up chiefly of farmers and laboring elements of near-by points in this State, Nebraska and Iowa.

While he did not mention specific remedies for agriculturists, Governor Bryan urged his hearers and every farmer and wage-earner in the United States to obtain a copy of the Democratic platform and carefully read it. It contained, he said, "every practical remedy for the relief and encouragement of agriculture." The Democratic Party was a friend of labor, he said, adding that the word "labor," no longer applied only to shop and factory workers, but to those who work on the farm as well.

Governor Bryan declared the Republican Administration during the last four years had struck a blow to agriculture "that can only be remedied during the next four years by the election of a Democratic President and a Democratic Congress in November.

"A few Republican members of Congress from the Northwest who have been compelled to bolt the Republican Party because it 'betrayed the trust placed in that party by the farmers of the entire country,' the nominee asserted, were aligned with the Democrats during the last two years and assisted them in 'restoring equality before the law as it applied to the tax bill.'"

Calls for Progressive Support.

"If the Democratic Party as a whole * * * is progressive enough and honest enough to secure the votes of the progressive Republican Senators and Congressmen of the agricultural States of the Northwest, are not the farmers of the Northwest justified in supporting the Democratic national candidates who have been progressive in office and are now standing upon and are pledged to the most progressive Democratic platform that was ever written by a national political party?" Mr. Bryan asked.

The Democratic Party, he continued, was not a party represented by blocs, factions, sections or creeds, but one "standing on the broad Jeffersonian principle of equal rights to all and special privileges to none." Its representatives in Congress, he said, "have been furnishing the votes to every so-called bloc that wanted a square deal, and opposing every interest that has been seeking special privilege."

"Agriculture is not asking for alms," Mr. Bryan said. The farmers "are not seeking information as to how to farm," nor are they "suffering on account of their own extravagance or lack of thrift." What they want, he said, is "the handicaps and the hobbles which have been placed on them by the Republican Administration removed." They were seeking demands similar to those of labor—"a sufficient price for their products to enable them to live at American standards with a margin for old age."

Governor Bryan said that "almost every social, economic and financial reform that has been adopted by this nation had its origin in the agricultural classes, and they were its chief supporters."

"Our Republican opponents," he continued, "are now intimating that those residing in the great agricultural States are a dangerous element and that they are not standing on the Constitution. The common people, among whom are to be found the farmers and wage-earners, will give their answer in November."

Governor Bryan compared Democratic control of national affairs from 1912 to 1920 with the Republican Administration since that time, and declared that four years ago "special privilege" laid the foundation at the Republican National Convention "to plunder the country through Government favoritism, official privilege and Administrative incompetency."

Summing up, he asserted that while the "privilege-seeking class were reaping their reward for substantially supporting the Republican Party in the campaign four years ago, by securing indefensible high tariff rates, transferring a large percentage of their taxes to others to bear, deflating the currency, and compelling the farmers to pay their loans in larger bushels of wheat and corn than they borrowed, the politicians who demanded and secured some of the highest appointive offices in the gift of the Government were not overlooking their opportunity to join the Get Rich Quick Club!

"The nation has been humiliated," he continued, "and the world has been shocked at the dishonesty, the incompetency, the greed, the graft and the corruption that has been uncovered by Congress in connection with this Administration without any assistance or encouragement on the part of the Chief Executive."

For "Common Honesty."

Mentioning again the President and his running mate, Governor Bryan said:

"President Coolidge says that the issue in this campaign is common sense, and Mr. Dawes says that 'the Republican Party under the leadership of President Coolidge has taken its stand firmly upon the Constitution of the United States, and all know where it stands.'

"That great leader of the Democratic Party, that able lawyer and statesman who has had the ability to determine what is wrong at the present time and has had the courage to say so—John W. Davis—says that the issue in this campaign is 'common honesty,' and I want to add four more words and say that the issue is 'common honesty' and 'equality before the law.'

"Who constitutes the Republican Party, and are all of the leaders of the Republican Party standing on the Constitution with Mr. Coolidge and with Mr. Dawes?" he asked, and added: "Why indulge in generalities?"

Governor Bryan named those officials who were involved in the various scandals in Washington and continued:

"Are these high-up officials in the Republican Administration, who are still recognized as Republican leaders, some of them who took part as delegates in the recent Republican National Convention—are they standing on the Constitution with the Republican Party in this campaign?

"If so, we will request that the Republican leaders give us a modern definition of what the Constitution means, and whether they are standing on their own physical constitution or whether they refer to that great document that guarantees the individual his inalienable rights."

KEAN RAPS LA FOLLETTISM.

Jersey Candidate Says It Means Russian Conditions.

BUTLER, N. J., Sept. 1.—Speaking at a Labor Day meeting of the Patriotic Sons of America here tonight, Hamilton F. Kean, who will oppose United States Senator Walter Edge in the Republican primaries this Fall, referred to Senator La Follette as heading a "sinister movement" tending to halt progress by labor. He referred briefly to Senator Edge's labor record, which he called negligible, and came out in support of the Child Labor amendment.

"Inherently patriotic labor is called upon to rebuff a sinister movement by definitely and emphatically turning aside the overtures of La Follettism, a movement which if given headway will mean a drain on labor's patriotism. It is essentially a destructive doctrine," said Mr. Kean.

ADVISES KLAN ON VOTING.

Imperial Wizard Approves Either Davis or Coolidge.

PITTSBURGH, Aug. 31.—Members of the Ku Klux Klan can conscientiously support candidates of either of the two major parties in the present political campaign, H. W. Evans, Imperial Wizard of the organization, declared in a formal statement here tonight.

"There are in America," Mr. Evans said, "two great political parties—the Republican and Democratic parties. These two parties in solemn convention this year adopted platforms which provide a home in either party for the conscientious Klansmen thereof. These two parties provide a natural outlet for an expression of public opinion with regard to approving or disapproving the policy of the Administration in power."

LA FOLLETTE PARTY PLEADS FOR FUNDS

Statement Says There Is No Essential Difference Between Davis and Coolidge.

NEW PARTY HOLDS PROMISE

An appeal to the men and women workers of New York for funds and votes for the La Follette-Wheeler ticket was issued yesterday by Abraham Tuvin, director of the New York Labor Division of the third party. In its request for dollar contributions to offset the contributions to the two old parties "of vast sums from the owning class of America," the third party appeal stated that the former method is "much nearer true American democracy than $100,000 in bills conveyed in a black satchel by the son of an oil magnate." The appeal further states:

"The La Follette-Wheeler campaign is daily gaining in momentum. The two old parties, always certain of their hold on the voters, are becoming anxious. The old lethargy of the average voter is being displaced by active interest in campaign issues. The intelligent voter realizes that there is no difference between the Republican and Democratic Parties—they are the same in their vote-catching phrases and pre-election promises. The Republican Presidential candidate states with pride that his party represents 'practical' business; the Democratic nominee lists among his greatest achievements the clientele of J. P. Morgan & Co.

"The La Follette-Wheeler candidates stand in clean-cut opposition to the methods and purposes of the rival candidates. The lines are drawn. The issues are clear. Is the worker to continue supporting the old parties who have turned their backs to the earnest pleading for recognition of labor's official representatives and who, for decades, have exerted all their efforts on behalf of the rich and powerful to the detriment of the plain American citizen?"

"The American worker is in this campaign. He is determined to put it across. He sees in it the only solution to his problems. He must create the political machinery necessary to insure the benefits he derives from his organized industrial efforts. He sees in the La Follette-Wheeler candidacies an escape from the injunction Judge, and from the other Government agencies which seem to conspire to reduce the worker to a minimum subsistence.

"The campaigns of both old parties are supported by the contributions of vast sums from the owning class of America, with scarcely a powerful interest not represented by large contributions to either or both of the parties. This is recognized as a 'legitimate business investment.' Hence, every administration is virtually mortgaged over to the Dohenys and Sinclairs, as well as the more respectable Morgans, Garys and Lamonts.

"The La Follette-Wheeler candidacies hold great promise. Their administration would not be mortgaged. It would be free and clear for the service of the American people. They are not merely 'honest' or champions of 'common sense'—they are loyal servants of the people, symbols of a great awakening of millions of workers and toiling farmers of the land.

"Senator La Follette alone represents the best and finest in American political life. While he was battling for the rights of labor his opponents were either wantonly defeating the hopes of labor or building professional berths in the laps of Big Business."

Triplets Get Candidates' Names.

BENTON, Ill., Sept. 1.—Mr. and Mrs. Roy Lee of Benton announced they would name their newly-born boy triplets after the three Presidential candidates, namely, George La Follette, Thomas Coolidge and Ralph Davis. The smallest of the three weighed three and one-half pounds, while the other two tipped the scales at five pounds each.

"bombed" Fort Hamilton at 11 o'clock. A defense scout plane had been lost in the mist shortly before, an incident which post officers said indicated the futility of depending for defense on airplanes alone. The scout plane finally located Fort Hamilton and swooped to within 150 feet of the ground, dropping a message that the "enemy" was on the way. A few minutes before, the Sixty-second Coast Artillery, which had arrived early in the morning from Fort Totten, had sent four anti-aircraft gun trucks and eight machine-gun trucks to the field. When the "enemy" appeared from the south, at a height of 2,000 feet, a barrage of fire was sent up by both types of defending guns, the firing commencing when the planes were about three-quarters of a mile distant. The shells, of course, were blanks. No fire was returned by the squadron though, theoretically, it was throwing bombs. The squadron returned to the attack ten minutes later, this time from the north, plunging through another hail of defensive shots. The audience cheered the Coast Artillery units for their "defense."

Crowd Watches Troops Eat.

With music by the Sixty-second Coast Artillery Band, an artillery parade and a callisthenics demonstration followed. Rolling field kitchens appeared on the parade ground at noon and the crowd was invited to watch the feeding of troops in action and to inspect the guns that had been used in the defense. The speeches were followed by a polo game between the Fort Hamilton and Freeport teams. The evening was given over to dancing in the open air and a demonstration in which searchlights traced small free balloons.

In his speech Secretary of Labor Davis said:

"This Labor Day finds peace and prosperity predominant in American industry. The American worker and the American manager of industry are moving rapidly toward complete cooperation, toward that mutual good-will and mutual understanding which will ultimately insure permanent peace in industry.

"The prosperity of the men who works in the United States stands out in startling contrast to the conditions which surround the workers of other countries. Abroad the great powers, with the World War five and a half years behind them, are just beginning to emerge from economic chaos. Wages are almost at the starvation point in some of the industrial centres. Factories, mines and mills have been closed for years and unemployment has been the rule rather than the exception. It is only now that these nations, largely through the help of the United States, are preparing to restore themselves through work and production. America is the one bright spot in a world of economic gloom.

American Wages Maintained.

"Here we have succeeded in maintaining American wages practically at the peak attained during the war. In practically every industry the worker's pay envelope has shown no shrinkage. He is able to keep his dinner pail well supplied, and in most cases to have a little over for a rainy day in the building and loan association. There is little unemployment, and such as there is is due to seasonal causes or to local conditions. Throughout our whole economic system from top to bottom we see the evidences of prosperity.

"If the wages of the American workman had not been maintained at a high standard following the war, there can be no question but that the United States would have suffered industrial disaster. For the purchasing power of America lies in the pay envelopes of the 41,000,000 who are gainfully employed in this country. If we had impaired the purchasing power of the worker by general wage reductions we would have paved the way for a general slump in industry. We may be thankful that we took the opposite course and kept wages up.

"The American worker is not only earning wages from two to five times greater than the wages paid to workers in foreign countries, but the dollar which he earns has a purchasing power far exceeding the purchasing power of its equivalent abroad. Foreign currencies are generally depreciated, and the workers paid in these currencies find it difficult to maintain themselves. But our high standard of life, our great prosperity and our opportunities for happiness and contentment must not only be enjoyed, they must be maintained for the future.

Points Out Stumbling Block.

"We have taken many steps toward peace in industry, but we face one stumbling block. That is the jurisdictional dispute between workers. The jurisdictional dispute is a breeder of strikes must go. The spectacle of one group of workers striking against their fellows of another craft is a disgrace to our civilization. We must provide for the adjustment of these differences by conference around the council table.

"We must push forward to greater heights of prosperity, which can be reached only through work. Management and workers in industry in cooperation hold their own future in their own hands. They are entitled to the aid and encouragement of Government, but the ultimate responsibility rests with themselves. The axiom still stands that the least governed people is the best governed, and that is true as to industry. All of the legislation in the world will not put an end to the need for work. All of the laws on the statute books will not support an American family or buy an American meal. Where laws are needed experience shows us that they are enacted.

"The Federal Congress has passed and President Coolidge has approved a constitutional amendment authorizing Federal legislation to control the labor of children. It is now before the States for ratification, and I am confident that it will be ratified. It will enable us to take out of competition with the American adult worker about one million of our rising generation who ought to be in our schools, for in education lies our great hope for the future.

General Bullard's Address.

General Bullard said in his speech that in playing host to the workers he was, as a military man, in a unique role. But, he pointed out, the soldier represented the average of the people and did not differ from the laboring man.

"The army desires to understand labor and to be understood by labor," he declared. "The army desires to know your conditions, your thoughts and your feelings and to have you know ours. In order to try to get this better understanding between labor and the army in my command I have written all commanders of military posts in New York, New Jersey and Delaware directing them to show labor all consideration, and especially to invite them into the posts on Labor and picnic days. I chose picnic days especially because it's a fact that men learn to know each other and do come to a better understanding in a day of play than in a week of ordinary life.

"The purpose, the aim of the army and of army officers in all their duty, and especially when called in upon differences between labor and capital, has been just one thing—to cause both sides, all, to observe the law and the rights of others. If you will run over in your mind the few cases in which the army has been called out in these differences you will remember that the action of the army has upon mature consideration been accepted by and acceptable to labor. Intelligent labor indeed has the same purpose and wish as the army—the rights of all, the observance of law and order. These are things that should draw the army and labor more together.

Democracy of West Point.

"Again the demand of labor is the consideration of the man. This is the tendency of our times; this is democracy. Now West Point, which educates the army officer and furnishes the army its standard, is the most democratic institution in the world. Its cadets are taken from all over the country from every class in life and it places and holds them upon absolutely the same level from the moment they enter. This is democracy, your democracy, and West Point, I repeat, is the model and the standard of the United States Army.

"If the army officers don't labor with their own hands, it is because they are educated to be leaders and bosses. Now, you know you have your leaders and bosses in organized labor, too.

"In the World War you did a great part. The army can never forget it. We desire your confidence, to be close to you.

"In many, indeed almost all the other, countries of the world it is regarded as a dishonor for a man to work; but this country it is regarded as a dishonor if he doesn't work. This is the glory of our country, to hold labor in honor. I want you to know that the army is a part of this country and shares in our country's honor and respect and good-will to labor."

Congressman Loring M. Black Jr. stirred the audience to applause when he said:

"This is a day in America of organization. Some are not constructive, nor intelligent, nor patriotic. I believe I was the first man in public life to denounce the Ku Klux Klan. We don't believe a lot of good sheets should be spoiled to hide a lot of no-good cowards."

Lieut. Col. Clarence B. Ross of the Coast Artillery said of Defense Day: "It is not a mobilization but a rehearsal, at which every man and woman can find the best place where he or she can render service if an emergency comes." Representing Governor Smith, Bernard L. Shientag, State Commissioner of Labor, asked support of the audience for the State's proposed bond issue of $15,000,000 for public parks and recreation places. The invocation was by Msgr. Francis P. O'Hara, and benediction by the Rev. John M. Moore, President of the Federated Churches of Brooklyn.

15,000,000 FOLDERS SENT TO VOTERS

A NON-PARTISAN MOVE

Their Slogan Is to Vote No Matter How It Is That You Vote.

Beginning its campaign today in every State in the Union to make the vote this year the greatest in the history of the country, the National Association of Manufacturers announced yesterday that its slogan would be "Vote Nov. 4. Vote as You Please, but Vote." It is a non-partisan movement. More than 3,000 individuals and organizations of all kinds have been supplied with more than 15,000,000 pieces of material for the opening of the drive, which will be under the direction of John H. Edgerton, President of the association. Mr. Edgerton said yesterday:

"Twenty-seven million people stayed away from the polls in 1920. Twenty-six million people—a minority of all the voters—elected a President in 1920.

"You ask if the ballot is any of your business.

"Do you know that the period of greatest increase in governmental expenses and taxes—is identical with the period of greatest increase in ballot stickers that we have known in all American history?

"Wide commendation has been expressed of the forcefulness, simplicity and attractiveness of the material that is being sent out in the manufacturers' campaign. The literature is divided into two effective classes—a red, white and blue sticker, which reads:

"'Vote Nov. 4—Vote as You Please. But—VOTE!'

"And a small folder, which proclaims a meeting of the stockholders of the United States of America—and every single citizen of the country is a stockholder—every eligible voter a preferred stockholder. This folder, in 300 words, preaches a straightforward sermon, which tells in its very first four lines an impressive story of the indifference of the eligible voters in the administration of their national business affairs.

"National organizations are joining the manufacturers' campaign day by day, and up to the present the following have enlisted their full support with the association:

"The Motion Picture Producers and Distributors of America, Will H. Hays, President. Mr. Hays has approved the campaign with fullest enthusiasm, because he has been personally interested in just such work for about ten years.

"The American Radio Association, which urges every member of its organization to go to the polls and pound the necessity home wherever possible.

"The Boy Scouts of America, which through its 480 different Scout leaders throughout the country will distribute approximately a million copies of the stickers and folders, making house-to-house distribution in many parts of the country.

"American Bankers' Association.
"Grand Lodge, Order of Elks.
"Knights of Columbus.
"Grand Lodge, Order of Masons.
"National Automobile Chamber of Commerce.
"International Rotary Club.
"Kiwanis.
"Lions.
"National Jewish Welfare Board.
"National Association of Credit Men.
"National Housewives League.

"Others have tentatively promised to enter into the campaign and will take official action this month."

EAST SIDE GUNMAN SHOOTS CHAUFFEUR

Frank Bishop, 32 years old, a taxicab driver, of 522 East Houston Street, was shot and seriously wounded last night by one of a gang of young men standing in front of 150 Monroe Street. The shooting, according to stories told to Detective Sergeants Julius Cohen and Jesse Joseph of the Clinton Street Station, was the act of a youth who resented the chauffeur's demand for an explanation why one of his companions had sent a piece of wood crashing through the windshield of the taxicab when his two passengers were about to alight.

Bishop, in the operating room at Gouverneur Hospital, told the police that about an hour before four young men and two girls hired him to take them to their homes on the lower east side, when he was standing with his machine at Surf Avenue and Twenty-first Street, Coney Island. Bishop's first stop was in front of the home of Miss Esther Seigel at the Monroe Street address. As the girl and Meyer Ehrlich of 142 East Fourth Street were getting out of the cab, the piece of wood was hurled through the windshield.

Bishop walked over to the young men who apparently were responsible and one of them said: "Well, what are you going to make of it?"

Bishop said that he was about to call a policeman, whereupon the spokesman whipped a pistol from his hip pocket and fired five shots at the chauffeur, two of which passed through his abdomen and right hip. The third went wild and the other two pierced the coat of Ehrlich.

Policeman Rabbitt heard the shots, but before he reached the wounded chauffeur the gunman and his confederates had disappeared into neighboring tenements.

CLOTHES CAN BE AS INTERESTING AS BASEBALL

If your experience with boys has been as unfortunate as that of many parents, you dread the time which is at hand for buying Fall school clothes. There is no need for misgivings.

In Best's Boys' Department we know what boys require of their clothes; we know how boys should be treated (as we should, for we've been dealing with them since grandfather was a boy); we know how to make the business of acquiring clothes an interesting pastime.

And we know—as you will know, when you have brought your boys to us—that everything we sell is built to resist the wear that only boys can give.

REFUSAL BY HUGHES IS SENT TO GENEVA

By EDWIN L. JAMES.

Mr. MacDonald is personally opposed to the use of force and does not believe in giving promises to use it. He believes moral suasion will protect nations; the French do not.

In view of the American Administration's desire to call a disarmament conference, it is interesting to note here evidence that the solution of the land disarmament of Europe depends upon two forces, with neither of which Washington is in touch. Russia constitutes the greatest source of fear of attack by European nations, whereas the League gives the greatest promise of some form of protection. Since Washington does not speak to Russia and does not work with the League, the conference in disarmament proposed by Washington seems pretty much at the mercy of circumstances over which Washington has no control.

Hymans on "Moral Disarmament."

In a particularly brilliant oratorical effort M. Hymans reviewed the history of the League since as President of the first Assembly he had sat on the same rostrum. He said that whereas then the League was an experiment and its future uncertain, now it met with machine-like regularity and represented something without which the world would be worse off. This period of organization, he said, could now be considered finished, and the time for accomplishment had come.

Then he reviewed the preparation of the treaty of mutual guarantees, which has had hard sledding.

"Moral disarmament," he said, "is an essential condition of material disarmament, and a condition that be obtained only in an atmosphere of security. The London conference has settled the reparation question, but another problem remains—a very serious problem for those countries which suffered most heavily from the war and which feel themselves in the weakest position in the event of a future attack. This is the problem of security. Europe cannot continue to live in a state of uncertainty. Peace and security must be durably established. At this moment all eyes turn toward the League of Nations in the hope that it will find a solution.

"Premiers MacDonald and Herriot will soon be here among us. The presence of so many eminent statesmen, the presence of the heads of some of the greatest nations in the world, bear witness to the growing importance of the League of Nations, the confidence with which it is regarded and the immensity of its task."

M. Hymans declared that the war spirit still remained in many corners of the world, and that it was the task of the League to prevent the danger of a repetition of a world struggle.

Motta Praises League's Work.

In his speech of acceptance Dr. Motta praised the work of the League, but said much remained to be done in reaching a solution of war problems "satisfactory both from the point of view of victors and vanquished." Turning to the disarmament issue, he said:

"Allow me to greet with deeply felt emotion the new development which the London conference recently gave the principle of compulsory arbitration. Upon this principle must depend the solution of the question of military disarmament."

When Dr. Motta remarked on the great number of visitors "from quarters which had been so opposed to the League," it is believed he referred to the United States.

Tomorrow the Assembly will organize committees. Premiers Herriot and MacDonald are expected to address it on Thursday.

Opens Before a Crowded House.

GENEVA, Sept. 1 (Associated Press).—The fifth assembly of the League of Nations was opened by the Temporary Chairman, M. Hymans of Belgium, at 11:15 this morning before an audience which filled every available bit of space in the Hall of the Reformation.

Women predominated in the public galleries. The American visitors sat together in the second row of the first balcony fronting upon the speaker's rostrum. Ex-Justice John H. Clarke of the United States Supreme Court; George W. Wickersham, former Attorney General, and Representative Theodore E. Burton were among those present. The Americans sat just behind a Japanese group which included Mme. Adachi, wife of the second Japanese delegate.

M. Hymans, in the President's chair, was flanked on his right by the official interpreter, M. Cameriynck, who served at the Washington conference, and on the left by Sir Eric Drummond, Secretary General of the League.

M. Hymans in his address plunged immediately into the achievements of the League and laid emphasis on the creation of the Permanent Court of International Justice as one of the finest accomplishments of mankind.

He touched briefly upon the more important results of the League's activities over a wide range of subjects, judicial, political, humanitarian and others, making special mention of the achievement of Norman H. Davis in settling the Memel dispute and the good work of Jeremiah T. Smith as the League Commissioner in Hungary.

Terms of Hughes's Refusal.

Hugh Gibson, American Minister to Switzerland, in a letter addressed to Sir Eric Drummond, Secretary General of the League, made public today, said that the American Secretary of State desired him to express his Government's cordial appreciation of the courtesy shown by the Council in extending the invitation to send a representative to the Disarmament Commission of the League Assembly. Continuing, the letter said:

"The Government of the United States has been happy to be represented at the meetings of the temporary mixed commission and its sub-committee. Its views have been fully explained on these occasions and it is felt that they could not usefully be amplified by having a representative present at meetings of the third committee.

"It observes from the invitation that the third committee will discuss this matter with the view of considering whether a draft convention affords sufficient basis to convoke in international conference for the purpose of adopting such convention as has been contemplated.

"The Government of the United States, as is well known, is in cordial sympathy with the efforts suitably to restrict traffic in arms and munitions of war, and it will be glad to cooperate in the formulation of a plan which would warrant the belief that the necessary legislation could be obtained to give it effect.

"To this end the United States would be disposed to give favorable consideration to an invitation to participate in an appropriate international conference of the Powers for the purpose of negotiating and concluding such a convention."

RAIL MERGER TERMS GO TO STOCKHOLDERS

FIRST OFFICIAL STATEMENT

NEW SHARES TO PAY 6%

Proposed Nickel Plate System Will Include 15,000 Miles of Trackage —Rivals Trunk Lines.

O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen, unknown to the railroad world ten years ago, issued their formal proposal yesterday for a new Nickel Plate Railroad system, with 9,145 miles of main track, with a total trackage of more than 15,000 miles, and with assets of $1,406,763,792. At the same time they made public the deposit agreement under which stockholders of all the railroads concerned are invited to deposit their holdings.

For years the Van Sweringens have been considering this plan and purchasing stock in the open market in anticipation of this announcement; for months the financial district and the railroad community have been aware of the coming announcement; but the official proposal just received by the stockholders is the first word on the subject that has been given out by the Van Sweringens.

The one-time newsboys, who are still under 45 years of age, have conceived and carried far toward completion a railroad system that will rival the Pennsylvania, the New York Central or the Baltimore & Ohio in the territory served, in the outlets to the Atlantic seaboard, in mileage and in capital assets. A special table of earnings which has been included in the proposal also indicates that the earnings will compare favorably with some of these older and more established systems.

In their proposal the Van Sweringens state that they seek to acquire for the new company control of the New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad Company (the present Nickel Plate), the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Company, the Hocking Valley Railway Company, the Erie Railroad Company and the Pere Marquette Railway Company. To do this they will use leases for 999 years and the acquisition of a majority of the common stock of the respective companies.

Just how well they are on their way to success in this undertaking is shown by the fact that the directors of the respective companies interested have already unanimously approved the plan. Today letters by the Presidents of the respective railroads will be forwarded to the stockholders urging them to join with the Van Sweringens in the plan.

Committee in Charge.

The committee which represents the stockholders and which will carry the plan into effect includes representatives of all of the various railroads. The members are J. J. Bernet, President of the New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad Company; W. J. Harahan, President of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Company and of the Hocking Valley Railway Company; W. L. Ross, President of the Detroit & Toledo Shore Line Railroad Company; F. D. Underwood, President of the Erie Railroad Company, and E. N. Brown, Chairman of the Board of the Pere Marquette Railway Company, and O. P. Van Sweringen and M. J. Van Sweringen.

The deposit agreement which accompanies the proposal and requests the stockholders to turn in their stocks to the committee in charge of the new unified system, reveals the strength of the banking interests behind the new consolidation. J. P. Morgan & Co. will be the depositary, while deposits of stock can be made also with the Continental and Commercial Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, the Union Trust Company of Cleveland and the Old Colony Trust Company of Boston.

Registrars of the certificates of deposit in the various cities are headed by the First National Bank of the City of New York and include the Guardian Savings and Trust Company of Cleveland, the First Trust and Savings Bank of Chicago, and the National Shawmut Bank of Boston. For the convenience of European holders, Morgan, Grenfell & Co. of London will receive deposits of share certificates.

Advantages of New System.

In pointing out the advantages of the new system compared with the group of railroads that now work independently, O. P. and M. J. Van Sweringen said:

"When the entire plan becomes effective the new company will operate directly or through subsidiaries, approximately 9,145 miles of road, including leased and controlled lines. Its main lines will extend from the ports of New York and Newport News to connections with the principal Western, Northwestern and Southwestern roads at the gateways, Chicago, Peoria and St. Louis; also to the gateways of Louisville, Cincinnati and Indianapolis. Its lines will reach such important cities as Rochester, Buffalo, Erie, Cleveland, Sandusky, Toledo, Columbus and Fort Wayne, and serve industrial Michigan through the Toledo and Detroit gateways. It will serve the great Mahoning Valley steel district, particularly the mills and plants at Sharon and Youngstown; also the rubber industry at Akron and vicinity. It will serve the extensive bituminous and anthracite coal fields of northern Pennsylvania and the bituminous fields of Ohio, West Virginia and Kentucky and afford outlets from them to tide-water, to the Great Lakes and to the North and West. It will afford to the industrial territory of the Great Lakes continuous transportation over originating rails to and from the points named."

The terms for the exchange of stock under the proposal are exactly those issued semi-officially through J. P. Morgan & Co. several weeks ago. Relative to the exchange of shares the official announcement said:

"The new company, upon acquiring their shares, will issue to stockholders the shares upon the following bases:

	New Company Pref.	New Company Com.

	New Company Pref.	New Company Com.

	New Company Pref.	New Company Com.

"It is planned that no shares of the new company will be issued for stock of the Hocking Valley Railway Company owned by the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Company.

Holdings of Convertible Bonds.

"Holders of bonds of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Company and of Erie Railroad Company, convertible into shares of such companies, respectively, may, during the period of their conversion right, exchange their bonds for the same number and kind of shares of the new company to which they would be entitled in accordance with the foregoing bases of exchange if they had first converted their bonds into shares of such present companies.

"Stockholders of the New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad Company will not receive new company shares, but the New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad Company will receive preferred and common shares of the new company equal to the number of preferred and common shares respectively of the New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad Company outstanding, in addition to shares to be received by it at the above rates for stock of the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Company and Pere Marquette Railway Company owned by it. Outstanding stock includes stock to be issued to and retained by stockholders of constituent companies upon exchanges under the agreement and articles of consolidation of the New York, Chicago & St. Louis Railroad Company, dated Dec. 28, 1922, but does not include stock of that company held in its treasury."

Provision is made for the outstanding convertible bonds of the present system. Common and preferred stocks to the amount of $23,267,133 each are provided to care for the Chesapeake & Ohio Railway Company gold 5 per cent. bonds, which are convertible into common stock of the Chesapeake & Ohio at 90 to April 1, 1926, and at par thereafter to April 1, 1936. The total amount of these bonds outstanding is $38,073,500. Common stock of the new company totaling $15,702,400 is reserved to provide for the Erie Railroad Company convertible fifty-year gold 4 per cent. series D convertible into Erie common stock at 50 to Oct. 1, 1927.

Dividends to Be 6 Per Cent.

In their announcement the Van Sweringens state that the preferred stock of the new company will be entitled to cumulative dividends at the rate of 6 per cent. per annum. "It is expected to initiate dividends on its common stock at the rate of $6 a share per annum," they add.

The agreement under which the stockholders of the respective companies are asked to deposit their stock authorizes the committee representing the stockholders to set the time limit for such deposits; to make minor alterations in the plan to meet any change required by the Interstate Commerce Commission; to abandon the plan so far as any one railroad is concerned, and to make an investigation concerning the financial condition, accounts, business and affairs of the respective companies.

Through the lease whereby the new company is to obtain control of the different railroads in the unified plan, the new company will receive the entire gross income from all leased properties subject to the provisions of the leases. It will at the same time pay all expenses, provide for refunding of outstanding bonds and maintain, operate and develop the leased properties.

BERLIN MAKES FIRST PAYMENT TO ALLIES

of the German laws necessary to the operation of the experts' plan within the terms approved by the Reparation Commission, as well as the entry into his functions of the General Agent for Reparation Payments.

An official spokesman for the French Foreign Office characterized the commission's action as "another great step toward the settlement of the reparation question."

Active negotiations between the German Government and bankers of New York and London for the loan of 800,000,000 gold marks provided for under the Dawes plan are being deferred. They will not be started, it is understood, until will not be started, it is understood, until favorable atmosphere is created by Germany's prompt payment of the sums agreed upon for the transitory period, and the economic and military evacuation of the Ruhr by the French and Belgians has made considerable progress.

President Schacht of the Reichsbank and Dr. Luther, the Finance Minister, who are likely to be the German Government's representatives in dealing with the bankers, have not yet been formally apointed. When they are designated they will meet the American and English bankers in London to fix the terms of the loan, which up to the present have been discused only within vague limits during the sessions of the London conference.

Eight Per Cent. Interest Likely.

It is expected the duration of the loan will be somewhere between five and twenty years, and an 8 per cent. interest rate seems to be considered about right.

Dr. Schacht, during informal talks he had in London with bankers there, is understood at first to have said that 8 per cent. seemed to him a high rate, considering the easy money rates in New York and London and the high quotations in New York on numerous other European issues.

The reply was made that other things should be taken into account in addition to the present ruling rate of interest. It was of the highest importance, he was told, that if conditions in the market should change or if anything which looked adverse in a political sense in Europe should develop, these German bonds should not fall below their issue price.

The future of German credit would be greatly influenced by this first issue, it was pointed out. If it fell below par soon after issuance for any reasons whatsoever, the effect would be detrimental upon all subsequent issues. It would be a good thing, it was suggested, to allow those who absorbed this loan to make some money out of it as a good preparation for the future.

Dr. Schacht is described as conceding that there was much to be said for this view, but that in any event Germany had to have the loan, as otherwise the whole Dawes plan would fail.

The German Government has officially advised France that Major Gen. von Pawels has been appointed to represent Germany with the Interallied Military Control Mission, replacing Lieut. Gen. Strempel, who has been relieved of his duties. Chancellor Marx had informed Premiers Herriot and MacDonald during the London conference that Strempel would be replaced.

Herr Luther Discusses the Loan.

By T. R. YBARRA.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

BERLIN, Sept. 1.—The fact that an American will henceforth be on the Reparation Commission means the substitution of a general viewpoint for the narrow viewpoint engendered by quarrels between neighbors, in the opinion of Finance Minister Luther, who expressed it today in a long conversation with American newspaper representatives.

He stressed the importance of the psychological factor and told the Americans gathered at the Finance Ministry that the success of the loan depended largely on the attitude of the American press. Therefore, he said, it behooved the American newspaper men in Germany to keep in touch with him on any questions arising during the period of placing the loan.

"'No loan, no Dawes plan' was what was said at London," went on, "and I repeat it now. If Germany does not obtain the loan the entire Dawes plan will fall through."

He refused to enter into technical details about the loan, declaring these rested entirely with the Reichsbank and not got beyond the preliminary stages. He also refused to give any idea as to the interest rate, remarking:

He informed his visitors that Germany had made the first payment today of 20,000,000 gold marks on account of reparations under the London compact, this sum having been charged to the loan which she hoped to obtain under the Dawes plan and to amounts due her from France and Belgium on account of their administration of the Ruhr railroads.

Discussing the general outlook for Germany, Minister Luther said:

"The healthiest aspect of the whole Dawes plan is that it can be adapted to meet German conditions. There is nothing rigid about it."

When asked whether he believed that German competition against other countries might become overwhelming as a result of Germany's development under the Dawes plan, the Minister replied:

"I do not believe it probable that German competition can reach alarming proportions. Even under the prosperous pre-war conditions it was not such as to overwhelm other countries, and it is scarcely probable now that it can reach anything like the pre-war conditions, Germany having lost her colonies and the ore fields of Lorraine and large portions of her pre-war territory."

Herr Luther told the newspaper men that he had had a most interesting talk a few days ago with James Speyer, the New York banker, but denied that there had been any concrete negotiations with Mr. Speyer regarding the German loan.

He summed up his general view of the European situation as a result of the London agreement as follows:

"No longer will that which hurts one nation be considered helpful to another nation. The time has come when what is advantageous for one will be considered advantageous for all."

London Speculates on Loan's Terms.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—There is much speculation in London business circles as to the terms of the $200,000,000 loan which Germany proposes to raise under the Dawes plan, but statements as to terms and the amounts which will be allotted to the different monetary centres are regarded as premature.

No time will be lost in arranging for the loan to be floated at the earliest suitable moment, but the market here, financial authorities say, would scarcely be ready for an operation of such magnitude and importance until next month.

As an effort in European reconstruction the German loan is held to transcend in importance all other issues of a similar character and on that account alone is attracting much more general attention than either the Austrian or Hungarian loan. For political reasons it might have been necessary to promise an international guarantee of the loan in order to insure the success of the London conference, but agreement having been reached without such being necessary, it is held here that it would be very undesirable for the interested Powers now to guarantee the loan.

The security itself is regarded as ample. Germany has virtually no debt other than reparations, and the loan will represent a first charge on Germany's assets. Besides, it is argued, to guarantee the loan would seem to indicate that Germany's credit had not been restored and would discourage, therefore, the granting of private credits upon which, in the long run, the reconstruction of Germany, the establishment of sound currency and the payment of reparations depend.

WOULD TEAR UP COMPACT.

BERLIN, Sept. 1.—The acceptance by Germany of the London compact was bitterly assailed today at a big meeting of the Pan-German League at Stuttgart, which adopted a resolution exhorting all Germans to fight to the utmost against those responsible for this "disgrace."

The resolution informs foreign countries that Voelkisch Germans—that is, Germans belonging to the party of the extreme Right, which is the most reactionary of all the German parties—do not consider themselves bound by the agreements, "which impose impossible conditions, and are therefore immoral."

"The day will come," continued the Pan-German manifesto, "when the entire German nation will tear up this fatal London compact."

Unveil Tannenberg Monument.

ALLENSTEIN, East Prussia, Sept. 1.—The tenth anniversary of the battle of Tannenberg was observed today by 20,000 German veterans in the presence of Field Marshal von Hindenburg who led the army in the German victory, General Ludendorff and Field Marshal von Mackensen. The Government was represented by Major Gen. von Seeckt, Commander-in-Chief of the Reichswehr. The unveiling of a monument as a memorial of the battle was the chief feature of the ceremonies.

Think of it! One of those fascinating little houses in Paris, which number among their clientele many of the smartest women in the great French capital, created these stunning new coats especially for us. They are the types of coats that are the choice of the Parisienne herself, because they so perfectly express the new feeling of the mode in their lines—slender, to be sure—and details.

The material is a wool velours of an exquisitely soft texture, and the coats are all lavishly trimmed with lapin.

SCARFS

From the Master Weaver of Paris

M. RODIER

The evolution of the scarf has been one of the most interesting fashions of the past few seasons. First the square 'kerchief, introduced at Deauville, which met with tremendous success on both sides of the Atlantic. Then the long scarf of plain and printed silks and crepes that Paris wore, and is still wearing, with all types of costumes from the tailleur to the evening gown.

M. Rodier has gone a step farther and created stunning large scarfs that are almost shawls, and that can be worn very smartly to complete the afternoon and evening ensemble.

Lovely silks and crepes, in fascinating new weaves, beautifully hand-blocked in exquisite soft tones or in ingeniously blended combinations of brilliant colorings. $50 to $65.

Costume Slips

For wear with the Tunic Blouse

The chic Parisienne is wearing the tunic blouse, or casaque, as she calls it, not only with her tailleur, but she achieves very effective ensembles by wearing it with simple, slim-fitting costume slips of soft silks.

The Petticoat Shop has carefully assembled a collection of the correct types of costume slips for wear with the tunic blouse. Painstakingly made with the perfectly flat back and front, and with just a suggestion of fullness over the hips. Of course, they are shadow-proof.

6,990 ARRIVE HERE ON ELEVEN VESSELS

VISAS ANNOY SOL BLOOM

Declares Foreigners Retaliate on Americans for Charges Here—Will Fight to Cut Cost.

Of 6,990 passengers who arrived yesterday on eleven steamships, 2,127 came from Southampton and Cherbourg on the Leviathan.

Among them was Congressman Fred. R. Lehlbach of New Jersey, Acting Chairman of the Select Committee to investigate the activities of the United States Shipping Board and the United States Emergency Fleet Corporation. He was optimistic over the outlook for the American merchant marine, and said it would remain on the seven seas no matter what happens.

"I am desirous," the Congressman added, "of seeing the transportation of passengers and freight overseas done wholly by private enterprise, but until conditions permit this transportation should be aided by the Government. There will be shipping economies and mergers, but nothing substantially curtailing or abandoning the present Shipping Board program. There may be consolidations of trade routes, but no crippling of the merchant marine because of such consolidations."

Asked if such consolidations had anything to do with the proposed merger of the Black Diamond and Cosmopolitan Steamship companies, he replied that the question of the merger was one for the Shipping Board to take up. He hoped the board would do nothing until the committee made its report to Congress.

Bloom Complains of Visas.

Congressman Sol Bloom of New York and family returned from a trip through England, France, Germany, Austria, Hungary, Belgium and Czechoslovakia. The enjoyment, he said, was marred by the passport visas.

"The fault of the passport system in Europe," said Congressman Bloom, "is chiefly due to Washington. We are charging foreigners $10 for a visa, besides the $8 head tax, and foreign Governments retaliate on Americans when they go abroad. If the American visa is reduced to $1 the European countries will follow suit. There is also the war tax of $5, which every one has to pay on leaving the United States by sea for a foreign country, and the war has been ended six years. There is no excuse for these taxes. I am going to take the matter up, first with the State Department, and if nothing is done then I will bring it before Congress."

Fanny Hurst, the author, who returned with her husband, J. F. Danielson, also complained about the passport visas.

Bishop Dunn Received by Pope.

Another passenger was Bishop John J. Dunn of this city, who was received by the Pope. The Holy Father, he said, was cordial and greatly interested in America and told the Bishop how much Cardinal Hayes was liked in Rome.

Colonel Michael Friedsam, President of B. Altman & Co., returned from a vacation of two months in Germany, France and Switzerland. In Paris he was decorated with the Legion of Honor for his work during the war. He believed that the Dawes plan would cause an improvement in Europe in time. Business in France was better than in England, he said.

The Marquesa de Majera, said to be a distant relative of King Alfonso XIII. of Spain, arrived on the Leviathan, suffering from pneumonia. She is making her first visit to the United States. While at sea last Wednesday, she caught a severe cold, which developed into pneumonia. An ambulance took her from the pier to the New York Hospital. Nurses had been engaged by friends, who were at the pier to meet her.

The Rev. Charles S. MacFarland returned from a visit to France and Belgium to attend the meetings of the Huguenot Walloon Commission, of which he is Chairman. The people in those countries believe they cannot solve their problems without America, he said.

Denied Bail in an Auto Death.

John Charmack of 4,011 Seventeenth Street, Brooklyn, was held without bail when he pleaded not guilty to a charge of manslaughter before Magistrate O'Neill. He was arrested Sunday night by Patrolman George Nadler, who alleged Charmack was the driver of an automobile which killed Helen Rodziewis, 9 years old, of 357 Sixteenth Street, in Prospect Park West, near Windsor Place. Patrolman Nadler said Charmack was driving recklessly.

ZAGHLUL CALLS OFF VISIT TO MACDONALD

Has Waited Vainly in Paris for Invitation to Discuss Sudan Question.

BRITISH WARN EGYPTIANS

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ALEXANDRIA, Sept. 1.—From quarters in close contact with Egyptian official circles it is learned that Zaghlul Pasha has telegraphed to the Cabinet that he purposes owing to recent events to renounce his contemplated conversations with the British Prime Minister.

In the same quarters there is some speculation as to whether and when, if he has no meeting with Mr. MacDonald, Zaghlul Pasha will return to Egypt.

Leave of Officials Canceled.

The Sudan Government has canceled all leaves and most of the officials now in Europe have been recalled. Wasey Sterry, Acting Governor General of the Sudan, has sent a notification to the provincial Governors, of which the following is a summary:

He regrets to see continued want of discipline and grave dereliction of duty among certain officials, especially in the younger and lowest grades. Not only are they neglecting the work for which the country pays, he says, but they are breaking the regulations in communicating to newspapers, stirring up discontent, intriguing against the Anglo-Egyptian Government's established law, fomenting public disorder, trying to stir up enmity between different classes of the community and by their action increasing the costs of government which have to be paid by the taxpayers of the country.

The first duty of all governments, he continues, is to preserve order. It is the Government's right, therefore, to have the assistance of all its servants in the preservation of order. Instead there has been in the last few weeks the "disgraceful spectacle of officials organizing, encouraging and participating in demonstrations and riots."

The Governor General most solemly warns the offenders in their own interest and in that of the country that these things must cease and he calls on all officials, "especially those of standing and sense," not merely to disapprove but actively to discourage "these foolish and unpatriotic acts."

News Confirmed in London.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—Inquiries here confirm the Egyptian report that the proposal for personal negotiations between Prime Minister MacDonald and Zaghlul Pasha on the subject of the Sudan has fallen through.

Zaghlul has spent the last month in Paris waiting for an invitation from the British Prime Minister to come to London. The invitation has not been sent and the Prime Minister's engagements preclude any such invitation being sent in the near future.

Meanwhile the last British note, which it is understood repeats the British Government's determination to maintain the occupation of the Sudan unchanged, has destroyed Egyptian hopes that negotiations might alter the British policy. The campaign of riotous agitation may therefore go on. The British authorities in the Sudan are preparing for it by recalling British officials from leave and issuing a warning to Egyptian officials against taking part in any agitation.

Freeport Starts New Firehouse.

GOVERNMENT WILL USE EIFFEL TOWER RADIO

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 1.—The golden voice of Eiffel Tower, which for several years has been so eargerly listened for by French radio fans, today was silenced. Pleasure must bow to stern necessity, and opera give way to truth. Instead of amusing the quarter of a million French wireless enthusiasts the tower must enlighten the world to the real facts of France's cause. The radio apparatus thus henceforward will be France's official disseminator of propaganda.

Some Frenchmen speak of it as "the official spoken journal." It will not be used for this purpose every day, but will be reserved for such a program. For several years the tower has been the most important broadcasting station in France, and perhaps has done more with its expellent daily programs to popularize radio than any amount of advertising could have accomplished. But from now on its voice will be directed beyond the frontiers of France, with its official messages from the French Government to the nations and the peoples of the world.

Youth Held for Homicide.

Abraham Shebovsky, 17 years old, 307 Dumont Avenue, Brooklyn, was held in the Brownsville Station last night on a charge of homicide, in connection with the stabbing to death last Friday of Louis Zangwill, 16 years old, of 881 Osborne Street, Brooklyn. Shebovsky told the police that while he and his brother had been talking to some girls in the street near their home last Friday night, a group of boys, including Zangwill, passed and made remarks about the girls. An altercation ensued and Zangwill was killed.

Seipel Asks Amnesty for Assailant.

VIENNA, Sept. 1.—Dr. Ignaz Seipel, Chancellor of Austria, who was shot and seriously wounded by Karl Jaworek, a young factory worker, last June, has asked President Hainisch to include the would-be assassin in the amnesty declaration which the President intends to issue for a certain class of criminals. Proceedings against young Jaworek probably will be quashed. The Chancellor was moved to ask mercy for his assailant because of thankfulness at escaping death.

MAY ASK PRESIDENT TO ACT IN FIRPO CASE

DISSATISFIED WITH INQUIRY

Women Here Start Move to Have Men Boycott Argentine's Fight With Wills.

President Coolidge may be asked to act in the deportation proceedings started against Luis Angel Firpo, heavyweight boxer from Argentina, by Canon William Sheafe Chase and associates, according to Bernard H. Sandler, attorney, who made a trip to Washington last night in response to two urgent telegrams from Canon Chase. Before departing Mr. Sandler said:

"We are not at all satisfied with the investigation that Henry H. Curran, Commissioner of Immigration, has announced he is making. Canon Chase and I are going to seek another interview with James J. Davis, Secretary of Labor. The Firpo case will be taken to the President, if necessary, but I don't think it will be necessary.

"I want to say that Secretary Davis is one of the squarest men I have ever met. When we first laid our evidence before him he requested us to submit our facts to Commissioner Curran.

"Curran says the investigation is moving along in its regular course. When I went over to Ellis Island at the direction of the Secretary of Labor, he sent Curran a telegram that I was coming with a bag of valuable evidence."

Mr. Sandler complained that he was unable to arrange a meeting with Commissioner Curran, but, instead, was turned over to an attaché of the office of the Commissioner, who assured Mr. Sandler that the Firpo matter "would be reached in its regular course," but could not say when this would be.

Witnesses Intimidated, He Says.

"We have submitted the strongest kind of evidence," said Mr. Sandler, "and it shouldn't take longer than a day for the Commissioner of Immigration to send out and get the testimony of the witnesses we have named. He wouldn't have to take those witnesses over to Ellis Island. A stenographer could take their testimony."

Mr. Sandler then charged that some of the witnesses had been intimidated, and he asserted that he was apprehensive that some of them would leave the city before they could be questioned. He also said he had received messages from men who mentioned the names of friends of the lawyer by way of introduction, and said they held large blocks of tickets for the Firpo-Wills fight. They desired advice from Mr. Sandler as to whether they should dump their tickets or hold them, according to Mr. Sandler.

"I told them I was not interested in that phase of the fight," said Mr. Sandler, "and I referred them to Tex Rickard. I'm only interested in seeing that justice is done in this case. I believe the time is past when we are going to recognize the double standard."

His reference was to the action of the immigration authorities in barring Miss Blanca Lourdes Picart, who arrived here aboard the same ship with Firpo. She was put aboard a ship for Havana, Cuba, soon after she arrived in port. It was explained that she was not permitted to enter this country for she had provided herself with a passport for Cuba and not for the United States.

Women Would Boycott Fight.

A movement to boycott the prizefight has been launched by a group of women headed by Miss Mary E. Donnelly, who issued a call to the women of the country to ask husbands, fathers, brothers and lovers to stay away from the contest. Miss Donnelly is an active leader in Democratic women's organizations, and in commenting on the movement said:

"This man Firpo has come here and insulted every American woman. We worked many long and weary years in the Night Court to abolish the double standard, and we don't intend to permit this man to come into our country and set it up again in his favor. We have been working in a quiet way, and we hope that our movement will be just as effective as it was when we started a three-weeks' boycott of the butchers of New York who unfairly raised prices of meats about three years ago."

Miss Donnelly said she had assurance of support from the Dennis J. McGuinness Association, 306 Third Place, Brooklyn, which she described as an organization of "1,500 clean young Americans."

"They are going to assist us to boycott that fight," said Miss Donnelly. "I know every young man of New York will respond to our call. We will appreciate their support very much. They will honor their mothers, sisters, wives and sweethearts by staying away from the fight."

Commissioner Curran said his investigation of the Firpo case was still under way. He was unwilling to comment on it at length, but disclosed that he had not had Firpo go to Ellis Island for examination.

LAFAYETTE-MARNE DAY.

Exercises Will Be Held in Union Square Next Saturday.

The Lafayette Day National Committee has arranged for the celebration of the birthday of the Marquis de Lafayette and the anniversary of the Battle of the Marne jointly next Saturday. Exercises will be held in Union Square. Elon Huntington Hooker is Chairman of the occasion, and Judge P. J. McCook will make the principal address. Many foreign Governments will be represented by their Consuls General.

A detachment of soldiers from Governors Island and of sailors and marines from the Brooklyn Navy Yard will also be present. A score of patriotic and civic societies will be represented. Governor Smith has issued a proclamation fixing Sept. 6 as Lafayette-Marne Day.

ARREST IN $16,000 HOLD-UP.

Chauffeur Knocks Down Detectives Before He Is Subdued.

Wanted in connection with a $16,000 payroll robbery of the Piggly-Wiggly stores in Washington, D. C., on March 24, Joseph F. McLean, 24 years old, a chauffeur, living at the Hotel Pennsylvania, also known as John Francis Malloy, was arrested at Sixth Avenue and Forty-sixth Street Sunday night and taken to Bellevue Prison Ward, after a battle with detectives.

Detective Collins and Horan of headquarters were knocked down by McLean. The fight ended when McLean was knocked down by a blow that fractured his jaw.

FIFTY ENDANGERED IN FIRE.

Elm Grove Hotel at Colchester, Pa., Is Destroyed.

Fire, which threatened the lives of about fifty guests and destroyed most of their clothing and valuables, completely consumed the Elm Grove Hotel at Colchester, Pa., late Friday night, it was learned yesterday. Bernard R. Richards, one of the guests, who lives at 1,425 Grand Concourse, the Bronx, said that the damage was around $80,000.

The frame building of fifty-two rooms was burned to the ground a half hour after the fire was detected in the garret, he said. Mr. Richards rescued his wife and baby, but lost his clothing and jewelry.

10,000 MASKED MEN HOLD A KLAN PARADE

ROUTE GUARDED BY POLICE

Special to The New York Times.

TRENTON, N. J., Sept. 1.—If there is any antipathy in Trenton against the Ku Klux Klan, it was not evidence in the parade held by the Klan here today.

More than 10,000 members of the Klan, masked and robed, and driving in automobiles that bore licenses from fourteen States, drove out of the Klan camp at Springdale Park to take part in the parade that took two hours to pass a given point.

At no point during the parade was there any disturbance, nor was there any evidence of hostility. At one particularly dusty part of the road, where the machines were held up in a traffic jam, farmers poured from their homes with pitchers of ice water and soft drinks.

At the night session, however, enemies of the Klan invaded a large field that had been converted into parking space for the Klan motor cars and cut more than a hundred automobile tires. A number of the Klaveliers who walked guard duty along the rail enclosing the park complained that missles had been hurled at them, but no one was seriously hurt.

At intervals of every three or four miles stood one or more members of the State police, heavily armed and equipped for any emergency. Hung over the shoulder each trooper carried a tear bomb. At several points along the route waited police cars, bearing three or four troopers, and carrying shot guns.

The Klan meeting was the second tri-State convention, the first having been at Long Branch on July 4. Posters advertising the third assemblage at Wilmington, Del., on Nov. 11, were displayed in conspicuous places about the Klan camp at Springdale Park.

Parade in City Prohibited.

As early as sundown last night machines began pouring into Trenton from Indiana and Western points, and State Troopers took up their vigil at the camp and along the roads leading to it. Permission had been sought of the Trenton authorities to hold the demonstration and parade in the city, but had been refused. The Klansmen then appealed to the Hamilton Township authorities, and there, in the outskirts of the city, the parade was held.

The line of march brought the hooded paraders to the border of the Klan Liberty Street, one side of which is in Trenton and the other in Hamilton Township. On the sidewalks on the Trenton side of Liberty Street was a throng of negroes. Trenton policemen stood guard, and in the line of march rode troopers on motorcycles. Sheriff Charles H. Reichert and Captain John J. Long, driven by State Troopers, raced back and forth along the side of the road traversed by the Klansmen.

South Broad Street, along which the parade passed as far as Chambers Street, and which is one of the main arteries leading into Trenton, was heavily peopled by spectators who drew their cars alongside the road and waited for the parade to pass. In addition to the waiting motorists, the sidewalks were speckled with men, women and children who stood for hours in the broiling sun while the Klansmen passed by.

Canteens Serve Meals.

Entrance to Springdale Park was granted only those who showed cards of membership of the Klan. Newspaper men were introduced to Norris C. Freeman, King Kleagle of the Klan in New Jersey, Pennsylvania and Delaware. If he approved of their presence they were allowed to remain.

Extensive preparations for the visitors had been made and canteens had been erected for serving lunch and dinner. Tents for each county delegation were also pitched and in the centre of the camp one structure bore a red cross different from that of the Klan. Here were taken cases of heat prostration and others needing first aid attention. More than fifty were treated by the Klan physician in charge.

The parade got under way at 2 o'clock and it was 5 before the leading cars returned. In them rode Mr. Freeman, Neil P. Stewart, Kleagle of Essex County, and George W. Hobson, Kleagle of Mercer and Hunterdon Counties in New Jersey and Bucks County in Pennsylvania. Freeman and Stewart are generally credited with having organized the Klan in Oklahoma.

In the car with Freeman rode George P. Rutledge, former pastor of the Third Christian Church of Philadelphia, now editor of The Christian Standard of Cincinnati and Imperial Representative of the Ku Klux Klan.

Following the parade two Klan marriages were performed, more than fifty babies were baptized by a Klan minister and then some 500 men and women joined the Klan.

Dr. George P. Rutledge addressed the Klansmen at the night sessions, explaining how the Klan had been brought into disrepute by disloyal members and detailing some of the principles for which the Klan stood. He said the negroes, the Jews and the Roman Catholics all opposed the Klan, but that the Klan did not oppose them.

DOUBTS STONING BY KLAN.

Prosecutor Ascribes Attack Upon Negro to Mischievous Boys.

Samuel A. Browne, negro mail carrier, whose home, in a white residential section, at 67 Fairview Avenue, West New Brighton, S. I., was showered mysteriously with stones early last Sunday morning, appealed yesterday to District Attorney of Richmond Albert C. Fach, to investigate the attack.

Mr. Fach said he would make an inquiry, although he disagreed with Browne's opinion that the attack was the work of the Ku Klux Klan. The fusillade of stones followed the receipt by Browne of a letter, signed "K. K. K.," advising him to move out of the white section. Mr. Fach said he believed that either mischievous boys or neighbors eager for the Browne's to leave the community, threw the stones. Browne paid $8,500 for the house last Winter and refuses to sell it to white bidders for less than $11,000. His wife Catherine is a teacher in P. S. 11, Dongan Hills, S. I.

REPORTS LESS EMPLOYMENT

Special to The New York Times.

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—In a report issued today on industrial employment conditions in the Seventh Federal Reserve District, the Federal Reserve bank here said:

"A decrease of 2.3 per cent. in employment and 3.7 per cent. in payrolls was reported for the month ended July 15, by representative industries of the Seventh District."

The decline in Illinois was particularly heavy, the review said, "amounting to approximately 4 per cent. in men and 7 per cent. in payrolls. Wisconsin reported a gain in employment, but a further drop in total earnings as occasioned by increases in part-time operations."

Employment conditions remained firm in other States in the district, it was said, "with a slight tendency toward an improvement."

Satisfaction Policy

NO one can say how long a garment will wear—particularly a stocking. Hence few store guarantees extend to stockings. This is not so at Peck & Peck's. For years it has been our policy to take back and replace any purchase with which a customer expresses dissatisfaction. Our aim is to make it impossible for any woman to buy stocking dissatisfaction in any of our shops. This policy, we believe, is unique in the stocking business—but it is our expression of supreme confidence in our quality of hosiery.

We not only have stockings made to our exact satisfaction in America but we continually seek new corners in Europe always hoping to secure finer and better stockings for our customers.

And knowing we offer you the finest quality that can be made, we replace any pair of stockings with which a customer expresses dissatisfaction. We leave replacements to her fair judgment.

JAPANESE HONOR EARTHQUAKE DEAD

30 SERVICES ARE HELD

Memorial Ceremonies Are Also Held in Yokohama—2,956 Shocks in Last Year.

By WILFRID FLEISHER.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

TOKIO, Sept. 1.—Thousands of Tokio citizens flocked into the streets and stood silently for two minutes at 11:58 o'clock this morning. Traffic was halted and the sound of factory whistles, fire bells and temple gongs filled the air in memory of the great earthquake which destroyed Tokio and Yokohama one year ago today at that hour, killing more than 10,000 persons in Tokio alone.

At the same moment today the Prince Regent and the Crown Princess, in the Akasaka Palace, offered silent prayers, and their example was followed in all Government offices and by thousands of other workers.

Public memorial services for those who died in the earthquake were held at thirty different places in the city today. The principal service took place on the site of the old army clothing depot, in the Honjo district, where 33,000 persons were burned to death following the earthquake.

It was attended by Premier Kato and the Mayor of Tokio, who read several messages, and members of the diplomatic corps. The Emperor and the Empress and the Prince Regent and the Crown Princess sent wreaths, which were placed on the altar of the temple which commemorates the sad event.

Kato Calls for Thrift.

In his address Premier Kato called upon the people to discard the exaravagance which resulted from the war boom and to practice economy and thrift. He said that the war had created a reaction of economic depression in Japan, followed by the earthquake, which further increased the burden upon the people. He advocated a spirit of unity in bravely facing the difficult situation.

Officials of the Foreign Office left their desks and gathered in the office compound shortly before noon and Baron Shidehara made a short address, enjoining their cooperation in the tremendous task which confronts the nation now.

When the sirens and bells were sounded all the officials stood with bowed heads in silent prayer for two minutes. Following this short ceremony the Foreign Office officials partook of a luncheon of rice and tea, reminiscent of the meals which were served in the Government offices following the earthquake.

Services for the foreigners who were killed in Yokohama during the disaster were held in the foreign cemetery on the Bluff and were attended by the Consuls and a large group of relatives and friends of the deceased, who decorated the graves.

Tokio Loses in Population.

According to the metropolitan police, about seven-eighths of the devastated area in Tokio has been rebuilt since the earthquake. Before then there were 368,000 houses in Tokio and there are now 310,000, of which 176,000 are newly built structures erected since.

The population of Tokio was 2,036,136 and has decreased to 1,741,500, showing a loss of 294,636. The population of the suburbs has increased accordingly, the survivors remaining there.

In appearance Tokio does not differ greatly, except for the newness of the wooden shacks, and the tin roofs which replaced the old tile ones. There are few visible scars of the earthquake, all debris having been cleared, and in a few places where new houses have not sprung up the ground has been cleared.

One of the most distinctive landmarks of the earthquake is the site of the former American Embassy, which, although cleared of ruins, is barren except for a few tents where the American officers are quartered in the compound. The British and French Governments have constructed temporary buildings on the sites of their former embassies pending permanent rebuilding.

The total Government appropriation for reconstruction has been only 573,438,849 yen. The Yamamoto Cabinet originally appropriated 468,438,849 yen. This was slightly increased by the Kiyoura Ministry, while the Kato Cabinet has raised the amount to the present total.

Cabinets Delay Reconstruction.

Mr. Kanai, Secretary of the Reconstruction Board, when interviewed today by THE NEW YORK TIMES, said the greatest handicap to reconstruction has been the change of Cabinets, as each new Cabinet has considered the plans and brought about some modifications which retarded the progress of the work. He added that he expects the land survey and readjustment to be completed within a year, and as each successive section is completed permanent buildings will be permitted in that section.

Reconstruction work in Yokohama has been much slower than in Tokio, as the debris in the foreign settlement is much more difficult to clear. The Japanese parts of the city have been supplied with shacks, but there are still large tracts of uncleared land. The foreign residential section on the Bluff is still a mass of ruins.

According to official reports, 2,956 shocks were recorded in the year since the great earthquake. It is said that half of them were after-shocks of the September upheaval.

6,000 SPANISH TROOPS RUSHED TO MOROCCO

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MADRID, Sept. 1.—After deliberating with his colleagues at a council of war lasting three hours, General Primo de Rivera made a declaration to the press representatives today that the news they had from Morocco was far from good and that he would later issue a note concerning the situation.

This note lays stress on the need to provide against ceaseless pressure from the enemy and against attacks in which the enemy is showing increasing audacity. To enable the Spanish forces to meet and defeat the tribesmen wherever they may be challenged to fight, greater numbers have been found necessary and eight battalions—more than 6,000 men—have accordingly been ordered to proceed to Morocco at once.

The note says that the situation is developing in such manner as to demand the greatest efforts, calmness and determination from all.

The only details of the fighting furnished are those referring to a Spanish column which went westward to relieve positions between Garcia Aceno and Ras Buturaca on the Wad Lau front. This column met with strong resistance and had to put up a very hard fight, being obliged, it must be assumed, to withdraw to its base without achieving its object, for the operation is to be renewed today with a stronger column. The Moors' objective appears to be Sheshuan itself.

Sewing Made a Pleasure

Seams that are finer—YET STRONGER

THE stitches made by the Willcox & Gibbs Automatic Electric are more beautiful and even than lock stitches—yet in actual tests the Willcox & Gibbs seams prove to be three times stronger than lock stitch seams. Strains merely tighten the Willcox & Gibbs seams. The material itself may give way, but these "seams" hold, absolutely tight and fast.

Consequently, in sewing on a Willcox & Gibbs, much finer cotton can be used than would be possible on any other machine. The result is that the sewing is more beautiful and expert-looking.

For 65 years the Willcox & Gibbs has been the preferred machine in homes where sewing is an honored art.

BOMB IN LENIN'S TOMB.

Copyright, 1924, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

BERLIN, Sept. 1.—An infernal machine has been found in the mausoleum in Lenin Red Square in Moscow, where the embalmed body of Nicolai Lenin is seen daily by thousands.

The day the bomb was found labor organizations and student bodies had been allowed to visit the crypt to see the lifelike remains of the former chief. In the evening the guard found a bundle of newspapers containing a ticking infernal machine with sufficient explosive to wreck the entire mausoleum.

Hundreds of students have been given the Cheka third degree, which is so severe that a number of students confessed their complicity in the plot in order to escape the tortures. Their statements are so inconsistent that the higher authorities do not believe they are the criminals.

Wholesale arrests are still going on. The military guard has been doubled and visitors are searched before entering the mausoleum.

BEAUTIES ARRIVE AT SHORE.

First Titian-Haired Entrant in Years Comes From Los Angeles.

Special to The New York Times.

ATLANTIC CITY, Sept. 1.—The vanguard of the eighty-three young women who will compete in the national beauty tournament of the Atlantic City pageant which opens tomorrow, began arriving today. Twenty-six States will be represented. One girl will emerge from the competition, crowned "Miss America" and recognized as the nation's typical bathing girl.

For the first time in three years there is a titian-haired entrant. She is "Miss Los Angeles," in private life Lillian Knight. There is much speculation as to whether a girl with long tresses or one with the now popular bobbed hair will triumph.

The beauties will be judged for grace, carriage, form and facial features.

The present "Miss America" boasts that she does not use artificial beautifiers. She is a brunette with long flowing hair, has won the honor two years and hopes this time to capture the $5,000 golden mermaid. She is Mary Katharine Campbell of Columbus, Ohio.

BURNED CLEANING DRESS.

Supposedly Non-Inflamable Fluid Explodes and Woman Is Dying.

Mrs. Dorothy Tolins, known as an illustrator to her neighbors in the Theodore Roosevelt Apartments, 1,475 Grand Concourse, the Bronx, is in Fordham Hospital, dying as the result of having been burned while cleaning a dress in the kitchen of her apartment last night.

The woman's screams attracted other tenants of the building, who found her a mass of flames in the kitchen. She had been working over the sink with a supposedly non-inflammable cleaning fluid. This was ignited by a small flame of the gas stove, and Mrs. Tolins' thin negligee caught fire at once when the fluid exploded. Her six-year-old daughter, Alice, was asleep on a divan in an adjoining room.

Tenants succeeded in extinguishing the woman's blazing garments and called an ambulance. Her husband, I. B. Tolins, is a traveling salesman and is now in the South.

SOCIETY SURROUNDS PRINCE AT THE RACE

MRS. VANDERBILT PRESENT

HUGE MARQUEE IS CROWDED

Newly Constructed Shelter on Lawn Is Filled and Luncheon Is Served in the Reading Room.

It seemed as if all the fashionable resorts had been deserted, judging by the crowds assembled yesterday at Belmont Park for the international race and the Prince of Wales, who came for it, ran as almost an equal public favorite with Wise Counsellor. The rumor that he was on the way from Mr. and Mrs. Harold Pratt's party in Glen Cove was spread from box to box in the grandstand, and those assembled on the green of the Turf and Field Club enclosure also heard it. The question, "Is the Prince arriving soon?" was heard frequently, and at about 3:30 the cry arose, "there he is."

The Prince came with the official party from the Pratt estate, arriving on the paddock side of the course, and he was whisked under the grandstand to the rear stairway and hurried up to the box of August Belmont in the front tier of the enclosure, where Mrs. Belmont greeted the royal visitor. Meanwhile Mr. Belmont and Joseph E. Widener were waiting rather impatiently the Prince's arrival at the entrance of the Turf and Field Club, and it was several minutes after the heir to the British throne had been acclaimed by the vast gathering that Messrs. Belmont and Widener were informed that the young man was already in the Belmont box. They hurried there and were, therefore, somewhat tardy in their welcome.

Mr. and Mrs. H. Rogers Winthrop took their places in the Belmont box, where several of their friends who had not been at the Pratt party were presented to the Prince. One of the first of them was Mrs. Robert E. Strawbridge, wife of the polo player. Mrs. Charles Dana Gibson was in the box next to that of Mr. and Mrs. Belmont and also nearby were Mr. and Mrs. Perry Belmont. The Hon. Mrs. Norton also came into the Belmont box to greet the Prince. It was noticed that he wore a double-breasted suit of gray flannel with a white pencil stripe, a shirt and collar of his favorite blue, a Panama straw hat with the brim turned down and brogans of brown ooze leather.

Mrs. Whitney Nearby.

In a box not far from that of Mr. and Mrs. Belmont were Mr. and Mrs. Payne Whitney and their son, John Hay Whitney, who had motored from Greentree, their place in Manhasset. Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt 2d, who had been at Mr. and Mrs. Pratt's party, arrived before the Prince and seated herself in the box next Mr. and Mrs. Whitney.

In advance of the races many of those who had motored from town or who had come on special trains had luncheon at the Turf and Field Club where Maître d'Hôtel Mainati of the Biltmore presided and as there were 600 advance reservations this necessitated the building of a huge marquee on the lawn of the club to guard against any change in the weather. Several parties were served in the regular dining room of the club, in the reading room and on the verandas. Others had their tables placed under the trees on the lawn.

The Mayor of New York and Mrs. John F. Hylan were among the luncheon guests of Mr. and Mrs. Richard T. Wilson, whose table had been placed in the main reception room. Other guests of Mr. and Mrs. Wilson were Mr. and Mrs. John Sinnott, Mrs. Moses Taylor Campbell, Mr. and Mrs. Carroll L. Wainwright, the Misses Louise and Marion Wilson, Desha Breckinridge, owner of Kentucky Cardinal; Joseph Kennedy of Baltimore, C. Alan Arthur and Lawrence Turnure.

Mr. and Mrs. Dudley Olcott had among their luncheon guests their son-in-law and daughter, Mr. and Mrs. Jean de P. Waddington, just over from Paris, and Mrs. Rutherfurd Stuyvesant.

Colonel Thompson a Host.

Colonel Robert M. Thompson, who had motored from his place in Southhampton, brought with him Major-Gen. Sir Reginald Hoskins and Lady Hoskins, who recently came from England with Colonel Thompson when he returned from the Olympic games on the America. Others in the party who lunched at a table set on the lawn were Stephen H. P. Pell, son-in-law of Colonel Thompson, and Mr. and Mrs. Theodore Roosevelt Pell, John J. Curtis had among his luncheon guests Mrs. Julia Hoyt, Miss Isabel Townsend Pell, Mr. and Mrs. Henry C. Merritt Jr., Herman Florant and Hermann Oelrichs.

With Mr. and Mrs. W. Carson Kane were Mr. and Mrs. J. Harlin O'Connell, Mrs. Henry L. Bell and Miss Gladys Kane. Mrs. Alex Cochran Townsend, who had a table was on the veranda, had as guests Mr. and Mrs. Spencer Shotter, Mr. and Mrs. Lynde Selden and Sumner Ballard. Mr. and Mrs. J. Randolph Robinson's guests were Mr. and Mrs. Samuel Willets, Mr. and Mrs. Jorge Andre, Mr. and Mrs. Sidney Whelan and Captain Charles Fain.

Mr. and Mrs. Charles E. Proctor, who had motored from Shadow Lane in Great Neck, lunched with Mr. and Mrs. Charles F. Watson Jr. At a table under the trees were Mr. and Mrs. T. Markoe Robertson, who were with Mr. and Mrs. William Thaw 3d. With Mrs. Brokaw Dugmore were Mr. and Mrs. William May Wright, Mr. and Mrs. Hunt Tilford Dickinson and Clifford Brokaw. Mr. and Mrs. Enrique Zanetti were guests of Mrs. Francis E. Corbett and Miss Lucille Thornton. Mr. and Mrs. William M. V. Hoffman and Mr. and Mrs. Stoddard Hoffman of Tuxedo Park were in another party.

Among the guests of Mr. and Mrs. Robert C. Winmill were Mr. and Mrs. Nelson Doubleday, Mr. and Mrs. Frederic F. Alexandre, Edward M. McIlvaine Jr., James K. Maddox and Henry Savage Page. With Mr. and Mrs. W. Halsted Van der Poel were Mr. and Mrs. George Emlen Roosevelt, Mr. and Mrs. David Wells, also Dr. and Mrs. J. Peter Hoguet. At a table placed on the lawn there were lunching Mr. and Mrs. Rufus C. Patterson, Mr. and Mrs. E. M. Jaffray McVicker, Mr. and Mrs. Joseph E. Davis, Mrs. Edward Van Ingen, Mrs. Joseph R. Dilworth and Phillips B. Thompson.

Many Others on the Lawn.

Others having luncheon at the club were Mr. and Mrs. Henry F. Godfrey, Paul D. Cravath and his daughter, Mrs. James S. Larkin; Mrs. Pal de Saint Phalle and Miss Genevieve Clendenin who had come on from Newport; Henry A. Buck, Mr. and Mrs. Norrie Sellar, Gerald Hull Gray, Mr. and Mrs. William H. Erhart, Mr. and Mrs. George S. Graham, Mrs. Graham Williams, Jules Vatable, Beverley Bogert, Mr. and Mrs. Hugh A. Murray, Miss Paula Murray, James W. Gerard, who brought George White, one of the prominent members of the Davis-Bryan committee; Mr. and Mrs. Richard H. Williams Jr., Mr. and Mrs. Chester Dale, who had motored from Southampton; Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Sterry, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas D. Greene, Murray Hoffman, Miss Frances Sullivan and Livingston Sullivan of Philadelphia; Mr. and Mrs. E. Somerville Voss, Mr. and Mrs. Charles G. West Jr., Mrs. Huntington Norton, Mr. and Mrs. Frank C. Henderson, Mrs. Ogden Fowler, Victor Onativia Jr., also Mr. and Mrs. Faris R. Russell, J. J. Kiernan and William Koch.

Many of those later seen in the boxes of the grand stand or on the lawn had already lunched at their country places in Long Island, and some had motored from town in time for the first race. In the great throng were Mr. and Mrs. W. Albert Pease Jr., Miss Patty Pease, Perry Pease, Mr. and Mrs. Lyttleton Fox, who came with Ormond G. Smith; Mr. and Mrs. E. Lambert Lynch, Mr. and Mrs. Middleton S. Burrill, Mr. and Mrs. Harry C. Cushing 3d, Mr. and Mrs. E. Clarkson Potter, Mr. and Mrs. David Wagstaff, Mr. and Mrs. Stanley G. Mortimer, Mrs. Oliver W. 'Proud of You and My Horse,' Says Wertheimer to Jockey

Pierre Wertheimer, owner of Epinard, took his great colt's defeat like the good sportsmen he is. One of the first things he did after the race was over was to reassure Everett Haynes that he had no fault to find with the latter's ride. "It is all right, Everett. You made a fine race and I am proud of you and proud of my horse," said Wertheimer. The French sportsman had good cause to be proud of both the horse and jockey. Neither had anything to be ashamed of, and it is pleasant to remember they will have other opportunities in this country in which their efforts may be rewarded with success.

EPINARD SLUGGISH, SAYS HIS TRAINER

Hopes Next Race Will Show the French Colt at His Best Speed and Form.

"Epinard was in good condition and ran a good race, but he was sluggish and did not have the speed that he has shown before," said Trainer Eugene Leigh after the race at Belmont Park yesterday. "He did not start fast, and being caught in a pocket at the turn home he was handicapped. When Haynes let him out he responded, but did not have the vital spark of energy that had characterized him before. I believe this was due to his not having raced for some time. I said before the race that I would feel better satisfied if Epinard had a race under his belt. Of course, this couldn't be. His time trials had indicated the speed that I know he is capable of.

"Epinard will be rested for a few days and then will resume his training for his next race in the series. That is twenty-seven days off, and the colt will, of course, not race between now and then. But I don't think I will have any trouble keeping him fit for his next engagement, and I hope to show the American racing public the colt at his very best form and speed in the next race."

Sidelights of Big Race.

Harry Stevens and his efficient force of caterers were practically swamped. Harry only expected 50,000, and so he had only one extra ham on hand. Rush orders were sent out for more food after the big crowd had exhausted the reserve supply before the first race started, but it was consumed as fast as it could be procured. Big throngs are no novelty to Stevens and his men, as they have catered to baseball, boxing and racing crowds for years, but they admitted that they had never seen food and drink disappear so fast in all their lives.

At the Turf and Field Club, too, there was an unexpectedly large number for luncheon.

The hum of thousands of voices practically drowned out the band, and only an occasional note, breaking through the steady roar, gave notice that it was playing at all.

Zev followed Epinard in the parade, bobbing his head just as he did when he followed Papyrus last year. He was still following at the finish, which was more than Papyrus could make him do.

A great throng followed the Prince around the saddling paddock, but he was not the only centre of attraction there as he had been in the grand stand. Some of the royal thoroughbreds claimed part of the crowd, and at one time it was a toss-up whether more were following the Prince or Zev.

Several of the fashionably dressed ladies in the enclosure strolled about with tiny parasols that were a riot of color. They looked nice, but were not very effective as sunshades. Over in the infield black umbrellas were used for the purpose, and proved more practical, although not so pretty.

About half the infield crowd went over to watch the start of the big race, figuring, probably, that a good view of the start was preferable to a poor one of the finish.

When a State trooper galloped past between races one young lady was heard to inquire where the rest of the horses were.

The finery of the women made a brave show, even though it was slightly wilted by the time the sixth race rolled around.

It was a royal afternoon of sport, and the winner of the big race was a blue blood from the Blue Grass.

Airplanes came and went over the infield almost unnoticed. Times change. A few years ago a plane flying over a crowd was sure to cause sensation. The eyes of this throng were nearer to earth.

A RECORD CROWD SEES THE CONTEST

60,000 PASS THE GATES

The largest crowd that ever saw a horse race in New York and one of the largest in the history of the American turf watched Wise Counselor win at Belmont Park yesterday. It was an international race in which an English Prince and a French horse divided the attention of 60,000 persons. It was a cosmopolitan crowd, Prince and poor man alike cheering on his favorite as the horse from Kentucky and the horse from France battled head-and-head in a last gallant charge to the wire.

The picture will not be quickly forgotten. France lost and America won, but there was glory enough for both, and there was little to choose in the greeting that the throng accorded victor and vanquished as they returned to the judges' stand.

Every man and woman in that thundering throng knew he or she had seen two great horses give their very all and that neither had been disgraced. It was a fitting climax to New York's second international derby, to a day that proved that love of a fine horse is confined to no one land or one race and that no nation has a monopoly on their production. Regard for and interest in horses is part and parcel of the daily life of every Englishman. In France it is much the same. This widespread, almost universal enthusiasm has not been so true of America, but the day is coming when it will be and it is racing days like yesterday that will make it so.

From early morning the crowd came to Belmont, as it goes to Newmarket and to Churchill Downs on Derby Day. Long before noon the choice places in the grand stand had been taken, and by 1 o'clock not a place of vantage was left and still they came in a steady stream by train, by car, by trolley and on foot.

Fifteen trains, each carrying 1,000 or more persons, were sent out from the Long Island terminal, while there were eight trains from Brooklyn with the same capacity. Fully 30,000 came by automobile and there were thousands of others that got there by means too devious to describe. Possibly more than the estimated 60,000 persons watched the race, for it was impossible to see all the crowd at one time. From the back of the grand stand it was possible to guess the numbers in the seats, the horde on the lawn and in the enclosure and the other thousands in the infield and paddock; but even from this point of vantage there were thousands under the stands and far down the track that were out of the range of vision.

There was no difficulty in seeing enough to prove that it was a far larger crowd than that which braved a bad day to see the Papyrus race last Fall, however. There were scattered groups along the line of trees outside of the course, and when there was an occasional breath of wind those with strong glasses could catch glimpses of still others clinging to precarious perches on the limbs of trees that were, at least, three-quarters of a mile from the finish line. These were not the best places in the world from which to see the race, but any view of this race was better than none.

With the possible exception of the Kentucky Derby and one great crowd that saw the American Derby at Washington Park in Chicago years ago, this was unquestionably the greatest racing gathering that America has ever known.

There were Continental touches to this crowd, too. Several manikins dressed in the very latest Parisian, or perhaps they were American, creations paraded the enclosure between races.

Epinard and Wise Counsellor are both picture horses and they look something alike. Both are chestnuts of big bone and fine confirmation. Some think that Wise Counsellor is the best-looking horse in training in America, but there was no fault to find with the appearance of any one of the nine that paraded for the big test. They came just about as near making a picture of thoroughbred perfection as it would be possible to find.

A horse that has won one international race, a Kentucky Derby, a Belmont Stake and several other major purses must be a bit blasé about big races. It is easy to imagine Zev answering an equine query about what was going on yesterday with a yawn as follows: "Oh, it's just another one of those international races."

Epinard may mean spinach in English, but he is no garden variety of horse.

For race horses—Kentucky.

If it had been a few degrees cooler the day would have been perfect for racing. As it was, it was more pleasant at Belmont Park than in the city. The less said about the trip out and back the better.

Although minors are not supposed to be admitted to the race course, many came and brought the whole family, babies and all. The babies probably would have preferred to be at home, but all the others enjoyed it.

lieved the colt could not be beaten, and they supported him accordingly. At the close he was an even choice with Zev. The rest of the field were held at comparatively long prices, Ladkin closing at 7 to 1, Goshawk at 12 to 1, Snob II. and Wilderness at 15 to 1, while Miss Star was the outsider at 25 to 1.

No such representative gathering has ever crowded an American race course as filled every seat in the great grand stand yesterday afternoon, crowded the lawn to suffocation, swarmed into the paddock between races and overflowed into the infield by thousands. In the reserved section and occupying the boxes were leaders of society, owners and breeders of thoroughbreds from all over the United States and visitors from foreign countries.

Band Plays British Anthem.

Every seat on top of the grand stand was occupied, and from this point a scene of color, of motion and excitement spread out below. All was animation, from the arrival of the first crowd to the coming of the Prince of Wales, when the colors of his nation were raised to the staff over his box and the band played the British anthem. A clear sky, flecked only at times by the fleecicst of clouds, reflected the burning rays of a Summer sun through an atmosphere surcharged with humidity, under which everything wilted. About noon, before the first of the crowds started their pilgrimage to Belmont Park, ominous clouds banked in the south and murmurs of thunder rolled across the Hempstead plains and threatened fulfillment of predictions for local thunder showers. Then the wind shifted from south to northwest and a cool breeze sprang up. But with the first arrivals at the track the breeze flattened and was scarcely strong enough to stir the markers on the steeplechase course and the flags wrapped around their staffs on top of the stand.

Because of the stir occasioned by the arrival of the Prince the afternoon program was somewhat delayed and it was 4:27 when the bugle announced the arrival on the track of nine contenders in the feature number on the card. Of the original overnight entry of an even dozen three were scratched—the Greentree Stable's Rialto, J. E. Humphrey's Little Chief and J. S. Ward's Worthmore, the latter being from the same stable as Wise Counsellor and named in case of a heavy track.

There had been a rush for the paddock at the end of the third race and the crowds poured back to give full measure of homage to the regal thoroughbreds as they minced their way down the course, the red-coated marshal at their head. Epinard, his copper flanks reflecting the slanting rays of the afternoon sun, headed the single file, Haynes in the blue silks, with white stripes, sleeves and cap of the Wertheimer stable. The French colt got a reception that accorded with his reputation, but it was no more complimentary than the applause for Zev, whose shining brown coat was in sharp contrast to the brilliant chestnut. The applause was continuous as the parade passed the clubhouse enclosure and the grand stand and on to the furlong pole, where the alignment was lost and Snob II. went on alone at a canter, while Epinard and Zev remained sedately with the marshal, the others proceeding at will.

Epinard at the Rail.

It was 4:36 when the field walked slowly in line to the barrier. For a moment it looked as if Starter Mars Cassidy could get them away at the first try. But Snob II. backed out of line and Wise Counsellor turned. Then Epinard sidled over and Haynes turned him around and walked him up again. Epinard had the post position on the rail and his every move was plainly visible through the glasses. In order to the outside position they lined up thus: Snob II., Ladkin, Wilderness, Baffling, Miss Star, Wise Counsellor, Zev and Goshawk.

Two minutes of pulling and backing, with an instant's pause, and then the webbing was seen to shoot outward and upward. As one the spectators jumped and an ascending roar in a giant's voice called "They're off!" It was a perfect start. Mr. Cassidy, in that twinkling, had caught the nine in perfect alignment and the nine stars of the thoroughbred world seemed to leap forward in unison.

For a few jumps the purple silks of the Audley Farm showed in front as Miss Star got away, running at full speed. But she quickly gave place to Baffling, the colt heading the filly and racing her down. After three furlongs she was through; the company was too fast and she quickly dropped back out of the contention. Baffling first poked his nose out in front and then his head, and he led the procession all down the back stretch.

Wise Counsellor was among the first to break, but he, too, found the pace too hot and dropped back. Epinard, breaking fairly well ahead of Zev and Ladkin, could be plainly discerned all through that first mad scramble for the lead which meant so much. The supporters of Baffling were in a frenzy of excitement as he continued to show the way, while the backers of the other Westerner and the favorite, Wise Counsellor, were almost dismayed at the apparent hopelessness of his position as the field swept down the backstretch.

Epinard in a Pocket.

Epinard ran in third position, was on the rail and was plainly pocketed. Ahead of him were Baffling and Miss Star, with Zev lapped on him and Goshawk close up. The French colt was running easily, but if he possessed the speed to outpace his field he had not the opportunity to display it. He never did show his best foot until he was clear in the stretch run and it will ever be a matter of discussion as to whether his being bottled up on the backstretch and around the turn cost him the race.

By the time they had gone half a mile there was some shifting of position. Baffling still held his head out in front while Zev moved up with a challenge outside of Epinard, only a head back of the flying leader and only the margin of a head in front of the French invader. Back of them came Miss Star, Snob II. and Wise Counsellor, which had been unable to improve his position, with Ladkin, Goshawk and Wilderness trailing.

A gigantic babel of sound roared incessantly as the field neared the turn. There were shouts of "There goes Zev!" as the turf idol of last season gradually crept up on the leader. "Epinard's through—he can't get out!" they screamed as it seemed as if the French colt was in a hopeless position.

As they swung around the turn there was another shifting of places, another shuffling of the racing cards. As the white silks of the Rancocas Stable flashed to the fore swinging into the stretch the name of Zev rose from thousands of lips as it seemed likely that the son of The Finn and Miss Kearney was destined to repeat those sensational triumphs of a year ago. But he could not hold his advantage and never got clear of his field. From his slow break he had spent too much of that almost boundless energy in reaching and heading the leaders. He was through, and not even to Sande could he have given more.

And now came Epinard's brief moment of triumph, when the field opened and Haynes was able to get him clear. Stride by stride he came on, passing Zev as the latter weakened, to draw clear of his field. To thousands it seemed that the race was all but over. The great French colt was at last in the lead, clear from all obstruction in his path, with Zev and Baffling raced into thorough submission.

Up Comes Wise Counsellor.

But there was yet another chapter. As Epinard had come around his field, so did Wise Counsellor. The 3-year-old, outrun to this point, was closing with a tremendous rush. Keogh took him to the outside and he, too, had a clear field. Stride by stride, he lessened the distance between him and the leader. It was a heart-breaking race—heart-breaking alike to the spectators and the performers on that long brown oval. First one and then another had raised hopes, only to dash them in a few short moments. From cries of encouragement for Zev and then Epinard, came shouts and pleas to Wise Counsellor, as he drew up and raced even with the French horse.

At the sixteenth pole Wise Counsellor was in the lead. Haynes twice gave his mount a cut of the whip. Epinard bounded forward, gained in a stride or two. Then both seemed to falter slightly, but Wise Counsellor outgamed Epinard in those last few jumps, where perfect racing condition and readiness always count for victory.

There was still another to come into the finishing picture from far back and write his name in racing history. Ladkin was among the last to get away from the barrier and was not a factor in the first five furlongs. As the pacemakers began to tire Clarence Kummer got Major Belmont's 3-year-old into his best stride and he rapidly wore down those in front of him. In the last furlong he was running fastest of all, as he was when the two leaders flashed past the winning post.

The rest of the field swept by in a cloud of dust. Sighs from thousands of throats indicated that the tension had broken and the spectators were awaiting the return of the field to the scales. As Wise Counsellor trotted up to the magic semi-circle before the stewards' stand and Frankie Keogh raised his whip for recognition there was another spontaneous outburst of admiration for a superb horse, splendidly ridden. Epinard was one of the last to come back and he was not neglected, honored though defeated.

Owners Frederick Burton of Chicago and John S. Ward of Louisville were clad in the brilliant victory of the colt whose ownership they share. They were summoned to the stewards' stand for congratulations and to receive the trophy, which many hope may become an international challenge cup. The Prince of Wales was holiday-making like those other spectators in grand stand and enclosure, but he consented to deviate from his program and present the cup, fashioned in silver in England 150 years ago.

Prince Felicitates Owners.

In making the formal presentation the Prince graciously felicitated the owners of Wise Counsellor on owning a colt that was fleet enough to overcome the fastest horse that has been seen abroad in a long time. He expressed the hope that the races to come would be as well contested as that of yesterday and told of his delight at being among those that were fortunate to witness so great a struggle. Mr. Burton, who accepted the cup, thanked the Prince for his remarks, and said that the cup would be treasured, not only as a souvenir of a great race, but because of the hand that had presented it.

Following the feature race the Prince and his party departed and the crowds began to drift toward the trains, many leaving before the running of the fifth and sixth races. Owners Burton and Ward quickly followed Wise Counsellor, stopping long enough to congratulate Frankie Keogh for his brilliant ride.

John S. Ward paid $67,000 for Wise Counsellor as a two-year-old and has always maintained that he was the best horse he ever had anything to do with—and Ward's experience extends over more than a generation. He said that he had anticipated the result of the first of the international races. He gave Epinard his full due for his first race on foreign soil.

Has Romantic History.

Wise Counsellor has a romantic if brief history. His mother, Rustle, by Russell, was sold for $100 to Mayor Thomas E. Bradley of Lexington, Ky., when she was supposed to be barren. The mare had been bred to Mentor, a son of Blacktock by Hanover, and when the foal came it was of such promise that Mayor Bradley saw that it was carefully nurtured. It grew into a big colt and won a number of good races. Ward outbid every one for the colt after he had won the Kentucky Jockey Club Stakes and subsequently took into partnership Mr. Burton, who is a Chicago business man. Wise Counsellor and Sarazen were Winter book favorites for the Kentucky Derby of this year, but neither was able to get to the post. Both have come back to form and both won their races the same afternoon, Sarazen in the faster time for the same distance.

It was a coincidence that the winner and the colt to finish second were saddled together in the railed oval in the middle of the big paddock, which is shaded by overspreading maples. Wise Counsellor, followed by Epinard, came into the enclosure shortly after the running of the third race, the French colt on one side and the Westerner on the other, both following lead ponies.

As they were being walked about, the Prince fo Wales and a number of his party entered the enclosure to look over the two favorites. The crowd was kept back by a dozen police and two mounted State troopers who patrolled inside. Pierre Wertheimer had just come in to have a final conference with Trainer Leigh and Everett Haynes, and the Prince engaged the French sportsman in animated conversation as Epinard walked about, interested in everything that was going on about him. Mrs. Belmont joined the party and all greatly admired the beautiful chestnut, which appeared in superb condition. Most of the attention was centred on the invader, Wise Counsellor being given only a casual inspection by the distinguished visitor.

Then came the saddling bell and the Prince and his friends hurried back to the enclosure. While Leigh was saddling Epinard, Trainer W. V. Walsh was performing a like office for Wise Counsellor. As they strode to the stirrup one last tug and stood off for a final inspection the bugle call sounded clearly through the paddock, followed by the call "Mount your jockeys!" Haynes and Keogh were swung into their saddles and there followed the parade to the post.

Meantime the other contestants were being prepared at various points about the spacious paddock. Each had a surrounding group of admirers, although comparatively few got a glimpse of the winner and the French colt during the preliminary formalities. Zev was the most popular of those outside the charmed enclosure. He was surrounded by a dense crowd, and without police protection all that could be done was to walk through the crowd, the centaur in front of him and closing in behind.

Never has such a crowd gathered at a racecourse in this part of the country, and the crowds took the advice of the Westchester management to get to Belmont early. The first of the special trains was filled to overflowing, while the motor roads leading to the course were crowded soon after noon, many parties coming for luncheon at the Turf and Field Club and in the bijou restaurant under the enclosure.

Wise Counsellor, outpaced early, came around field at top of stretch and closed with a great rush on outside to outgame Epinard in final strides. Latter was in close quarters on rail for the first half mile, but moved up fast in stretch and looked the winner a furlong out; he only hung in final yards and evidently needed the race. Ladkin moved up fast in last quarter to outgame the tiring pacemakers in stretch. Snob II. was well up all the way. Zev rushed up to the leaders turning for home, but tired badly after disposing of Baffling at top of stretch. Wilderness was knocked out of it directly after the start. Baffling cut out a hot pace from a fast break, but quit badly in stretch. Miss Star was done after three furlongs. Goshawk showed only a flash.

EPINARD WINS GLORY DESPITE HIS DEFEAT

WAS IN NEED OF A RACE

COLT WAS CAUGHT IN POCKET

French Champion Did Not Show Best Speed Until Stretch Run—Zev a Disappointment.

Though defeated in his first appearance in America in the first international Special at Belmont Park yesterday, Pierre Wertheimer's Epinard proved to the great throng that witnessed the contest that he is truly a fine racehorse and capable of matching strides with the best of them in this country. Not only was he not disgraced, but he came out of the race with much of the glory and gave race followers assurance that he will be hard to beat in the remaining two specials to be run at Aqueduct and Latonia.

The glory of course must go to Wise Counsellor, which ran a sparkling race to win from the French invader after having none of the best of the breaks in the course of the fast six furlongs. But it must be said in all fairness to Epinard that he was the victim of some bad racing luck, without which he might have nosed out a victory. At least he met with some difficulties and he proved his gameness in the run through the stretch, when he showed that he is a very fast horse.

Undoubtedly what Epinard needed more than anything else was a race before going into the International Special. Most trainers concede that a horse needs a race before he can show at his very best. It was an unfortunate part of the conditions that Epinard was not permitted to race until he went to the post for his international engagement while some of the horses that opposed him have been racing right along, among them Wise Counsellor.

Think Epinard Was Short.

It was the opinion of some close observing horsemen after the race yesterday that Epinard was just slightly short and that that accounted for the fact that he hung just slightly right at the finish. It was just enough to permit Wise Counsellor to draw away to win by three-quarters of a length.

Epinard made a remarkably fine appearance when he came upon the track. His coat was sleek and as far as the eye could detect he was trained to the minute. He was undoubtedly in as good shape as it was possible for his trainer to get him without giving him a race. Eugene Leigh, who trains Epinard, offered no excuses after the race, but before the contest began he said he wished Epinard could have raced once. He felt the French horse had become well acclimatized and he had reason to be well satisfied with the showing the son of Badajos made.

Epinard drew No. 1 post position. As he is a reputed fast breaker this appeared to be an advantage for him. It proved not to be. Epinard broke rather sluggishly and before Haynes could get him in motion at least four horses were in front of the French racer. That was the first break against him in the racing luck. Haynes took Epinard in behind the pacemakers and kept well up in running all through the back stretch, while Baffling and Miss Star were setting the pace. But at no time during this stage of the race was the field clear for Epinard to get through had Haynes wanted to go to the front with him.

Epinard Caught in Pocket.

The next break in the luck came when the horses were rounding the turn toward the head of the stretch. Haynes had moved out from the rail looking for a chance to go around the leaders, only to find that he was in a pocket, with Zev and Snob II. on the outside and no chance to break through. He could not do anything more than hold his position and watch for a chance.

Rounding the last part of the turn Haynes decided to go to the rail and take the chance that the other horses would swing wide when straightening out for home. Things turned out as he anticipated, and an opening loomed up on the rail right at the head of the stretch, through which Epinard was rushed.

This was the first time he had a chance to show his real speed, and he soon convinced the onlookers that he could run. In a few strides he had caught and passed Zev, which had moved momentarily into the lead, and then he began to draw away from his opposition. At that point it appeared that he would be the winner, for he was running very smoothly, but Wise Counsellor, which had come around the field at the last turn, moved up with a rush and soon was hooked up in a duel with the visitor. Though Epinard responded gamely to a few lashes of the whip, he gradually lost ground to Wise Counsellor, but it was not until the pair were within fifty yards of the finish that Epinard hung enough to permit Wise Counsellor to draw away.

His Action Is Smooth.

Though it has been said that Epinard has a peculiar gait when cantering, there was no criticism of his manner of running when he finally settled down to racing in the dash through the stretch. His action was smooth and he ran close to the ground, much after the manner of Grey Lag. Horsemen admitted that whatever fault might be found with his action in training it could not be made of his action in racing.

The fact that Epinard came all the way to this country only to meet with defeat in his first effort should not detract from his greatness but fairly racing should give due credit to a great three-year-old in Wise Counsellor. The Western colt is finally living up to the hopes and expectations of his many fanciers who long ago claimed he was the best of the year's three-year-olds, especially over the six-furlong route. He is a horse of great speed and thoroughly game and is no doubt one of the best sprinters in this country today. During the past month he has come to the top of his form and he was probably at his very best yesterday.

One of the disappointments of the race was Zev, conqueror of Papyrus last year and regarded by many as the colt most likely to take the measure of Epinard yesterday. Zev had worked in a manner to indicate he was again fit to test. However, he gave but one flash of speed throughout the race and that was of brief duration. Breaking from one of the outside positions he was on the outside of the field all through the early running but just as the horses were nearing the head of the stretch he moved up with a burst of speed and took the lead by half a length for about fifty yards. This was when Wise Counsellor and Epinard started making their moves. These colts caught Zev in a few strides and the Kentucky star was unable to race with them and had to be content with fifth place at the end. Baffling and Miss Star, which set a fast pace for the field in the first half mile, were well out of it in the stretch run. Both finished in the rear.

SETS A NEW RECORD IN PIKE'S PEAK CLIMB

COLORADO SPRINGS, Col., Sept. 1.—Otto Loesche of Connersville, Ind., today took permanent possession of the Penrose Cup by winning today's race up Pike's Peak in the remarkable time of 18 minutes 15 seconds, just two-fifths of a second faster than C. H. Myers of Colorado Springs. Both marks set new records.

Loesche finished the race today with a badly bent axle over the last three miles of the course. Perfect weather at the start suddenly shifted into a snowstorm mand finally into hail, seriously impeding the last starters. W. P. Benteup, third starter, finished in 20 minutes 19 seconds.

Lawton finished in 19 minutes 5 4-5 seconds. Rudd and Knight failed to finish. Clinn made the trip in 19 minutes 38 4-5 seconds. Cline reported it had begun to snow on the flats and visibility was becoming impaired. The distance covered by the twelve and one-half miles over the western highest motor road.

200 ATTEND PARTY IN HONOR OF PRINCE

POLICE INSPECT INVITATIONS

Heir to British Throne Dances With Several Guests, Then All Go to the Races.

The Prince of Wales yesterday enjoyed his first real party since his arrival in America when he was the guest of Mr. and Mrs. Harold Irving Pratt at luncheon at Welwyn, their country place at Glen Cove, L. I. There were about 200 guests at the luncheon, which was held out of doors, the tables being placed on the terrace overlooking the Sound.

At the Prince's table, which was placed beneath a large green and white awning, were his host and hostess, Miss Virginia Pratt, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John T. Pratt; Mr. and Mrs. Henry Rogers Winthrop, Mrs. Devereux Milburn, Louis Stoddard, Mrs. J. Watson Webb, Lady Mountbatten, Irving Pratt and Brig. Gen. G. F. Trotter.

The guests were invited for 12:30 o'clock. A few minutes before that time motor cars began to whirl up the drives of the Pratt estate, halting now and then to produce their invitation cards at the insistence of the blue-coated police and Pinkerton detectives.

The Prince arrived in a motor car and was met by a group that included his host, his host's son, Irving Pratt; John T. Pratt and John Pratt Jr. The group walked through the pine grove and up the terraces to the assembled guests, where they were met by Mrs. Pratt, who presented other guests.

The Prince wore a gray flannel suit with a white stripe. His Panama hat with a brim turned down completely all around, had a narrow black band. He wore a blue shirt with soft blue collar and brown suede shoes. A red and blue silk handkerchief was thrust into his upper coat pocket. Constantly fingering the tie and wiping his brow with the gray handkerchief, the heir to the British throne appeared nervous, but withal he was in a laughing holiday mood. He proudly exhibited the blisters on his hands which he bore as a result of his exercise with the polo squad.

During the dancing the Prince danced with Mrs. Harold Pratt, Miss Virginia Pratt and several of the débutantes and members of the young married set.

the popping of the cycles that their raiders were to go away.

August Belmont Meets Party.

The run after that was without incident, and soon the Prince, Mrs. Winthrop, Major Metcalfe, Major Solbert, Brig. Gen. Trotter, Inspectors Burt and Carlson of Scotland Yard and the rest of the party were at the private enclosure of the Turf and Field Club at the extreme east end of the grand stand. There they were met by August Belmont and other officials of the Westchester Racing Association.

Mr. Belmont led the Prince and his party to his own box and presented his wife, Mrs. Perry Belmont and Mrs. Clarence Mackay. Mrs. John F. Hylan, who sat in the next box, greeted the Prince a moment later and then the Mayor himself appeared and renewed an acquaintance that began when the Prince arrived on his first visit to this country and was received in state at the City Hall.

Mayor Hylan expressed his eagerness to do anything he could to further the pleasure of the royal visitor's vacation. The Prince expressed his thanks and told of pleasant and grateful recollections of his previous reception.

Just then the band away down in the middle of the grand stand struck up "God Save the King." The notes reached the Belmont box only dimly, and whole sections of the vast park area where men and women were chatting and laughing failed to hear them at all. Some thousands in the Prince's immediate vicinity either saw him as he stood in the box exchanging pleasantries or were made aware of his presence within a second or two when the British colors were hoisted to the staff that tops the box. Most of those in the park could not see the flag.

Prince Seems Embarrassed.

With that there was handclapping and cheering. Those who heard the British anthem stood up. Others stood up to see what it was all about. Mouth-to-mouth telegraphy carried the word that the Prince had come, and the applause grew. It seemed to embarrass the Prince a little, as applause always does, and he betrayed that restlessness that usually characterizes him when he is a cynosure.

The people, through the press, had been schooled in the visitor's own wishes as to his reception, and there was no effort to prolong the demonstration, which subsided as the horses went to the barrier for the second race.

When that had been run the Prince, with Scotland Yard men and agents of the American State Department hovering near, left the box with Mr. and Mrs. Belmont, Mrs. Perry Belmont, Mrs. Mackay and Mrs. Richard Derby, daughter of Theodore Roosevelt. They made their way into the paddock just as the sleek animals were being led in for the big event of the day and while the blown mounts that had just performed were being unsaddled and blanketed.

There was a rush for the paddock fence and more cheering. Several thousand pressed themselves into a sweltering mass that gave forth a volley of cheers. Those inside the paddock ringed the Prince, wavering between the instinct to be polite and the desire to go home and tell how nearly they had seen him. About that time Captain R. W. Fox got his fifty policemen into concerted action and soon the crowd was under control and the paddock was cleared. Then the photographers had their innings, the Prince exhibiting patience and tractably allowing his appearance to be recorded from all angles.

Prince Goes to Judges' Stand.

As Epinard, Zev and Wise Counsellor were ridden out on the track, Mr. Belmont and Joseph E. Widener with two State troopers and a squad of policemen to make the going easy, led the Prince to the judges' stand. That gave the crowd the best chance and it took it.

The applause died away, the race started and was run and soon the Prince was shaking hands with and congratulating the owner of Wise Counsellor, new prancing in all the pride of victory.

So far as one could learn, the Prince bet nothing on the race. In fact, a moist and uncomfortable Scotland Yard inspector, who had no idea when he packed his luggage what a Long Island thermometer could register on Labor Day and so was glad to withstand the chill of a foggy day in London, confided that he himself had ranged about looking for the "bookies" but had been unable to find any. He did not say that his search was in behalf of the Prince.

Edward Albert said quick good-byes after the big race had been run, ran the gantlet of his admirers once more and soon was edging through a narrow lane of humanity and climbing back into his car.

There was a speedy run back to the Burden place, interrupted, however, about half way when there was a blowout. The Prince's car skidded to a standstill, the cars of his companions banked up behind it, and then there slid out of the dust an empty Rolls-Royce, whereupon it developed that Princes have a neat way of traveling with a trailer, so that if one car breaks down they can carry on in another. So the Prince did.

Takes Part in Polo Game.

The Prince's day that was to end with the dinner and dance at which he "lost" himself as successfully as he did on Sunday night began at 9 o'clock in the morning with a dip in the pool on the Burden place, after which he had breakfast and soon appeared dressed for polo, and was driven over to the field on the W. R. Grace estate, where he had practiced on Sunday.

There were about 200 persons there, including Devereux Milburn, and other notables in American polo, other members of the Meadow Brook Club, stars of the British team and guests of the Graces.

It was decided to curtail the regulation match and play only six periods of seven and a half minutes each, instead of eight. The teams were divided into White and Red, the shirts of the players distinguishing their sides. No. 1 of the White team was the Prince of Wales, No. 2, Major Metcalfe, No. 3, W. A. Harriman, and back, Louis E. Stoddard. On the Red team were, No. 1, Russell Grace; No. 2, Stewart Ingleheart; No. 3, Robert E. Strawbridge, and back, W. G. Loew.

The game lasted from 10:20 to 11:55 and was hard fought, except that the Prince's ponies, each distinguished by red silk on its martingales, were a little bit less hard pressed when the Prince bestrode them than were the others, for Edward Albert, after all, is heir to the British throne, and every one takes a little pains to see that nothing untoward happens to him.

Still, the Prince had plenty of sport and once more won plaudits for his horsemanship, some of the friendliest and most authoritative watchers even committing themselves to the opinion that he was a better rider than polo player. The Prince's team won by a score of 7 to 5, and when the winning goal was scored in the last chukker the Prince had the satisfaction of doing his share toward the victory by riding off the interference.

Gets Cigarette From Groom.

After the game, while the Prince stood muffled in a heavy white sweater, edged in his Guard's colors, a complication arose. The young man wanted a cigarette and specified the brand of his preference. It is a widely advertised brand, to obtain which some persons are said to make great efforts in the line of pedestrianism. But it chanced that when a half dozen or so of the wealthy group who surrounded the visitor snapped open a choice assortment of gold, silver and leather cases, not one contained that particular brand. Happily a groom came to the rescue and produced the desired smoke.

That want supplied, the Prince returned to his home, leaving it after a dip and a change of attire, for his evening's diversion.

When that was over he was speeding back to Syosset in a cloud of dust, trailed by a half-dozen or so cars when a motorcycle policeman, catching up with the last one, which happened to be filled with journalists, demanded to know why so much haste.

"Hell, is that the Prince?" he exclaimed excitedly and, forgetting all about the speed laws, pop-popped himself to the head of the procession and stayed there, tooting his horn, until the limits of his town were reached.

Captain E. Lascelles, who suffered chills on the Berengaria, had recovered yesterday and resumed his duties on the Prince's staff.

Because of the number of newspaper men assigned to move with the Prince, the Western Union Telegraph Company announced last night that it had opened press headquarters in the Long Island Railroad station at Syosset and installed special wires.

NEW YORK, TUESDAY, SEPT. 2, 1924.

A LEAGUE VERY MUCH ALIVE.

If, as Professor FAY stated at Williamstown last week on good authority, President WILSON viewed without bitterness in his closing days our failure to join the League of Nations, and even saw with hopefulness its continuance as a living institution capable of growth without our assistance, he would be overjoyed at the signs of its vigor as the fifth Assembly begins its sessions. It has passed the period of infant mortality and finds its "expectancy" increased with every added year.

The attention which the League is receiving is itself evidence of its growing importance in the eyes of the nations. Four years ago, when the first Assembly was held, forty-one nations were represented. Today there are delegates from fifty-four. Four years ago the only unimportant nations unrepresented were then characterized as "unhappy Russia, unrepentant Germany, uncertain America and unasked Mexico." These same nations are today the only absentees, big or small, except Turkey, then unrecognized, Afghanistan, Ecuador, which is at the threshold; Egypt and the Dominican Republic. No Premier gave his countenance to the first Assembly. At this session the Premiers of three European Powers will be present: HERRIOT of France, MACDONALD of Great Britain and THEUNIS of Belgium. Popular interest is shown by the coming of from 15,000 to 20,000 visitors to Geneva, by the presence of 400 newspaper men and by the fact that there are scores of applications for every seat in the chamber where the Assembly sits. Among the 50 successful American applicants, out of more than 200, are such outstanding men as former Attorney General WICKERSHAM, General TASKER BLISS, former Justice CLARKE and Mr. LAMONT. Their presence suggests the interest which "uncertain America" still takes in a "foreign agency"—the President being certain on the one hand that we cannot ever associate ourselves, this being a "closed incident," and many others being as certain on the other hand that such an association is inevitable; for in a few years it will, otherwise, be America alone outside of the League—America isolated except for her private citizen cooperation in a world where all the rest are joined in an effort to assure justice and peace under a plan of her own official suggestion.

Evidence of the vitality of the League is not to be found in these external signs. It is to be searched for within, in the achievements of these few years and in the definiteness and firmness of its purpose. Mr. ARTHUR SWEETSER, an American who holds the position of Assistant Director of the Information Section of the Secretariat at Geneva, sums up the accomplishments of the League thus far in a report just published:

> The League has become a centre of conference, cooperation and conciliation among sovereign states working together through a common mechanism in certain admittedly international interests. It has settled several serious disputes, the Alands, Albania, Upper Silesia, Memel; has admittedly saved Austria and Hungary; has created a world court of law; has helped toward world reconstruction in matters of finance, economics, transit and health; has created a new kind of international administration in mandates, the Saare, Danzig; has sheafed together many existing but languishing international efforts such as control of the opium and white slave traffics; has coordinated many isolated and struggling international activities, has repatriated half a million prisoners, has aided thousands of Greek and Russian refugees, and so on through many branches of common international effort.

Intangible contributions are greater than these indications in the small of what may be done in the large. Opportunity has been given to criticize, without "giving offense" the conduct of any member nation. The cure may lie in the hands of others, but in most cases will be in the mere publicity and the moral influence of the very utterance.

The scene at Geneva is one to give hope, in spite of all the hazards. The great majority of the people of the earth are officially represented in an assemblage without the sign of sword or uniform, to promote "moral disarmament," and the "peace and prosperity of humanity," to use the phrase of M. MOTTA in welcoming its members four years ago. Fifty-four nations, without America, at any rate are proving that they can get on by themselves. Can we without them? That is a question we shall have to be answering some day if we stay outside the League.

LABOR DAY ORATORY.

Organized labor can take care of its enemies, but who will deliver it from its friends? Some such doubt or fear must remain in the minds of workingmen not easily pulled, after the oratorical blandishments addressed to them on Labor Day. Their ordinary and natural suspicions in matters political must have been heightened. Why this sudden and consuming devotion to their particular interests? Labor Day has often been made the occasion of insincere or selfish utterance, but a Labor Day like the present, celebrated at the very beginning of a Presidential campaign in which appeals for the votes of the workers are evidently to be more open than ever, could not but let loose a flood of eloquence and monotony. If organized labor can take it all in and believe it, it is tougher and more enduring than any one thought.

In addition to suspecting candidates who flatter and cultivate them from the outside, members of labor unions have reason for concern over the attitude and activities of some of their own officials. It is a great time both for bidding for the support of organized labor and for various officers of the unions to secure eligible positions from the various National Committees. If the Republicans get a President of one union, the Democrats must immediately retort by securing the services of another. Quite a number have already accepted "appointments" to look out for the labor vote in one State for COOLIDGE and in another for DAVIS. This is an old political manoeuvre. Veteran observers smile at it. But what will the rank and file of the men think about it? If they are cynical, they will say that they are being sold out. If they are merely prudent and cautious, they will conclude that the labor unions and the real concerns of workingmen are in danger of suffering injury by the unparalleled and unblushing way in which the labor element of the population is being played with in the present campaign.

It would be tedious to review in detail the speeches made yesterday by the leading candidates for office. President COOLIDGE, in effect, exhorted the labor union men who went to the White House to rest and be thankful. Mr. DAVIS, who disavowed the idea of making a political speech on Labor Day, maintained at Wheeling that workingmen should be proud of what they had achieved, but ought not to stop until they had secured for themselves and their fellow-citizens full equality before the law, and entire freedom to think, to speak, to agitate, always within the law. The day was one of repose for General DAWES, but Governor BRYAN made a long and partisan address, the import of which was that farmers and workers had identical interests and should think twice before abandoning the Democratic Party. It was naturally left for Senator LA FOLLETTE and his running mate, Senator WHEELER, to carry off the honors of the day for sweeping denunciations, personal abuse and vague promises of a millennium for the workers. It was truly hard labor to which they condemned their hearers and readers. If Senator LA FOLLETTE adheres to his announced purpose to make two speeches a day, each two and a half hours long, he will have left his auditors so exhausted that they will have strength neither to register nor to vote.

A PEANUT SHELL GAME.

If young September seems "all het up," the philosopher forgets it in the more generous ardor with which the goober swears to live and die with the sugar cane and the sugar beet. The National Peanut, Shellers and Cleaners' Association is to implore Mr. COOLIDGE to stand fast by the tariff rates on sugar, so obnoxious to "free traders." Mr. LA FOLLETTE and the millions of consumers unworthy of their blessings. The Southern Tariff Association gives the weight of its bright and venerable name to this solicitation. The sons of the sandy lands that rejoice in "peanuts and hogs" are aroused to their tariff duty. They see the necessity of a magnanimous combination. The official voice of organized peanuts cries that "the agricultural interests of the nation must make common cause with the sugar industry or we will be destroyed one by one."

Peanuts are a great Southern crop. We speak of it with all respect. No feeder of a Central Park squirrel but pays a tribute to that industry. Not till the Fordney-McCumber tariff was anything like justice done to the groundnut. The Payne-Aldrich rate on unshelled peanuts was ¼ cent a pound; the Underwood rate ⅜ cent; the Fordney-McCumber is 3 cents; on shelled, 1 cent, ¾ cent, 4 cents, respectively. In 1922 the Republican majority of the Senate Finance Committee humorously proposed the reduction of the peanut rates. This was for the purpose, presumably, of putting tariff-for-revenue Democrats "on record" as protectionists in regard to products of their own region or district; and nine Democratic Senators "fell for" the trick. Subsequently the peanut interests had their way. Much of the testimony was edifying. A Cleveland peanut-buttermaker, a high old protectionist, said that a number of persons who run "shellers" and cleaning factories summoned him to Washington:

> They said they would like to get 3 cents. I told them that was much too high, and if they could get 1½ or 2 cents it would be extreme. They told me at that time that 2 cents would be entirely satisfactory, but that they were going to ask for 3 cents in the hope of getting 2. They are now asking for 3 or 4 cents, which is practically no protective tariff, but a stone wall.

The United Peanut Associations shuddered at the pauper peanut labor of China and Japan. They had no figures of production, but they got the steep rates they asked. The peanut, as one of its Virginian champions has said, "has been the symbol of the things which are small in this life." The small thing was honored with a big duty. It is affecting to see the beanutters standing on a stone wall of protection and cheering the sugar growers. The Underwood rate on sugar was 1.25 cents a pound. The Fordney-McCumber rate is only 2.20. In comparison with peanuts, sugar has been starved rather than fattened. This proposed solidarity of peanut, beet and cane should remind other "agricultural interests of the nation," now too much inclined to regard protection as a "gold brick," of what they owe to that good old shore-going craft, the Ark of Protection. Democratic passengers especially welcome.

THE PRESIDENT ON GUN ELEVATIONS.

President COOLIDGE is entirely right in refusing to sanction the elevation of guns on the capital ships of the United States fleet. Great Britain having protested to Japan as well as to the United States, nothing should be done to change the mountings of guns until all the nations party to the Washington Treaty have conferred and the controversy has been settled. It cannot be decided by the President of the United States. The impression that Great Britain is meanly endeavoring to subordinate the American capital ships to her own may do her an injustice. It would be incredibly stupid of Great Britain to file a protest against gun elevations if she did not believe that reference to the work of the naval experts who advised the conference at Washington would justify her. In this point of view she may, of course, be wrong, but at least her sincerity should not be lightly questioned. When tables of comparative ranges are quoted by proponents of elevation on American ships we seem to have somewhat the worst of it. The spirit of the treaty is apparently violated. However, the British believe that the pendulum would swing far the other way if there were further elevation of American guns. Mr. ARCHIBALD HURD speaks for the British Admiralty, no doubt, when, in an article in the August Fortnightly Review, he says of range tables which he has prepared:

> The following particulars of the size, elevation and range of the guns of the two fleets should convince the American people that the bargain struck at Washington was not a one-sided one, particularly as all new capital ships, in specified numbers, laid down from 1921 onward must conform to the accepted standard in displacement and gun power.

If Mr. HURD is right about the comparative ranges which he works out in the case of elevations of 30 degrees, ships of the American fleet would outrange the British by from 2,000 to 5,500 yards. It is to be feared that the experts will never agree about parity. If American ships outrange British ships, the latter have greater speed. If bore diameter of British guns is larger in some instances, American ships carry larger main batteries, giving them greater power of volley fire. If America is at a disadvantage in light cruisers, she has a marked superiority in more numerous and better destroyers. In its July number The Scientific American had this to say:

> The allocation of capital ships to each Power was determined by the leading naval officers of each navy. It was no mere layman's job. Our own officers, largely members of the General Board of the Navy, knew perfectly well what they were doing, and the public may rest assured that they took very good care to protect the interests of our navy and see to it that the eighteen capital ships selected would fully equal those selected for Great Britain, and were in proper proportion to those allowed Japan. Press articles seek to persuade the American public that our eighteen ships are inferior to those of Great Britain. Personally, we believe that the advantage, if there be any, lies with us.

President COOLIDGE has a laudable object in setting his face against arbitrary alteration of gun mountings on our fleet, which some officers would like to see him authorize. He is thinking of further limitation of armaments and believes that it would certainly not be promoted—on the contrary, that competition in armaments might be provoked—if we elevated our guns without waiting for an international settlement of the dispute.

THE EVACUATION SCHEDULE.

Although the date for the flotation of the German loan has not yet been announced, the signature of the London agreements last Saturday made the preliminary measures of the Dawes plan effective beginning Sept. 1. According to the London protocols, on that date the passage of the necessary laws by Germany was to have been completed. This has been done, Germany was also to make the first payment of 20,000,000 gold marks. Mr. YOUNG yesterday notified the German Government that he was ready to receive this sum. On Sept. 9 the customs barriers between the Ruhr area and unoccupied Germany are to be withdrawn. Two days later Germany is due to make her second payment, and the French and Belgian Governments are to pay to the Agent General for Reparations a portion of the sums which they have collected from local German tariffs. On Sept. 22 the final restrictions and taxes on the movement of goods and people in the occupied regions will be removed and only such taxes as are imposed in the rest of Germany will be collected. These will be administered by the French and Belgians until the final evacuation, the receipts to be paid to Mr. YOUNG. By Oct. 7 the various committees and subcommittees must be ready to go to work, the bank of issue and railroad company must be formed, and certificates of the railroad and industrial bonds must be deposited in the hands of the trustee. On Oct. 22 the French and Belgians must have completed the economic evacuation of the entire Ruhr area, and the plan will be formally in operation. The military evacuation of Dortmund and other outlying portions of the Ruhr region will go hand in hand with this economic evacuation. By Aug. 30, 1925, the last soldier is to be out of the Ruhr.

The economic effects of this program of evacuation will be great. But the moral effects will probably have even more significance. Ever since the cessation of passive resistance and the resumption of work and export the customs barriers placed by the French and Belgians have been even more of a sentimental than of an economic impediment. To be sure, the various restrictions and taxes weighed heavily on business. But the mere fact of the existence of the occupation and of the system of control was a constant source of irritation to the German people. This was naturally used by the politicians to stir up animosity against the Allies and to foster the spirit of revenge.

It will be some months, even after Oct. 22, before there are marked signs of recuperation. Many small details will doubtless arise to block progress, and during the first year, at least, there will be many appeals to the arbiters to settle disputed points. But at last the task of German reconstruction has been put on a basis that promises to be practicable. The measures during the next few weeks are only preliminary to the real work to come, but they are measures which are sure to strengthen the spirit of cooperation.

HASTY IOWA FARMERS.

The Iowa Farm Bureau Federation seems to have an erroneous notion of the places of agriculture and politics in the order of precedence. The members took an unfair advantage of "Farm Bureau Day" at the State Fair to send Mr. COOLIDGE something like a telegram of reproof in the shape of a resolution. This recited that on July 31 the American Council of Agriculture, with which the bureau is associated, requested the President to direct the Secretary of Agriculture to appoint a commission to study the needs of agriculture, "and to recommend to the December session of Congress remedial legislation to place agriculture on an equality with industry and labor under our protective system." The Council has had no reply save a formal acknowledgment. In his speech of acceptance the President declared his purpose to appoint a commission. The Iowa Farm Bureau Federation, having "full confidence in the Secretary of Agriculture's ability, honesty of purpose and understanding of the problems of agriculture," approves the Council's request and urges Mr. COOLIDGE to direct Mr. WALLACE to appoint the commission without delay.

Mr. WALLACE's understanding of the problems of agriculture includes approbation of the celebrated but unfortunate Haugen-McNary bill; but, presumably, the commission, when appointed, will be found to represent various shades of opinion about "remedial legislation" for the benefit or supposed benefit of the farmers. The leaders of their organizations are seldom able to agree; but that is neither here nor there. The Iowa Farm Bureau Federation can't be ignorant of and shouldn't be ungrateful for what the Republicans did last week to help the "grain belts of the Middle West" in general, and Iowa in particular. Mr. JOHN M. ANDERSON, Speaker of the Iowa House of Representatives, described as an authentic, a "dirt" farmer, was made Director of the Republican National Committee's Agricultural Bureau. This bureau "was created in conformity with President COOLIDGE's policy of giving the farmers an active part in conducting the G. O. P. campaign." What more can the Iowa farmers ask? Here is an Agricultural Bureau with a real farmer as its chief, devoting himself to the task of trying to remedy the dissatisfaction of Republican farmers with the Republican Party. This remedy must be found and applied before election day. Naturally it has precedence over more distant "remedial legislation."

NATIONALISM IN INDIA.

Adjournment of the Indian Provincial Legislatures has left the British authorities confronted with the task of finding a way out of the impasse created by the obstructive tactics of the Swaraj or militant nationalists. In the Central Provinces, where the nationalists won an absolute majority in the Legislature, the session was fruitless and government is being carried on by executive decree. In Bengal the Opposition succeeded in rejecting the vote on Ministers' salaries, and there, too, recourse has been had to a special order from the Central Government permitting an interim budget. Government by decree is not a process welcome to those who would see the people of India win their way to complete self-rule in the course of time. But so good a friend as Lord OLIVIER, the Secretary of State for India, has intimated that if obstruction continues the home authorities may be driven to ignore the Legislatures. That would be a confessed break-down of the reformed Constitution or "dyarchy" at the very moment when a grand commission is preparing to investigate its operation and extension.

Nationalist opposition continues to be aggressive in spite of increasing signs of dissension within the nationalist movement, using that term in the broadest sense. Between the followers of GANDHI, who are non-political, and the followers of C. R. DAS, the principal leader of Swaraj, there has arisen a sharp conflict, which, according to some observers, has only been temporarily postponed by a compromise formula adopted at the All-India Congress late in June. GANDHI's non-cooperation calls for a boycott of the Legislatures. He has said that he has not the slightest interest in any measure of self-government which Great Britain might grant. His concern is with a popular risorgimento to be attained through the boycott of machine-made textiles and the revival of the spinning wheel, prohibition of alcohol and drugs, the redemption of the "untouchables" or outcaste classes and the permanent reconciliation of Hindus and Mohammedans. The Swarajists insist on going into the Legislatures, for the very purpose of creating a governmental deadlock. This, as the more militant policy, is said to have the stronger appeal to the Indian masses, though GANDHI's personal influence remains considerable. Full reverence is paid to his character, with minor consideration for his tactics.

The specific complaint of the Swaraj politicals is that the dyarchic system of reserved and transferred governmental powers is a farce. The departments that really count are reserved for the Executive. They assert that the people at present have the power to vote on less than one-seventh of the total budget of the Central Government. In the present state of British temper it is likely that this complaint would receive serious consideration provided the nationalist representatives showed an inclination to cooperate instead of going in for sheer obstruction. It is a situation which impels even The Manchester Guardian to say that "no advance toward provincial autonomy is possible unless the Indian members are in the Councils not to destroy the Constitution but to work it."

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Perilous Swim In a Cavern. In the current issue of The National Geographic Magazine Nomert Casteret gives a half "popular" and half scientific account of the discovery by him in a cave under a foothill of the Pyrenees, near the little town of Montespan, of clay statues and wall carvings made at least 20,000 years ago. A brief account of this find already has appeared in the press dispatches, but the explorer's own narrative makes clearer both the number and the historic importance of these relics, dating back to the glacial era and a time when there were lions and tigers, as well as reindeer and bison, in this part of Europe, as well as the decidedly desperate chances which he took before he achieved his success.

The entrance to the cave had long been known to the peasants in the neighborhood, but they also knew that not far from the entrance it became so contracted that the little river flowing from it filled the space quite up to the roof and made further progress impossible—for them. M. CASTERET, who had traversed many such caves before, decided that probably, or at least perhaps, the tunnel widened out again at a further distance, long or short, in the mountain, and, taking a deep breath, he swam forward under water. Luck favored him, and before he had gone many feet he found it possible to breathe again. That much ascertained, he dove back again before he lost his sense of direction, a peril always to be feared in such places, and so escaped.

At his next trip he provided himself with candles and matches, wrapped in a bathing cap, and having passed what he calls the "siphon," he was able to inspect the region beyond. Wading and climbing, he penetrated the cavern for three-quarters of a mile, but made no discoveries of prehistoric remains then, because he took what he afterward found was a wrong turning where, by a big column, the cave divided. A year later, with a companion, but still with the same curiously simple equipment, he entered the cave again, took the right turning, and soon had indubitable proof that in ancient time it had been a place of resort, if not of residence, by men with the impulse as well as the ability to make rude but recognizable representations of the animals on which they lived and with which they fought for their lives.

A Place for Practicing Magical Arts. A peculiarity of the "statues" found in the Montespan cave is that those of the beasts of prey—big felines of several kinds—all had been pierced repeatedly by lance or arrow thrusts, while those of the food animals showed no such marks. From this the plausible deduction is made that the figures had been used in the performance of magical rites, the one sort symbolically slain and the others protected and honored.

Magic of this kind, usually called "homeopathic magic," has existed all over the world and still does among savages. Indeed, traces of its survival can be observed among civilized folk almost everywhere.

As pictured in The Geographic Magazine, it takes something of imagination to see in the clay figures and the wall drawings all that M. CASTERET sees in them—a gleam of artistic ability, that is—but time and the dripping water, carrying and depositing lime, have been cruel to the art of the ancient sculptors, and it is remarkable that anything of their work is left. They were not favored, as were the builders of royal tombs in Egypt, by a dry climate. Their only tools were rudely fashioned flints, of which great numbers were found in the cave, as well as many bones, including a few that were human. It is the state of the flints that makes possible an approximate determination of the time when the utensils were made and used.

Access to the cave has been made easier now, partly by diverting the water from it and partly by hastening its flow by clearing the outlet, so that at present visitors do not have to risk their lives, but the place remains damp and uncomfortable, attractive only to archaeologists. The neighborhood, however, as the many photographs show, is beautiful, and the tourist, if he chooses, can think deep thoughts about Mme. DE MONTESPAN, whose now ruined castle, or rather, whose husband's ruined castle—he wouldn't let her come back to it, even to die—crowns the neighboring hilltop.

He Falls Not Off but With. All the reporters who have observed the riding of the Prince of Wales, or of Lord Renfrew, if he insists, on the polo field, agree in stating that he has been cruelly maligned by those who have been having such fun over his fourteen falls. The falls are historic, but they are spread over two years of pretty constant hunting and steeplechasing, and those who know say that fourteen isn't at all a bad record for even the best of riders amusing themselves in such ways.

The Prince himself, showing just a bit of irritation, as well he might, when questioned on this matter, asserted with vigor that never once had he fallen from a horse, but only had fallen with a horse. That is a distinction with a difference, and certainly all the snapshots that have revealed the Prince's mishaps as a rider showed his horse down as well as himself.

As he always has escaped more than trivial injuries in these accelerated dismountings, they may be taken as proving him not a poor horseman, but a notably good one. Why shouldn't he be? He is young, healthy, courageous, has had no end of practice, and must have received the best of training.

It's a Tickle Because It's Ticklish. There is interest for the investigators of words in Ice Tickle, the name of the place on the Labrador coast where the American aviators landed after their flight from Greenland. All through that part of the world, in Newfoundland and Nova Scotia, as well as "on the Labrador," the folk thereabout always say, a narrow bit of water, especially if it be one hard to navigate, is called a "tickle," and while they all are "ice tickles" so much of the time that putting the two words together cannot make a very distinctive name, yet seemingly it has been considered distinctive enough for that particular passage between island and mainland.

English speakers in gentler climes do not have "tickle" in the sense of a waterway, but they have "ticklish" as meaning not exactly dangerous, but as requiring the exercise of a lot of care and skill to get out of a place or situation.

The relation between the two usages is obvious, but not at all clear is it why, in either instance, the difficulties encountered should be thought of as tickling. Or does apprehension produce the same sensation at the nerve terminals as does the kind of manipulation of the skin that is so denominated?

The Significance of Sheets.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Included in the dispatch in today's TIMES from your correspondent on board the President's special train he says:

> Just below Proctor a farmer and his wife, waving sheets, were noticed by the President, and he went to the door and acknowledged their greetings. * * *

Kian there be any significance in waving sheets at the President?

BECALMED.

In a seaman's chest from over sea
My sandalwood fan was brought to me,
Who live, hemmed in, where high hills be.

When life seems dull, I open it—
This lacquered box, made just to fit
A gift so rare and exquisite.

Then drugged by its faint, elusive scent
Are my little cares and discontent,
While I drift with the spell of the Orient.

'Neath the moghra tree a lover sings
To the plaintive wail of zither strings.

When the sun is high, until daylight fades
I feast my eyes on rich brocades—
Through my fingers filter gems and jades.

* * * * *

My sandalwood fan from over sea
Like a magic galleon is to me,

AMERICAN RIGHTS IN TURKEY

To the Editor of The New York Times:

A report from Constantinople, bearing all the marks of authenticity, states that Dr. Edgar J. Fisher, Professor of History in the famous American institution Robert College, has been required to leave Turkey. He is alleged to have "indulged in anti-Turkish propaganda" in a lecture delivered not in the city but on board a tourist steamer (I believe under the British flag) in the harbor. The threat is said to have been issued of closing the college unless Dr. Fisher were dismissed.

The American college was established under solemn and binding firman in the 1860s; it has always enjoyed for itself and its faculty the highest degree of autonomy. No such incident, displaying a studiously insulting attitude toward Americans, took place, unless I am much mistaken, during all the blundering tyranny of "Abdul the Damned," the Red Sultan of the original Armenian massacres.

Of course, this and similar happenings (e. g., the harassment of the American Y. M. C. A. in Constantinople) will mean nothing to those Western friends of the Kemalist "republic" to whom economic concessions cover a multitude of sins. They will be minimized or sneered at by that type of student of the Near East who can read history only in terms of dollars, to whom humanitarian or religious considerations weigh little and to whom the Turk seems possibly a slightly better man because he is neither Jew nor Christian. It leaves one more item, however, to be explained when Americans are asked to urge their Senators to ratify the Treaty of Lausanne, to forget about Armenia, Smyrna and the great deportations, and only to remember that there are great oil fields in Anatolia.

Is it discourteous again to wonder how Mr. Hughes (a high-minded statesman in the eyes of every candid opponent) has justified to his private as well as to his official conscience one of the most abject and apparently needless surrenders ever made in the story of American diplomacy? Can we be assured that one-fortieth of the effort has been put forth to protect the rights of Americans in Turkey, where questions of humanity and religion have been at stake, that there have been exerted to protect the rights of Americans in Mexico, where matters only material and financial have been at stake?

The undersigned is a Republican, but with many other Republicans he wishes that his party had joined in a certain statement in the recent Democratic national platform: "We condemn the Treaty of Lausanne. It barters legitimate American rights and betrays Armenia for the Chester oil concessions."

After the Fisher episode it will not be easy to contend that American educators and philanthropic workers in Turkey are free agents if they urge that it is our duty to ratify the pending treaty, or apologize for the present Ottoman Government. The affair is also sufficient commentary upon the value of those professions thrust by Turks upon American visitors that they desire our assistance in the cultural regeneration of their country. The coffee-cups doubtless click pleasantly for important strangers in Angora; meantime Emin Bey in Stamboul continues to banish and harry the Jews, and to close up every foreign school possible. And, meantime also, another reason (if another reason was necessary) is supplied why the conscience of America should hail the approval of any compact of friendship bestowing a formal sanction upon the Kemalist oligarchy.

Men and Monkeys.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Dr. Copeland urges every man to watch vigilantly for hard lumps—they may indicate cancer. Recently I felt a hard lump; did not know whether bone or cancer; so decided to go to the American Museum of Natural History to inspect a man's skeleton. If such a bone showed up, well and good; if not, then me for the doctor.

I finally located a glass case in which were displayed the skeletons of a man and a chimpanzee; saw the latter first—and there was the bone all right. I felt better; but then looked at the man's skeleton and found no such bone at all. Consternation! Colonel Bryan would know how I felt.

Resolving not to tell a living soul, I wandered on, and then found, on another floor, in another glass case, the skeletons of a man and a gorilla, each having the mysterious bone.

Seemingly the Museum authorities wish to represent the chimpanzee as more humanlike than is a human being himself. The Colonel and myself have a right to insist that a more perfect man skeleton be used in the comparison, or that the bone in question be chipped off the chimpanzee. No invidious distinctions should be permitted.

So far no one has called me a monkey; but I understand the Colonel has had some hot arguments. He thought that some pseudo-scientist had intimated that every one descended from a monkey, and the Colonel kicked at that. He is always a gentleman, but stubborn, and a Democrat, and a very combative non-military ex-Colonel. The elephant may represent a Republican, but no Democrat stands for a monkey.

The scientists believe that men ascended from something far lower than monkeys. However, the Colonel, somewhat of a scientist himself, goes them one better and has printed records to show that man came from dust—not from monkeys.

To Disarm "Great Seas."

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Every once in a while an experienced sea captain says, "Worst storm in forty years."

Although the words imply that the Atlantic must be getting rougher, old Neptune knows that the unwillingness to slow down is the real explanation, and his "terrific" seas are merely as other seas have always been—the faster you run into them the more like granite they become—and the ship's record is hurt by a too ready willingness to "lay to."

The Atlantic shipping record stands as always, but there is no authentic case of a shipwreck because of merely heavy seas.

To the Editor of The New York Times:

Oil to windward would have stopped the breaking of those great waves on the Arabic. Also on the dredge at Atlantic City and the Wanderer, off New Bedford.

There are a dozen ways of placing oil to windward. The Patent Office has plans with guns, rockets, &c.

One claims that a steamer could sail to Europe in a "slick" all the way by throwing the oil cartridge a mile or two ahead!

To the Editor of The New York Times:

It is true that we are a fight-loving nation, and that we are exuberantly happy and boisterously healthy, still it is quite disappointing that when three score reporters swooped down upon the heir of the British throne, the coming ruler of one of the most important empires of the world, the questions asked related to his knowledge of poker and to his matrimonial plans. The world is undergoing the most momentous changes in history, but these reporters failed to touch upon such slight topics as the Labor Party, the League of Nations, &c.

HOPING PROGRAM WILL WIN

Mrs. Hamilton Wright Says Problem Now is to Persuade Producing Nations to Consent.

Limitation of the cultivation of the poppy, cocoa plant and other raw materials from which habit-forming drugs are made will be urged by American delegates at the Fourth International Conference for the Suppression of Habit-Forming Drugs, to be held in Geneva in November.

The program to be presented to the conference was outlined yesterday by Mrs. Hamilton Wright, one of the three international members, or assessors, of the Opium Advisory Committee of the League of Nations. Mrs. Wright has just returned from Geneva, where the committee, after preparatory discussion for six months, closed its sessions ten days ago, having finally agreed upon a program. Her husband, the late Dr. Hamilton Wright, for years waged warfare against the drug traffic and was responsible for The Hague Opium Convention.

"Fifty-two nations have been invited to put into effect the American proposals presented by Representative Stephen G. Porter a year ago, namely, that the cultivation of opium must be restricted to the medicinal needs of the world," said Mrs. Wright. "It is the contention of the United States that if the drug evil in this country is to be checked and this century-old evil solved, it must be met at the source. We know domestic legislation alone cannot stop the traffic. Therefore the prime consideration is how to win the cooperation of the producing nations and get them to consent to a limitation of cultivation of the drug-producing plants, with the accompanying reduction of revenue.

Crux of the Situation.

"After six months' struggle, a skeleton program has been drawn up as a basis of discussion for the conference. The crux is the limitation of production, as the restriction of manufacture, valuable and constructive as it is, only touches indirectly the root of the problem.

"The acceptance of the American principles a year ago marked the greatest step so far made to solve this perplexing problem. But the nations with financial interests at stake have had time to reconsider the situation, and there is not now the same willingness to carry out these principles. Certain nations frankly admit that it was only the 'grandes politiques' and a desire to win the cooperation of the United States that forced their hand at Geneva. They have never fundamentally changed their opinion, and only very vigorous, tactful and masterful leadership by the United States will ever get these principles into effect at the coming conference.

"We cannot blame the League of Nations if we fail to succeed. The League but plays host and lends us its machinery. The responsibility for the success of the conference will rest with the nations themselves. And the nation that knows clearly what it wants, and how to get it, will be the winner. The greatest responsibility of all rests with the United States, which now must defend its position and principles. We have already got fifty-four nations, willingly or unwillingly, to accept the most radical principles ever proposed, and if we are not clever enough to know how to put these principles into practical effect, the failure will be ours.

Still Dodging the Main Issue.

"The desire to avoid the main issue is as apparent as ever. Although a program committee was appointed to discuss the limitation of production, the work of the committee has centred almost completely on secondary issues, such as the restriction of manufacture. As for reduction of production, there has been no program drawn up and no real effort made to get into touch with the countries most concerned. Suggestions must be made to get them to welcome American principles without facing bankruptcy and serious labor problems. Opium farmers will resist, naturally, as opium production is their only source of livelihood. Another source, such as silk production, must be offered them.

"It is a difficult problem, but it can be met. And unless it is met the American principles never will be put into effect, and the only results of conferences will be talk and confusion."

BUYS A NEW PARK FOR $50.

Long Island Commission Takes Over Gardiner's Point.

The Long Island State Park Commission announced yesterday that it had acquired a new park at a cost of only $50. The United States War Department has transferred for that consideration a small spit of land known as Gardiner's Point in Gardiner's Bay.

Gardiner's Point is a sandy island of about three acres on which stands a picturesque "ruin" dating from Spanish War days. This is Fort Tyler, a concrete fortification that was hastily thrown up in 1898 when there were reports that the Spanish fleet was going to attack the north Atlantic coast. Owing to the quick ending of the war the guns of the fort were never placed in position. The concrete structure is in a fair state of preservation, with many inclosed rooms.

The new park site is swept by the breezes of Gardiner's Bay and Block Island Sound. It is about seven miles from Orient Point, and about ten miles from the new State park property on Montauk Point. There is deep water for anchorage off the west side of the island.

The fort has been abandoned and has been unoccupied since except by seagulls and occasional picnic parties. It was carried on the list of forts by the War Department, but the erection of formidable modern fortifications on Plum Island and Fisher's Island, in much better position to defend the eastern entrance to Long Island Sound, made it useless for military purposes.

The War Department recently decided to dispose of such useless military properties, and a bill was passed in Congress providing for the transfer of land to States, counties, cities and towns. New York City recently obtained ninety acres at a low price on Plum Beach, Jamaica Bay, through this bill.

ANITA B. DAMROSCH TO WED R. LITTELL

TROTH TOLD AT BAR HARBOR

Bride-to-Be is Returning on Friday From France, Where She Has Been Studying Music.

Mr. and Mrs. Walter Damrosch of 146 East Sixty-first Street, who are at present at Blaine Cottage, their Summer home at Bar Harbor, Me., have announced the engagement of their daughter, Miss Anita Blaine Damrosch, to Robert Littell, son of Mr. and Mrs. Philip Littell of this city. Miss Damrosch is a granddaughter of James G. Blaine, Secretary of State under President Garfield, and of Dr. Leopold Damrosch, founder of the Symphony and Oratorio Societies of this city. Her father is the famous orchestral director.

Mr. Littell is a graduate of Harvard and is an editor of The New Republic. He is a great-grandson of the founder of Littell's Living Age. His connection with The New Republic, no doubt, explains the mistake made by a newspaper in Paris last week, which published the announcement of Miss Damrosch's engagement to Robert Meras Lovett, editor of The New Republic. The announcement was copied in a number of newspapers in New York and elicited a prompt denial from Miss Damrosch in Paris, who said she was not even acquainted with Mr. Lovett, and from her relatives in this city.

Miss Damrosch is returning on the Paris on Friday, after spending the Summer in Paris, where she studied at the American Conservatory of Music at Fontainebleau. She is the youngest daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Damrosch and is a sister of Mrs. Pleasants Pennington of 244 East Sixty-first Street. She made her début in society three years ago, and soon after entered the American Society of Dramatic Arts.

No date has been set for the wedding.

Fry of New York and Edinburgh, Va., on Thursday afternoon at the Summer residence on Lake Mendota of the bride's brother-in-law, H. H. Brockhausen, and her sister, Miss Frieda Rummel Brockhausen.

Dr. George B. Hunt of Christ Presbyterian Church performed the ceremony, and the bride's father gave her in marriage.

Dr. and Mrs. Fry left for Washington, D. C., and will be at home after October in New York City. The bride was graduated from Dennison University, Granville, Ohio. During the last year she was a post-graduate student at the University of Wisconsin, and later associated with Burgess Laboratories as a chemist.

Barhet—Mauborgne.

The marriage of Miss Martha Josephine Mauborgne, daughter of Eugene C. Mauborgne of Corona, L. I., to William John Barhet took place yesterday at the Church of Our Lady of Sorrows. The Rev. William K. Dwyer officiated at the nuptial mass. The bride is a sister of Lieut. Col. Joseph O. Mauborgne of the Signal Corps, U. S. A. The couple will live in this city.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—The Rumanian Minister, Prince Bibesco, was host to a large company last evening at a buffet supper after the first presentation of his new play, "Married Life," which was given by the stock company at the Shubert-Belasco Theatre. Prince Bibesco asked his guests, who included diplomats and officials and a few members of the residential circles, to meet the members of the cast.

The Minister will sail for England next month to join Princess Bibesco and their children, who are spending the Summer with her parents, former Premier of England and Mrs. Herbert Asquith.

A Sembrich Pupil of Promise.

One of the greatest successes scored by the pupils of Mme. Marcella Sembrich in the musical program they contributed to the reception given in her honor by the Lake George Club last Friday evening was won by Miss Marie Edell, a New York girl only 21 years old. Miss Edell was heard in English songs and arias by a large audience, many of those present hearing her for the first time. She was the only New York girl on the program and the general opinion was that she showed great promise.

THE SCREEN

THE FEMALE, with Betty Compson, Noah Beery, Warner Baxter, Freeman Wood and others, adapted from Cynthia Stockley's novel, "Dalia, the Lion Cub," Directed by Sam Wood. Overture, "Marcha," Kitty Male Quartet. At the Rivoli.

Cynthia Stockley's story of South Africa, "Dalia, the Lion Cub," has been translated to the screen and is being presented at the Rivoli this week under the title of "The Female." It is an entertainment, but not a particularly brilliant achievement. The scenes with a lioness and her cubs are interesting, especially where a girl is seen playing with the little beasts. The little girl is Dalia before she grows up, the role afterward being played by the stocky Betty Compson, whose acting is pleasing but not striking. The best performance in this picture is delivered by Noah Beery as Barend De Beer, the Boer, who weds Dalia with the condition that she is free to do as she wills for three years. After that it is their bargain that she must settle down to life as Barend's vrouw.

The fact of having the locale supposedly in South Africa heightens the interest in this production, as it gives the director, Sam Wood, a chance to depict a different set of scenes to those shown so often in motion pictures.

Dalia is a wild girl, known to many society persons, even Englishmen and their wives. She goes to a dance at the behest of Barend, who buys her a new frock. She envies the slender figures of the English women, but Barend comforts her by saying that she is more beautiful than they are, and that the other women resemble toothpicks. At this ball she meets Colonel Valentia (Warner Baxter), who inscribes his name several times on her dancing card.

Dalia, however, being wise, decides to accept Barend's proposal, and, with about as much ado as one might anticipate in a movie, she suddenly appears as the Boer's bride. Soon she travels to England, and after a prolonged stay returns about two months before her time is up. She insists that she will keep to her bargain once the day arrives, but she will not be Barend's vrouw one hour before.

Being untamed, Dalia has no respect for conventions, and the fact that she is married to Barend disturbs her but little. She even permits Colonel Valentia to demonstrate his affection with a prolonged kiss.

Of course, one is singularly optimistic concerning the outcome of affairs, even when things do look black for Dalia. However, Barend is not a villain, but a rough, uncouth Boer with legs a little bowed from being so much in the saddle from his early youth.

Finding Colonel Valentia convalescing from fever, Dalia becomes sympathetic. She is told by this Britisher that he was clawed a bit by a lion and afterward caught the fever. As the time grows near for Dalia to make her home with Barend, she sights for the sky for a roof and the earth for a bed.

The first part of the idea is quite good, but the ending is strained. It is, however, one of those pictures with a pleasing cast and interesting settings and is, therefore, a fair entertainment, giving one a vague idea of life on the veldt.

WM. HENRY RIGGS DEAD IN FRANCE

Donor of Armor Collection, Valued as High as $10,000,000, to Metropolitan Museum.

DIES IN PYRENEES HOME

Son of Founder of Riggs Bank of Washington Devoted His Life to Collecting Art Treasures.

William Henry Riggs, donor of the famous Riggs Armor Collection to the Metropolitan Museum of Art, died Sunday at the age of 87 at his Summer residence at Luchon in the Pyrenees, according to a cablegram received yesterday from Mr. Riggs's valet by Bashford Dean, Curator of Arms and Armor in the Museum. The news of the gift of the armor collection, which has been valued at various sums from $3,500,000 to $10,000,000, was first published by THE NEW YORK TIMES in November, 1913. Mr. Dean said last night that the very fine collection of art objects now in Mr. Riggs's Paris home at 13 Rue Murillo had also been presented by him to the Museum.

Mr. Riggs was a son of the late Elisha Riggs, founder of the Riggs Bank of Washington, D. C., where the family has long occupied an important place among the elder society of the capital. William Henry Riggs devoted practically his entire lifetime to collecting, his fondness for gathering examples of the armorer's art amounting to an absorbing passion that never waned. It was no instance of a rich man amusing himself with a hobby by using his checkbook. He gave without limit in time and trouble in order to amass the great collection that now bears his name. Director Robinson of the Metropolitan Museum said of him in 1913:

"As a collector Mr. Riggs has been tireless. From the days he attended school at Vevey with Pierpont Morgan in 1854, he has been in constant touch with antiquity merchants and salesrooms. He ransacked Italy in the early days when garrets of old palaces still contained numerous art treasures. Thus in Venice he obtained important specimens dating from the early Doges and from the Tiepolo Palace. He visited Spain not fewer than seven times during the fifties and sixties, making long collecting trips on horseback, with a string of pack mules to carry away his finds.

"His acquisitions have always been preserved in perfect condition by armorers specially trained for this work. He has discarded or exchanged objects of lesser importance, sometimes a hundred or more specimens at a time, in order to gain a single important piece, in this way reducing the number of his objects from about 8,000 to 2,500. It would be absolutely impossible to duplicate the collection at the present time. The only way this might ever be done would be through the breaking up of the great royal collections at Madrid, Vienna and London."

At the time he announced the gift Mr. Robinson emphasized the credit due to the late J. Pierpont Morgan for having influenced Mr. Riggs to bestow the armor upon New York rather than Washington, the destination first intended by its owner. Although Mr. Riggs had been a resident of Paris since childhood, visiting this country for the first time in many years when he came here in June, 1914, to see his collection installed, yet he never relinquished his American citizenship and always spoke of himself as "an American sojourning abroad." His American patriotism never left him, and it was always his wish that the fruit of his labors as a collector should be enjoyed by his own countrymen.

Mr. Dean said last night that Mr. Riggs had been a noted entertainer in Paris during the reign of the second Napoleon, and that his two great rivals in auction rooms and among art dealers were the Emperor and Sir Richard Wallace, the great English collector. Mr. Riggs was a bachelor.

BRITISH DRAMATIST DETAINED ON LINER

SENDS APPEALS BY RADIO

Theatrical Men Try in Vain to Release Visitor — Case Will Be Referred to Washington.

Martin Brown, playwright, was barred from entering the United States by immigration authorities yesterday when he arrived from Naples aboard the Conte Rosso of the Lloyd-Sabaudo Line. Pending his transfer to Ellis Island this morning he was detained on the liner at its pier at the foot of West Fifty-fifth Street.

Radio messages passed frequently between the playwright and theatrical producing managers who were expecting him here. The first message was a plea from Mr. Brown to get him off the boat. The second read: "Don't let them take me to Ellis Island."

Theatrical men made repeated trips to the pier in a futile attempt to see the playwright. Failing to get permission to interview him, they began a search for Commissioner of Immigration Henry H. Curran. They were informed by immigration inspectors, who assumed responsibility for Mr. Brown's detention, that he had neglected to get the necessary visé of his passport by the American Consul at Nice.

The visitor is a Canadian and a British subject. He made his home in the United States when he was a dancer at the Winter Garden. A weak heart caused him to give up dancing and he turned to writing plays. Some of his plays were produced on Broadway. He came with him six new plays.

When the liner docked there was a large group of his friends at the pier to greet the playwright, including L. Lawrence Weber, Ralph Morgan, Judith Anderson, Louis Calhern, Clare Moores, John Wray, Jeane De Mo, members of the cast of "Cobra," Mr. Brown's play, and his manager, Richard Madden.

Commissioner Curran last night said that the case had not been brought to his attention and that there was nothing he could do except refer the facts to Washington.

According to his friends, Mr. Brown had planned to stay a month in the United States.

SHANGHAI, Sept. 1.—Refugees are still pouring into Shanghai by the thousand, and there has been a tremendous rise in prices, particularly as to rice, the daily food of the masses. This, however, is the usual profiteering.

There is general belief here that hostilities will begin tomorrow. On the other hand, many observers strongly maintain that peace will be preserved by negotiation.

Chekiang Province is said to have recruited 1,000 Russians.

Among the passengers who arrived yesterday from Europe on the Cunarder Laconia was Julius Henry Cohen, counsel to the New York Port Authority, who, after attending the convention of the Bar Association, made a special study of the port facilities of London and Liverpool and of the Manchester Ship Canal. Mr. Cohen said:

"We have much to learn from English port authorities. We can save ourselves many painful mistakes, if we study their experience. They were most cordial in giving me information. It is intensely interesting to discover that these English port authorities owe their existence to the demands of economic necessity, just as we owe ours to the same cause. Each centre has been obliged, in self-preservation, to reduce port costs. The port authorities do not finance their plans out of taxes. They finance, as we expect to do, out of revenues."

Well Known and asked for in Every Community

How many men can you name who are known and remembered throughout the nation?

We are all familiar with the prodigious effort required to make a candidate for President known to his countrymen. There are many distinguished provincials, but only a few national figures.

It's a big job for a man to win the favorable attention of the public. But it's a bigger job for a commercial product. And when you include every community in the land, it becomes a tremendous task—the ultimate in modern merchandising.

* * *

Thousands of products are offered the public with this object. Shining out from the many, a few are living reminders everywhere for purchases.

And one is Coca-Cola. Its cheerful colors brighten the streets and corners of thousands of cities and towns, its name more familiar than the names of the streets themselves.

* * *

Millions, representing every community, see this name—find the beverage served at cool and cheerful places—learn it is "delicious and refreshing"—realize it is pure and wholesome—remember to ask for it again when they're thirsty.

And Coca-Cola has come to be the most widely distributed product, manufactured by a single company, in the world.

You'll be interested in some facts about the merchandising plan by which 415,000 retailers have won a market for Coca-Cola.

There are 20,000 Coca-Cola walls and bulletins in the United States. Three million pieces of window display, signs and other dealer help advertising are being distributed in 1924. Two and a half million 1924 Coca-Cola calendars were given away. Coca-Cola's message is carried in millions of copies of magazines and newspapers.

In developing Coca-Cola's merchandising plan through the 38 years the beverage has been on the market, more than $40,000,000 has been spent in advertising.

* * *

The important thing is the result. The United States Supreme Court, in a case involving an infringement on the trade-mark, Coca-Cola, said:

"The name (Coca-Cola) now characterizes a beverage to be had at almost any soda fountain. It means a single thing coming from a single source, and well known to the community."

By "the community" the Supreme Court meant "every community."

A few changes make a world of difference in an old house

Could anything be simpler than adding to an old house a Colonial entrance porch, a new green roof and green shutters? Almost anyone could think of that.

But we didn't — until we got the book, "Better Homes from Old Houses." Our old house was comfortable and well-built, but, as the little picture shows, unpleasantly plain on the outside. Time and again we decided to remodel it but we never knew how to go at it. Then —

We sent for the Barrett Book

In no time we found just the changes needed. The next day we called in our local contractor, and in a few weeks the job was done. Now, we're proud of our "new" home. And we haven't stopped talking yet about the low cost of these changes.

Get the Barrett Book yourself!

MILLERAND INSISTS ON SECURITY ISSUE

'HANDS OFF' ARMY POLICY

PRESS WARNING TO HERRIOT

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Sept. 1.—"So long as we possess no other effective guarantee of our independence than our army and our fleet, no foreign intervention, however friendly it may be, can be allowed to influence the composition of our forces." These words of ex-President Alexandre Millerand, in a remarkable interview in the Echo de Paris today, undoubtedly voice the views of the vast majority of Frenchmen whose eyes are turned toward Geneva, where the question of the security of France will be discussed this week, as Premiers Herriot and MacDonald expound their respective theses concerning disarmament before the League Assembly.

"Now that Parliament has approved the London agreement," said M. Millerand, "the problem of security assumes a particularly interesting, not to say grave, aspect. It is necessary that public opinion examine it calmly, plainly comprehending the conditions with which we are faced and the perils we may incur, not only from the loudly heralded designs of German Nationalists but also from the points of view held by certain countries which were neutrals or even allies.

"Occupation of the Ruhr is to cease within a year at the most. They say there is no connection between that occupation and the question of our security. In law that is incontestable, but in fact it is no less incontestable that our presence in the Ruhr considerably increases the coefficient of our security, and that our departure will diminish it. That fact cannot be disputed. On the other hand, the period of years is a maximum period, and the British Government has not dissembled its design to bring pressure to bear on the French Government to order the Ruhr evacuated sooner. That again is a new fact which must unfailingly preoccupy us immediately.

Discusses Rhine Evacuation.

"Then there is another question which this time directly concerns the security of France and which, if not recalled at the conference itself, was discussed apropos of the London accords; that is, the evacuation of the Rhine. The French point of view is known. It was formulated in February, 1920, France saying that, as the Germans were not carrying out their obligations, the evacuation period had not begun to become effective. If Germany then protested, no Ally raised a voice, and all the French Governments since then have maintained the same point of view, including M. Herriot, who before the Senate declared he adopted the thesis of his predecessors.

"The British Government never undertook to evacuate Cologne on Jan. 10, 1925. It undertook, it is true, to examine before that date whether Germany had fulfilled the conditions, notably concerning disarmament, so that the evacuation could be undertaken without danger. Thus we took measures to have the question examined. But the fact in itself that the question is to be examined implies that the French thesis is abandoned, that the British Government a priori maintains the right to admit that periods for evacuation began to become effective in 1920. If, then, after such examination the British Government decides that no danger opposes the departure from Cologne, will we replace England in the same manner in which we formerly replaced the American troops? So far as I know, the question has not been put."

Question of Mutual Guarantees.

Turning more directly to the discussion of disarmament and the treaty of mutual guarantees at Geneva, this week, M. Millerand said:

"The question of French security, properly speaking, probably will not be directly opened. It will be linked with the general question of disarmament. However, I do not think that will change the final result. Supposing general disarmament is discussed; what is the probable attitude of the negotiators likely to be? The answer can be guessed from the replies already made concerning the guarantee of the treaty. That nations like Norway and others, who do not feel directly menaced, little care to assume responsibilities is only too natural. England is in a similar position but has the additional preoccupation that her naval power is not in any way affected by the decisions which may be taken. I do not speak about Italy, who just now does not appear in the humor for disarming. That is the spirit in which the powers will approach the question of the guarantee of mutual defense.

"The former President then laid down the policy which he thought should be adopted by the French delegates at Geneva, who he said must never for one moment forget that the touchstone of French policy was the security of France, the security of Europe depending upon respect for the treaties signed after the World War.

"We must not let that fact be lost to view," he said. It dominates the whole European situation. It must be stated that we find a number of our English friends—some members, and not those least important, of the present Government—of an entirely different spirit. Among the latter there are those who have never ceased to declare—quite recently on the eve of their taking office—that the Versailles Treaty ought to be repudiated; that there was only one means of re-establishing peace, and that was to place all on the same footing—French, German and others. I am unaware whether that theory will be upheld at Geneva; but it may be foreseen that, if it is not announced openly or not, more than one—not only among our British friends—will be inspired by it. But the truth must not be dissimulated; to treat France the same as Germany on the pretext of re-establishing world peace would mean to disarm France just as they have pretended to do to Germany, and to demand that Alsace and Lorraine be neutralized together with the left bank of the Rhine. That conclusion makes us writhe. It is nevertheless the logical conclusion of the theories just mentioned.

"The duty of the French delegates at Geneva in these circumstances is to associate themselves sincerely with all energy to widen and strengthen the society of nations, supply it with strength in case of necessity, and back its decisions on sanctions. Until then it is the duty of the representatives of our country not to accept in any circumstance, even on pretext the suggestion that France depend upon anybody but herself concerning all matters of her national defense."

Against Shorter Military Service.

When asked finally what he thought of the proposed reduction of the period of military service, the ex-President replied:

"It would be folly at this moment. We cannot, in the position in which we are, risk an experiment of that nature, which would not even mean budget economy because a reduced term of military service would cost the country more than the present system."

M. Millerand concluded:

"Appeal to the pacific sentiments of all nations? to the German democracy as to other democracies? That is excellent; but let us not forget that peace does not depend on us alone."

How strong is the feeling today concerning the possible dangers which France might incur if she were to abandon anything appertaining to her security is shown by the fact that a paper like the Quotidien, which wholeheartedly supported Herriot in his fight with Poincaré both as concerned internal and external affairs, today warns the Premier against pitfalls at Geneva and in strong terms urges that nothing must be yielded which may endanger France. While the article is directly addressed to the English politicians who are now attacking Germany against France, it is obvious that it is intended to help M. Herriot in his mission to Geneva.

"However surprising it may seem," says the Quotidien, "it does not appear that all the people on the other side of the Channel yet understand that European peace cannot be solidly or permanently established if the proper guarantees are not provided against aggression against France. Certain British statesmen, like Lord Parmoor at Geneva, show incredible indifference to this. We cannot renounce the control of German armaments while the spirit of revenge animates a large section of Germany."

The intransigeant says tonight:

"Look out for the net which will be spread at Geneva beneath a façade of fine speeches. The spirit of certain of our negotiators is alarming. They are persuaded that peace depends upon a general disarmament, for which France would give the first signal. But we say the experience of the last fifteen years has shown that France, honest and sincere, must disarm only when she receives real assurances of safety against attack."

Commenting on M. Millerand's warning the Liberté says:

"The question of security is of the first importance for France, impoverished in men and money for at least a generation. Since the London conference destroyed our last hopes of ourselves assuring our security on the Rhine, it is important to know what new system will be considered at Geneva in order to place France in safety from German aggression."

PREPARE TO FIGHT A FRANKS CASE APPEAL

Crowe Expects Another Legal Battle if Slayers Are Sentenced to Death.

CHICAGO, Sept. 1.—While Justice Caverly is considering the evidence, State's Attorney Crowe is preparing to meet an appeal from a decision on Sept. 10, which would send Nathan F. Leopold Jr. and Richard A. Loeb to the gallows. If hanging is the sentence he must be prepared to fight a long battle, he said.

The death sentence would probably result in an application to the State Supreme Court for a writ of error, which would mean added months of delay and new hearings, attorneys point out.

In the same section of the jail where Leopold and Loeb are confined because of their youth—each is 19—are two girls and two boys. They come from poor families in what is known as the "Valley section" in a west side congested district. The attorneys of the Franks boys' slayers emphasized their youth.

"Loeb and Leopold probably won't hang. They are our age. Why should we?" asked Anna Veiasis, 18, in her cell yesterday. "We're too young to be hanged."

Anna, her brother, Anthony, aged 19; William Lydon, 16, and Lucille Marshall, 18, are the four, who confessed, the police say, to circumstances surrounding the strangling to death of Mrs. Bessie Gesmnsien on April 17. She was robbed of $60 and two rings. The boys declared they strangled her because she "hollered."

The girls, in a sordid story, said the slain woman cheated them of money and they led the two boys to her home and persuaded the woman to let them in.

Leopold and Loeb today announced that they would refuse hereafter to be interviewed by newspaper and magazine writers from outside cities. Only local newspaper men and women would be received by them, they announced.

"Public opinion is an apparent factor in our particular predicament," said Leopold. "Yes, we have to protect ourselves," said Loeb.

Only Communicable Ailment Showing Increase is Infantile Paralysis.

The New York State Department of Health gave out yesterday statistics comparing the number of cases of communicable diseases arising in the week ending Aug. 23 this year with the same period last year. The figures show twenty-one less cases of typhoid fever; a reduction of exactly two-thirds the number of cases of measles, from 162 to 54; scarlet fever almost stationary, with 57 cases as compared to 54; practically the same condition for whooping cough, with a slight gain from 191 to 209; diphtheria stationary, with 95 as compared to 94 last year; smallpox down from 3 cases to 1, but a decided gain in infantile paralysis from 15 cases for the week last year to 79 for the week this year.

Under typhoid fever the report says there are no new outbreaks and the Port Jefferson epidemic is under control. The one case of smallpox reported is at Amsterdam, and the words are added: "Never vaccinated." In regard to poliomyelitis (infantile paralysis) the report has the following to say:

"Twenty-seven cases from Onondaga County, of which fourteen from Syracuse; eleven from Madison County, of which seven from the city of Oneida, seven cases each from Oswego and Oneida Counties; six from Cayuga County. No cases reported from Chautauqua County. The total cases for the State, exclusive of New York City, since June 1, is 296."

Canal Lock Built by Leonardo Unearthed in a French Garden

PARIS, Sept. 1.—Digging in a garden at Vierzon Abbey, situated on a dried-up arm of the River Yevre, workmen have unearthed the remains of possibly the oldest sluice lock in France. Great sentimental interest is attached to the find, because the lock was designed and built by Leonardo da Vinci.

The great Italian master, who was active in many other directions besides painting and sculpture, included architecture and engineering in his repertoire. He designed the lock for the Francis King, Louis XII. The sovereign desired to have ships brought in with salt from Nantes by way of the Rivers Loire and Cher. Leonardo solved the problem by using an arm of the River Yevre, building a lock four meters wide.

AUTO MISHAPS KILL FIVE ON LABOR DAY

FATAL TROLLEY CAR CRASH

Several persons were killed and many injured yesterday in automobile accidents about here. In one accident at Lakeview, L. I., last evening, nine persons were hurt when the automobile in which they were riding upset and plunged into a deep ditch. Three of the victims of the accident were reported last night to be in a critical condition in the Nassau Hospital at Mineola. These were Andrew Kujawa, 30, of Eagle Avenue, Lakeview; Walter Kujawa, 15, of 55 North Tenth Street, Brooklyn, and Mrs. Anna Guion, 40, of Lakeview.

John Kovalski of 95 White Avenue, Brooklyn, driver of the car, told County Detective Fred Stuhler, who investigated the accident, that he was driving slowly on Woodfield Road, Lakeview, when one of the front wheels of his car struck a rut, wrenched the steering wheel out of his hand and sent the automobile into the ditch.

Joseph Gauszalski, 11 years old, of 200 Avenue E, Bayonne, was killed last evening when an automobile knocked him down and broke his neck while he was playing with other boys in Twenty-first Street near his home. The driver of the car, Joseph Matrk, 340 Broadway, Bayonne, was arrested on a technical manslaughter charge.

An unidentified man, about 55 years old, with a gray mustache and dressed in a gray coat, blue trousers and a Panama hat, was killed in the afternoon at Second Avenue and 125th Street when he was knocked down by a motor truck owned by the New England Pie Company, 346 East Fifteenth Street. Michael Glynn, 30 years old, of 2,410 Second Avenue, driver of the vehicle, was arrested by Policeman Donderos of the East 126th Street Station on a technical charge of homicide.

Joseph Danko, 19, of 87 North Seventh Street, Brooklyn, died at St. Mary's Hospital, Passaic, from injuries received when an automobile overturning him and a boy, a girl and another man was overturned on Main Street, Passaic, after a collision with a motor truck. Anthony Kris of 27 Jersey Street, Rutherford, N. J., driver of the truck, was arrested on a technical manslaughter charge.

Welden Hann, 16 years old, of Hackettstown, N. J., jumped from a motor truck and was struck by an automobile at Netcong, N. J. He was taken to the hospital in Dover, N. J., where he died soon after. John Budd Jr. of Budd Lake, driver of the automobile, was held blameless by the authorities.

Hablein of 498 Central Avenue, Jersey City, was killed in an automobile driven by her husband in the afternoon when it was in collision with a trolley car of the New York and Long Island Traction Company at Rockaway Avenue, West Hempstead, L. I. The accident, according to stories told the authorities, was due to a misunderstanding of signals by Hablein and the motorman of the trolley car.

Grows Faint From the Heat and Is Killed By Electricity on a Power-House Boiler

Overcome in a temperature of more than 140 degrees on top of a big boiler in the Pennsylvania Railroad power house at Long Island City yesterday afternoon, Robert Corcoran, a "trouble-finder," was shocked to death by electricity and hurled dead to the floor below. His body was not discovered for ten minutes.

An electrically-controlled commutator on top of a boiler got out of order about noon. The escaping steam filled that section of the boiler house. Corcoran and his helper, Daniel Weidmiller, were sent to locate and correct the trouble.

Corcoran led the way to a stairway leading from a gallery to the top of the boiler. At the head of the stairs he told Weidmiller to wait, as it was dangerous down below, and he would signal for him if necessary. Corcoran descended the ladder into the steam cloud. His helper heard him making his way, tapping on the machinery. Corcoran shouted that he would have to examine the electrical control box some distance away. To do so it was necessary for Corcoran to go down a flight of iron stairs guarded by an iron hand rail.

Almost ten minutes elapsed and Weidmiller did not hear from his boss. He feared there was some trouble and went down the ladder to the top of the boiler, and on to the stairway. At the bottom he could see the form of Corcoran on the floor. Weidmiller called for help and the body was carried out. There was a mark on his hand that indicated to the men in the power house that Corcoran had become faint and, as he had grasped the railing, had received a tremendous charge of electricity.

Corcoran lived in Jersey City and had been connected with the plant for years. He was 37 years old. He was one of the most expert and most careful "trouble-finders" in the plant.

5 LOST, 4 SAVED IN NEAR-BY WATERS

Fatalities in Sound, East and North Rivers, Coney Island and Peekskill.

NAVAL MAN RESCUES GIRL

Five persons were drowned and four others were rescued from drowning in nearby waters yesterday. The bodies of two drowned men were recovered.

A cramp is supposed to have seized Michael Marinacci, 23, 288 East 149th Street, who was drowned in Long Island Sound off Fort Schuyler, where he was in swimming with friends. His cries were heard by comrades and life guards, who were unable to reach his side before he sank. His body was recovered half an hour after he was drowned.

James J. Spence, 22, a switchman for the Interborough Rapid Transit Company, of 500 West Fifty-first Street, Manhattan, carry in the afternoon went in bathing with his brother William, 19, at the Majestic Baths, foot of West Twentieth Street, Coney Island. William heard his brother call for help and started out to him, but could not locate him. The police of the Coney Island station had not recovered the body late last night.

The police began a search last night for the body of Joseph De Napole, 12 years, 28 Pacific Street, who drowned in the East River in the afternoon. The boy had been diving with friends for more than an hour at the foot of Pacific Street. When he did not come to the surface other lads who were with him called the police.

James Stafford, 19, of 105 Water Street, Peekskill, was drowned when he fell from a rowboat into the Hudson River. He put out in a rowboat which was found two hours later by his brother, upright and with the oars in the boat. The youth's hat also was in the rowboat. The theory is that he was pitched out of the boat by the swell of a passing river steamer.

The body of a youth 17 years old was found floating at the foot of West Fifth Street near the Municipal Baths, and it is believed that he was drowned after falling from a jetty, where he was fishing. He was 5 feet 4 inches tall, weighed 120 pounds, and wore a brown soft hat, brown trousers, white shirt, black shoes and socks. The body was taken to the Coney Island Morgue.

The police of Fort Hamilton and the Rockaway Beach Stations recovered the body of a man about 40 years old near ninth Street they found the body of a man, about 35 years old, 5 feet 6 inches tall, weighing 140 pounds, with brown hair, partly bald, and wearing a blue suit, white shirt and black shoes. In Jamaica Bay the Rockaway police found the body of a man about 45 years old, 5 feet 10 inches tall, weight 170 pounds, with brown hair and eyes, wearing black and gray bathing trunks with white stripes.

Lieutenant R. E. Bassler of the U. S. Navy Yard rescued Cecilia Whalen, 16 years old, of Dean Street and Utica Avenue, Brooklyn, from drowning at Manhattan Point yesterday. Bassler, who was on the beach, heard the girl's cries for help and brought her in. She was soon resuscitated.

Thomas Foley, 17 years old, and his brother Christopher, 11 years old, of 174 St. Paul's Avenue, Jersey City, had a narrow escape from drowning yesterday afternoon. The two youths were among a crowd of 150 persons who went bathing in Newark Bay off Sixty-first Street, Bayonne. Neither boy could swim, but when a log drifted inshore Christopher caught hold of it and began paddling about. Before he reached it, he was beyond his depth. His shouts for help were heard by the elder brother, who tried to go to Christopher's assistance.

Thomas never reached the log, and as he disappeared beneath the surface Christopher let go his hold on the log and was swept away by the current. Four youths who swam to the aid of the brothers succeeded in getting them ashore. Both were unconscious. An ambulance bearing Dr. Grafton from Bayonne Hospital had been summoned meanwhile, though, and it arrived about the same time as a pulmotor, which had been sent from the Fire Department headquarters. After working over the lads for half an hour they were revived and taken to the hospital. Neither is in a serious condition.

6 WRECK SURVIVORS ON RAFT ARE SAVED

SHARKS THREATENED THEM

Besieged Their Frail Craft—Captain and Two Sailors Believed to Have Been Drowned.

Six victims of the hurricane which damaged the liner Arabic last Tuesday were brought to New York yesterday on the Munson Line steamship Southern Cross, which docked at Pier 1, Hoboken. They were rescued last Saturday afternoon off the coast of North Carolina about 350 miles southeast of New York.

The men were the survivors of the crew of nine belonging to the 1,300-ton four-masted schooner Samuel W. Hathaway, owned by Crowell & Thurlow of Boston, which foundered Tuesday forenoon, Aug. 26. The master of the schooner, named Elliott, who is said to live somewhere on Long Island, and two other members of the crew are believed to have been drowned unless they were picked up by a passing vessel.

The six survivors who landed in Hoboken were Tryove Gaarder, mate, 145 South American Street, Philadelphia; Fred Malvin, colored, steward, of 1,527 South Fitzwater Street, Philadelphia; Axel Olafsen, boatswain, 227 Spruce Street, Philadelphia, and three seamen—Ingolf Larsen, 111 Pioneer Street, Brooklyn; Hartwick Hansen, same address, and Wilhelm Weelahan of 25 South Street, Manhattan.

The men were exhausted when they were picked up, as they had been drifting about on a roughly constructed raft for four days. They had had nothing to eat except raw fish, which they caught with a hook and a bit of white rag as bait. They were covered with blisters from the hot sun and were so feeble that the crew of the Southern Cross had to rig a gun tackle purchase and sling them up on board from the lifeboat.

In addition to the danger of starving to death, the men on the frail raft ran the risk day and night of being seized by the numerous sharks which surrounded their few hastily lashed together planks.

The survivors ate and drank ravenously when they were taken on board the steamship, but not until they had rested comfortably in bunks for twenty-four hours could they give an account of their hardships.

Mate Gaarder said the Hathaway sailed from Charleston, S. C., on Aug. 17 with a cargo of fertilizer for San Juan, Porto Rico. Monday morning, Aug. 25, the glass commenced to fall rapidly, and by evening a hurricane was sending mountainous waves over the decks, carrying everything before them.

By dark the schooner had begun shipping water and by daybreak, Aug. 26, the storm was unabated and the schooner was down in the water almost to her gunwales. The only lifeboat had been smashed. Captain Elliottt ordered the men to put on life jackets, and at noon gave his final command: "Abandon ship, and every man for himself!"

The nine men had barely got into the water and worked themselves away from the ship when the Hathaway heeled and then dived to the bottom.

Two of the seamen were not seen again. The other seven were caught wreckage and kept afloat. Captain Elliott clung to a broken spar, but the next morning he had disappeared.

The six survivors managed to get together on their floating pieces and constructed a raft about fifteen feet square, lashing them together with strips of their own clothing and remnants of canvas. They had neither food nor water. The steward made a hook out of a nail, found a piece of line and baited this fishing equipment with a piece of white rag. The mariner caught eighteen fish, which kept them alive until they were picked up by the Southern Cross on Saturday morning, at the end of their strength and resources.

During the four days the men sighted two ships, one an oil tanker which passed a half-mile away, and the other a passenger ship probably too far off to observe their small craft. Passengers on the Southern Cross took up a collection of $1,000 for the rescued men.

Joseph Conrad

The master teller of sea tales, in an article which was to have been the forerunner of a volume of reminiscences dealing with sailors rather than with the sea, said:

*"I have sailors in mind * * * I have seen them repeatedly do all that men can do for their faith—if it was only the faith in their own manhood."*

This article, which was about three-quarters finished, is published, together with a portrait of Conrad on his visit to America in May, 1923, and impressions of an interviewer at that time.

ARMY FLIERS PLAN 40-MILE HOP TODAY

HEROISM ON FLIGHT IS TOLD

Lieutenant Arnold Saved Flag Plane by Pumping Gasoline by Hand for the Last Four Hours.

WASHINGTON, Sept. 1.—The Army Air Service was informed today that the American around-the-world fliers would not leave Indian Harbor, Labrador, before tomorrow. The plans provide for refueling at Indian Harbor and a forty-mile jump to Cartwright Harbor, where there is better protection against the elements.

A dispatch from the cruiser Milwaukee, filed last night, but not received here until late today, said: "Planes cannot leave Indian Harbor before Sept. 2. This may delay Brazos [a tanker]."

The brief message was the first official word received here of the flight plans, which contemplate making the next jump to Cartwright Harbor, forty miles south of Indian Harbor. From there it is the intention to go to Pictou, N. S., and thence to Boston.

Just when the fliers will reach the Massachusetts city is not known here, but it is the expectation that they will arrive there soon.

Major Gen. Patrick, Chief of the Army Air Service, and other officers are planning to meet the aviators in Boston. General Patrick and Assistant Secretary Dwight Davis of the War Department left tonight for that city. Mr. Davis will make the trip by rail, but General Patrick planned to go from New York north by air, leaving Mitchel Field in a special plane some time tomorrow.

Smith and Arnold Heroes of Flight.

By Wireless to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ON BOARD THE U. S. S. RICHMOND, at Ice Tickle, Labrador, Sept. 1.—All praise was accorded Lieutenant Lowell Smith, world flight commander, for his skill in landing on Ice Tickle Island at the end of the last transatlantic hop from Greenland to Labrador, yesterday. Sharing honors with him was Lieutenant Arnold who, by pumping gasoline by hand for the last four hours till his arm became insensible, saved the flag plane from a forced landing.

At the last moment before the landing here, Lieutenant Smith demonstrated his quick thinking powers by choosing the emergency moorings on the East side of the island instead of the regular mooring, because of the wind direction stirring up a rough sea in the latter place. The flier circled about and descended in smooth water, disappointing many spectators waiting on the opposite side of the cliff-like island.

A launch brought the aviators ashore where Admiral Magruder and his staff were waiting. At the Grenfell Mission the astounded Eskimos and the press correspondents and camera men welcomed them. Cheers were given as the tired fliers climbed out of the boat. Admiral Magruder and Lieutenant Locatelli, the Italian aviator, shook hands with the party.

Smith exclaimed: "Thank God we are back on North American soil!"

Describing the flight from Greenland, one of the fliers said: "We left Greenland with the souplest fog shrouding us for the first forty miles. Then clear weather came in the south. We flew painfully low the rest of the way and everything that could go wrong with our engines proceeded to go wrong.

"Nearing the Labrador coast, we skimmed past two gigantic icebergs blocking our path. But we found the coast without difficulty. The group of pigmy figures along the wind-torn hillsides of Ice Tickle was the greatest sight we saw in all our travels."

Arnold's Heroism Saves Flag Plane.

Lieutenant Arnold, who was Smith's assistant on the flight, was another hero of the last ocean hop. Four hours from Labrador, Smith's engine sputtered and faltered, threatening to put the flag plane out of the flight by a forced landing. The principal trouble was in the failure of the fuel pump to function.

Lieutenant Arnold pumped gasoline into the engine by hand for four hours, two strokes to the minute. According to Lieutenant Smith, it was only Arnold's tenacity in pumping that kept the plane going.

Arnold modesty told the reporters of his feat. "It was nothing at all," he said, "because after the first hour of pain in my arm and shoulder they became completely numb and insensible."

He was the first flier ashore, wading knee deep through the water while he joked with his comrades. But when he was put aboard the Richmond he was unable to lift his right hand and almost collapsed. He underwent two hours of strenuous massaging by the ship's doctor before he was able to eat.

The flight from Greenland to Labrador was made at a maximum height of 100 feet to avoid the patches of fog dotting the route. Sometimes the two planes flew 25 feet above the frothing icy waters, where the slightest mishap meant a disaster like Locatelli's.

After Smith landed, Lieutenant Arnold worked half an hour securing his plane as freezing water washed over the pontoons. An American newspaper man was the first to welcome the fliers to the American continental waters with "Happy Birthday." For today's epoch-making flight marked Arnold's birthday.

Near Disaster on Hop to Greenland.

"We dodged around icebergs like kids around city corners," Smith declared. "While above the ice pack girdle of Greenland, flying just above the water, with the pontoons occasionally almost scraping icebergs, we suddenly turned a corner around a big mass of ice and lost Nelson. For an hour we flew blindly through the densest fog in order to avoid a head-on crashing with each other. Then we finally landed.

"Nelson and Lieutenant Harding, his assistant, had an hour of blind flying in the fog after we landed. They were in an aviator's hell. Again they circled dangerously low over and around the icebergs, praying for a clue to a safe landing place. It was a splendid flying achievement. They escaped death and landed.

Nelson and Harding minimized the dangers of this landing. "We just flew in every possible direction until God sent us the right one," they said.

The two hours' flight from Frederickdal to Ivigut was "uneventful," according to the fliers, although they admitted ducking head-on into a pelting storm of ice, rain and big hailstones.

The airmen gave highest praise to the Danish gunboat Islande Falk for the blackest plume of smoke which finally indicated Frederickdal.

"The last we saw of Locatelli, he was a vanishing speck over the horizon after passing the Richmond," said Lieutenant Smith.

ON BOARD THE U. S. S. RICHMOND, at Ice Tickle, Labrador, Sept. 1 (Associated Press).—When asked tonight whether the round-the-world flight chosen for the army flight was the best available, Lieutenant Lowell Smith, flight commander, remarked, smiling: "I don't know. I will never make another."

The fliers intend to examine the engines which were installed at Lystut for this flight; they will install new oil and gas pumps if necessary. It is their intention to fly to Hawke Bay, Newfoundland, Tuesday, if the weather is favorable.

U. S. S. Lawrence Speeds to Boston.

ON BOARD THE U. S. S. LAWRENCE, AT SEA, Sept. 1.—Carrying newspaper correspondents and photographers, the destroyer Lawrence has left Indian Harbor behind and is picking her way between the rocky islands of Hamilton Inlet by the aid of powerful searchlights and is heading into the rough waters of Davis Strait.

She is bound at full speed for Boston where the newspaper men will again greet the world fliers. Lieutenant Locatelli, the Italian airman, and his companions, who were rescued from their plane off Cape Farewell, Greenland, are also on board.

Canada Offers Warship for Fliers.

PICTOU, N. S., Sept. 1.—The Canadian destroyer Patriot, under command of Commander H. L. Reid, has been placed at the disposal of Admiral Magruder by the Dominion Government in connection with the American Army fliers' world flight.

Admiral Magruder was advised of the offer by radio today and replied that he would be pleased to use the Patriot if necessary.

EXCURSIONISTS SEE BOAT BURN IN BAY

Three men and a four-year-old boy narrowly escaped death last night when the launch Rosary was destroyed by fire a mile and a half off Sea Gate. Four excursion boats bound to or from Coney Island passed within sight of the burning boat, but although frantic efforts were made by the crew to draw the attention of rescuers, their cries for help attracted no attention.

Only when the launch, a mass of flames from bow to stern, began slowly to settle in the water, did help arrive. Louis Perrone, a Coney Island fisherman, had watched the blaze from the shore. He put out in his own launch towing a dory. By skillful manoeuvring he worked the dory to a point near the stern of the burning boat. The three men, Fred Ervinger, Harry Smith and Dave Sanger, leaped into the dory. But Sanger's young son refused to leave the boat until his pet dog Luna had been safely installed in the dory.

The Rosary, a former naval launch, was the property of Mrs. Rose Teven, owner of a fishery at Neptune Avenue and Twentieth Street, Coney Island. Mrs. Teven recently had the boat overhauled and a new engine installed. The loss is estimated at about $6,500.

Early yesterday afternoon, Sanger, who is Mrs. Teven's son-in-law, started with his companions for the fishing banks. By nightfall they had caught about 300 pounds of bluefish and started for home. On the way to the fishing banks the new engine had been giving trouble. Once it backfired and started a small fire, which was extinguished. Off Coney Island, however, the engine again backfired and ignited some oil in the bottom of the boat.

Sanger and his companions fought in vain for nearly fifteen minutes to put out the blaze. Then they climbed out on deck and tried to signal passing excursion boats. Although hundreds of holiday-makers bound for home lined the decks of the excursion vessels and watched the burning craft, not heed the cries of Sanger and his companions were unheard or they went unheeded.

Meanwhile persons on shore had seen the blaze. Word spread about that an excursion boat was afire, and scores of telephone calls notified the Coney Island police. But before a fireboat could be summoned the launch was a total loss.

CALLED KLAN VICTIM.

BUFFALO, Sept. 1.—The police say the explanation of the Ku Klux Klan duel in Duham Avenue on Sunday night, in which two men were shot dead and two others seriously wounded, is that Edward Obertean, one of the victims, was marked for death for disclosing Klan secrets to the police and that Thomas H. Austin, the second victim, was brought to Buffalo from a Southern city to do the slaying.

Obertean, a dismissed policeman, was a police spy; it was alleged, and joined the Ku Klux Klan some months ago to obtain information. He was a Roman Catholic and was threatened with death, he had told his brother several weeks ago.

A fourth victim of the shooting, Carl Sturm, 30 years old, was found today with a bullet wound in his leg. Examination of the bodies of those slain showed that each had been shot several times. The police say the shooting was the beginning of Klan and anti-Klan trouble and have taken steps to prevent further violence.

Behind the scenes lies the story of the police investigation of Klan activities ordered by Mayor Schwab to determine the Klan strength in Buffalo.

George C. Bryant, who is seriously wounded, lies in the City Hospital. In June, 1923, he was one of the men who filed at Albany a certificate of incorporation designed to offset the Walker law against the Klan. He was formerly in the Federal customs service and Monarch of the Zuleika Grotto, the social adjunct of the Blue Lodge.

Parachute Flares Save Pilot In Landing to Escape a Storm

OMAHA, Neb., Sept. 1.—Parachute flares carried by Frank Yager, west-bound air mail pilot, who left Omaha at 12:15 this morning for North Platte with the air mail cargo, saved him from a possible smash-up when he was forced to descend at Wann, Neb., an hour out of Omaha, to await the passing of a severe storm, according to air mail officials here. An emergency landing field is located at Wann.

Pilot Yager "cracked up" soon after the inauguration of night flying in the mail service during a storm at Chappell, Neb., escaping with severe bruises, although his plane was demolished. His ship was not equipped with parachute flares then.

Recent tests of the flares, which are released by the pilot when landing at a strange spot, and float slowly to the ground, showed that the lights illuminated an area virtually a mile square. Air mail officials predicted that Yager would take off at the passing of the storm and make up most of the time lost.

THE PLAY

By STARK YOUNG.

The English War Play.

HAVOC, a play in four acts by Harry Wall. At Maxine Elliott's Theatre.

Mr. Stephens	Cosmo Bailey
Bennett	Ruth Raymonde
Miss Irving	Janet Griffith
Violet Dering	Joyce Barbour
Cressie Punter	Molly Johnson
Dick Chappell	Ralph Forbes
Philip	William Keighley
Biddle	Forrester Harvey
Sergeant Major Patey	Vincent Holmes
The Babe	Richard Bird
Roddy Dunton	Leo G. Carroll
Lance Corporal Higgins	Donovan Maule
Private Jones	Denis Gurney
Captain Taylor	Claude Allister
Hospital Orderly	Jack Hemmes

"Havoc" came last night to Maxine Elliott's Theatre after almost a season in London. It makes one of three war plays to be seen this week; and, so far at least as the third act went, it proved that the theatrical value of this field is far from exhausted.

"Havoc" is a melodrama above the usual in its sum of ideas and sentiments. The theme deals with friendship between two men and their love for the same woman. She breaks off her engagement with one in order to go to the other. The new lover goes back with her note and the ring to his superior officer, her lover and his friend. The friend sends him treacherously to the front, and the action tightens from that on to his return, wounded and blind. The first and last acts, where the woman is taking part in the scene, are poorly written and unconvincing; they drag and fall into parts and could well be trimmed. The third act, with the two young soldiers coming back from death, one after the other, and sitting in the same chair, rose to intensity and pathos. The play rests on this act.

The acting in general was only fair. In the first and last scenes especially there were not enough flow and intimacy among the players, surprisingly little after so long a run, and to be accounted for somewhat perhaps, but not wholly, by the rigors of a first night. The lines themselves were sometimes difficult for any actors to handle. The writing had an odd unwillingness to go straight and a mania for taking the sting out of truth, though such may be one of the joys of melodrama. The dramatist showed too often the desire to make points, and unfortunately these points were played by the company without added style and quite naturally. And there was often an unnerving drift toward primroses and sweet sentiment.

Most of the actors in "Havoc" would play better if they went along more simply together and did not lay out about them such an array of whims and jolly old oddities; though the piece as it is written no doubt depends on such forcing and scoring. Richard Bird brought to the grateful part of The Babe some very good acting at times, in the third act after he is beaten, very good. Ralph Forbes gave us something of a young Apollo with moments of genuine feeling in him and good taste.

"NERVES" IS INTERESTING.

NERVES—A play in three acts by John Farrar and Stephen Vincent Benet. At the Comedy Theatre.

Mrs. Hill	Marie Curtis
Jack Coates	Kenneth MacKenna
Ted Hill	Paul Kelly
Peggy Thatch	Winifred Lenihan
Paul Overman	Reed Brown
Frank Smith	Henry Whittemore
Arthur Greene	John McCauley
Bob Thatch	Humphrey Bogart
Mary	Barbara Kitson
Jane	Mary Phillips
Carter, the Hills' Butler	John Gray
Jinny	Cynthia Hyde
Rook	Walter Baldwin
Jean	Kyra Alanova
Mathew Anderson	Edward H. Wever
Orderly	T. C. Durham Jr.

By keeping their play "Nerves" entirely within the walls of the Comedy Theatre last evening and drenching it with theatricalism, John Farrar and Stephen Vincent Benet achieved a genuine effect. When the play opened during an April, 1917, house party on Long Island, with boys preparing for war and maidens for war-marriage, the sincerity of the climax did not seem possible. These prep school chaps—Jack, Ted, Bob and the rest—and these "deb" or "subdeb" girls—Peggy, Jane, Mary and the female rest—babbling in the jargon of popular fiction, and even singing in close harmony, seemed too remote from reality to have any bearing on life.

"Nerves," however, pretends no bearing on life, but passes its entire existence within the theatre; and that is why an audience which did not always credit the lines or the characters was nevertheless interested in the play. Act II brought these boys together again in an aerodrome in France, all members of the Tiger Squadron, with its hastily implanted tradition that every man must "get" a "Hun" within three months. Only Jack Coates had failed the tradition, and he, poor fellow, had lost his nerve. Bob Thatch went out for Jack in an emergency patrol, but did not return with the others.

In a fit of desperation Jack then went up in a plane of his own, in search of Bob; and Ted Hill, captain of the squadron, forbade any one else to accompany him. Meanwhile Bob returned safely enough, and with Ted's fiancée, Peggy Thatch, as his chief abettor, took Ted severely to task for letting Jack fly out alone. Before the act is over, however, Jack returns, having "got" his "Hun," and a pair of shattered legs in the bargain.

There is more in Act III. at a reunion after the war, when Peggy flies in the face of Nature and proposes to marry Jack, and Ted flies in the face of prohibition and drinks more than even a war hero can assimilate. But "Nerves" is a play, and so no hearts are broken, although every one, even Ted, is somewhat sobered.

Meanwhile the authors introduce byplay of a light and inoffensive quality, typifying of young men and young women falling in love, marrying, and eventually attending to the less elegant affairs of off-stage infants. So the play comes off with the sincerity of stuff written for the theatre, using the accepted devices of the theatre, and acted by players in the same spirit. As Bob Thatch Mr. Bogart was both dry and fresh, if that be possible; and as Jack Coates Mr. MacKenna suggested suffering without making it artificial. Miss Winifred Lenihan played Peggy Thatch ably and in key, and now and then with a tone too faint suggestion of the St. Joan she played last season.

GOOD NEGRO MUSICAL PLAY.

"The Chocolate Dandies" Meets With High Favor at the Colonial.

At the Piano	Eubie Blake
Mandy Green	Amanda Randolph
Sammy	Gwendolyn Fessier
Black Joe Jr.	Addison Carey
That Comedy Chorus Girl	Josephine Baker
Sirvius, Drum Major	Marie Brown
Bill Spivens	W. A. Mann
Mr. Hes Brown	William Grundy
Mrs. Hes Brown	Joe Clough
Angeline Brown	Lottie Gee
Jessie Johnson	Elizabeth Welsh
Manda	Valeta Snow
Uncle Bob	Fred Jennings
Dobby Hicks	Noble Sissle

Undoubtedly one of the best negro musical shows that has been seen in New York was presented last night at the Colonial Theatre to an audience which, in spite of the torrid temperature, was stirred to such a high pitch of enthusiasm that it applauded again and again the efforts of the colored players. The whole idea of "The Chocolate Dandies," while not overwhelmingly original, was nevertheless interesting from beginning to end. The male singers were far superior to the female talent, as the Ethiopian girls were rather shrill in their renditions.

This presentation was well staged and lavishly dressed. The color schemes may not be those that would be selected by decorators in their art, but they were strikingly effective, especially the attire of the Four Harmony Kings, who appeared in slate gray silk hats and frock coats with black trimmings. This attire was set off with neckties of gold and silver. The singing of this quartet elicited great applause and the comedy of the Bass profunde brought forth hearty laughter.

Eubie Blake and Noble Sissle are the headliners in this musical performance. Their singing was roundly applauded, and also Blake's piano playing. Lew Paton, who is co-author of the book with Sissle, and Jenny Hudgins were highly successful in pleasing the audience. Hudgins gave a pantomimic performance which was as funny as anything one could hope to witness. He was the regular old negro type in tattered attire, and his dancing was original and pleasing.

The idea of the plot centres around the owner of two race horses, Dumb Luck and Jump Jim. Why the former happened to be shown as a real horse on the stage and the conversation Lew Paton has with him as his owner is not the least interesting part of the show. Quite a startling scene is where three real horses are shown on a revolving platform, as if they were the jockeys urging their steeds as if they were nearing the winning post.

TOP HOLE, a musical comedy in three acts. Book by Eugene Conrad and George Abbott, revised by Gladys Hurlbut and Lyrics by Jay Dorney and Owen Murphy. At the Fulton Theatre.

Peggy Corcoran	Nina Penn
Dobson	Richard Temple
Marcia Willoughby	Clare Stratton
Mrs. John Corcoran	Leah Winslow
Mrs. Blunt	Nellie Graham Dent
Irving Nash	Ben Graham Price
Judge John Corcoran	Walter Walker
Algernon Van Hooten	Charles Brown
Al Smith	Earl Redding
Robert Corcoran	Ernest Glendinning
Aloysius Blunt	John Daly Murphy
Theodore Willoughby	John Earle
A. Caddy	Billy Kelly
Maureen	Ann Milburn

One dozen damsels, otherwise the chorus, received most of the applause last night at the first presentation here of "Top-Hole." It was easy to see why they should have, for when a chorus sets out to be what the old-timers used to call "a real Weber and Fields dancing chorus," it either succeeds admirably or fails miserably and everyone present knows at once whether it has succeeded or not. Last night it succeeded admirably. It was everything a chorus should be, and more than most are when it comes to dancing, which it did frequently, indefatigably, destructively and ingeniously.

Then, of course, the chorus starts without the handicap that is sometimes put on the actors in the things the librettists make them do, which is another reason why it is good, it is apt to be very good and abundantly recognized as such.

Consider the case of Ernest Glendinning. He is the featured actor in this production. Those are few who would guarantee to name many finer comedians, using the term in its widest sense. Mr. Glendinning struggled manfully last night with what the playwrights had given him. It cannot be said that he went down, for he continued to struggle right up to the very end. Many times he rose above the waves. When the play was moving, it was mostly at those moments when he was making it move, though some of the young women, chorus and otherwise, occasionally gave it a sly little shove when it wasn't looking.

The trouble with "Top Hole" is that, although good intentions are always in evidence, those concerned with making the production meant well feebly, as Theodore Roosevelt said, though not of them.

There was nothing distinguished about the production. Its lines only occasionally showed vitality, its happenings were strictly things that have happened before on the stage, the lyrics were too much of the brand that rhymes "propriety" with "society" and "history" with "mystery," as these lyrics did, and its music was too suggestive of other music that has gone before.

It was typical of the production that although two of its acts were set in and about a golf club, it produced no new thing about golf that has not been seen on the stage before.

The cast was uniformly good. Ernest Glendinning, for whom one grieved, was splendid; and it is hard to imagine what the production might have been without an actor of his talent and personality. Nina Penn did some delightful dancing and Clare Stratton some equally delightful singing and Ann Milburn was oddly appealing with her bit as Maureen. Walter Walker did a fine piece of serious acting as Judge Corcoran. John Daly Murphy and Nellie Graham Dent won attention.

By singing "When You're in Love" twice during the production, during which the chorus nightly doesn did great deeds of terpsichorean valor, an effort was made to put that number on the music stands as a song hit. The effort may succeed.

'PIGS' WARMLY GREETED AT LITTLE THEATRE

Thomas Atkins Sr.	George Henry Trader
Thomas Atkins Jr.	Wallace Ford
Scotty Spencer	Philip Merrivale
Grandma Spencer	Maude Granger
Ellen Atkins	May Buckley
Spencer Atkins	Alan Bunce
Mildred Cushing	Nydia Westman
Peter Hastings	Rosemary Hilliter
Smith Hazlitt	James Kearney
Dr. Springer	Fred Malcom

In a world of rapidly changing phenomena, it is pleasant to be able to record that John Golden is still making John Golden productions of John Golden plays. Last night, when "Pigs" opened at the Little Theatre, were so many people were happy at the proof that Mr. Golden again will have at least one production on display in New York for a season or so.

The new play is of a familiar pattern, done in a familiar manner. This time it is not the manufacture of peach jam that restores the family fortunes for the final curtain—instead, the old-time Golden peach jam has become pigs, and they are not manufactured, but are cured of the ills that pigs are heir to.

"Pigs" at times creates the illusion of being about real people who speak real language, but a moment's reflection destroys the illusion. There is very little in the play, so far as character and dialogue are concerned, that is not essentially of the stage stagey.

There are, nevertheless, many moments of shrewd writing and observation in this play by Anne Morrison and Patterson McNutt. In particular, the inspiration that led them to create a comic villain and the theatrical daring that induced them to depart from the desperate, hushed solemnity with which mention of an illegitimate child is greeted on the stage is to be commended. For the most part, however, the piece is a first-class paradigm of the Golden Age of the American theatre.

The evening was most notable as serving as the occasion for the Broadway debut of a clear-eyed, wistful maiden whose advent should be greeted with cheering in the streets. Nydia Westman, as the girl who never despaired of the young man devoted to the visionary peach jam or pigs enterprise, made an engaging affair out of all the proceedings in which she was involved. Miss Westman, the lobby gossips reported, is not yet 19, but an end was put to the romantic belief that one had cropped right into her role from school. The rumor is informative that she has been in the theatre most of her life, with a career that already includes ten years in vaudeville and three years with road companies of "Lightnin'." She is, by all means, the most charming of the latest new actresses that has appeared here in many months.

As the young Armour of the piece Wallace Ford renewed the favorable impression that he has created by previous appearances here. Other roles were completely played by George Henry Trader, Philip Merrivale, May Buckley and Alan Bunce. The audience throughout the evening was enthusiastic in its reception of the piece and frequently burst into prolonged applause, so prominent on the program of the Armour's last exit that cynics began to fear that encores were about to make their début in the legitimate drama.

'Rain' and 'Stepping Stones' Resume

Two of last season's successful productions resumed their engagements last night in Broadway playhouses. "Rain," after nearly two seasons at the Maxine Elliott, reopened at the Gaiety Theatre for an engagement limited to four weeks. Jeanne Eagels continues to head the cast, which is in nearly all instances the original company.

"Stepping Stones," which, like "Rain," was withdrawn when the Equity strike came, returned to its original home, the Globe, and will continue there for a limited period. Fred and Dorothy Stone are again the stars.

English Actor Detained on Ship.

H. Tyrell Davis, an English actor, who arrived yesterday from London on the Atlantic Transport liner Minnetonka to act the leading role in William A. Brady's production of "Simon Called Peter," was detained on the ship for the night and will have to go to Ellis Island today because of an irregularity in his passport, the immigration inspectors said. The play opens in Pittsburgh on Oct. 2.

Three Musical Productions Move.

Three current musical productions were transferred last night to new stages. "Kid Boots," after a long run at the Earl Carroll, was moved to the Selwyn, and "Charlot's Revue," in turn, was transferred from the Selwyn to the Times Square. "Keep Kool," which has been on view at the Globe, replaced "Kid Boots" at the Carroll.

Lady Diana Again the Madonna.

Lady Diana Manners was seen again as the Madonna in "The Miracle" last night at the Century, following a Summer vacation. She will play the part throughout the week except at tomorrow's matinee and the Saturday night performance, when she will be seen as the Nun.

FRANCES WHITE AT PALACE.

H. B. Warner Also on Bill—Mme. Tenkatsu at the Hippodrome.

Frances White is the headliner of this week's bill at the Palace. Miss White sings a number of old and new songs in her familiar manner, to general approval. Then there is H. B. Warner in "A Box of Cigars," a clever sketch by L. K. Devendorf and Howard Lindsay, with William R. Morris. Manuel A. Alexander and Rita Oakley in his cast. The program further includes Margaret and Elyse Lorner; Charles Sargent and John Marvin; the Four Camerons; Ben Bernie and his orchestra; Bert and Betty Wheeler, and Joe Smith and Charles Dale.

The Hippodrome offers for the second week of its second season an even more lavish bill than last week's. Yesterday afternoon there were Mme. Tenkatsu and a troupe of geisha girls; Edith Mae Cape's "Creations;" Aunt Jemima; the Pascuali Brothers, and the Deauville Circus, among the new acts. Held over from last week's program were Elaine Lettor, the 17-year-old English dancer, who is a godchild of Queen Mary; Willie Harrold; Willie, West and McGinty; Jimmy Savo, and Dippy Diers.

TILDEN GAINS FINAL AFTER 5 HARD SETS

Beats Richards Before 10,000 in National Tennis, 4-6, 6-2, 8-6, 4-6, 6-4.

STAGES BRILLIANT RALLY

JOHNSTON ALSO A VICTOR

Overwhelms Patterson in 42 Minutes by Capturing 16 Straight Games to Win by 6-2, 6-0, 6-0.

FINAL MATCHES TODAY

At 2:30 o'clock this afternoon in the stadium of the West Side Tennis Club at Forest Hills William Johnston of San Francisco will make his annual effort to wrest the national tennis championship from William T. Tilden 2d of Philadelphia. The memory of his magnificent fight in 1922 cautions, but nevertheless it may be ventured that it will be the greatest effort he has made.

The Johnston that will go on the courts today is a greater player than the Johnston of 1922, greater than the Johnston of 1919, national champion. Indeed, it was a Johnston that had never been seen before who crushed Gerald Patterson of Australia yesterday.

Not only Johnston, but probably no other player in the world has ever given such an exhibition as the Californian did yesterday. Within a period of forty-two minutes he had blasted Patterson off the court and out of the tournament, a fine, outstanding pace that increased in fury with each game and that was absolutely merciless.

Patterson, a Jack Dempsey in build, who hits a ball harder than any other man in the game, a giant of the court in every sense, might have been an infant so helpless was his attack against the slight American mowed down all opposition, destroyed his morale and took sixteen games in a row to win at 6-2, 6-0, 6-0.

Crowd Is Thrilled.

Compared with Johnston, Tilden looked anything but like a "world beater" in defeating Vincent Richards in the other semi-final. The youthful Olympic champion, playing inspired tennis that kept the gallery of 10,000 spectators keyed up to the highest pitch, carried Tilden to five sets before yielding at 4-6, 6-2, 8-6, 4-6, 6-4.

Enthusiasm reached such a stage in this match during the stages in which Richards dominated the play that the gallery forgot itself and was admonished by the umpire several times. In its defense it must be said that the provocation was great, for the twenty-one-year old New York youth was magnificent, and it is not often that Tilden is outplayed and outshone as he was frequently by the player who was once his protégé. The spectators were for Richards heart and soul in the first place, and when he started off by taking the first set he became their idol, his every winning shot bringing forth volleys of applause.

Tilden captured the hearts of many in the third set when, after Richards had fallen to the ground in making a volley, the champion sent back a high lob in order to give him time to regain his feet and get in the ball. It was one of the finest displays of sportsmanship ever witnessed in tennis, and the fact that Richards won the point by killing Tilden's lob won the gallery over all the more. So prolonged was the applause for the champion that play had to be suspended momentarily until it subsided, and when the two players exchanged courts Tilden was again given a demonstration.

Richards regained the popular favor when he took the fourth set, but Tilden was once more the hero when he rose to heights hitherto unreached in the match in the final set, scoring on cannonball service aces and lightning drives that found the opening in irresistible fashion along the alley lines and across court.

Takes Three Games in Row.

At the conclusion of the fourth set, and with the score at 2-1 in Richards's favor in the fifth chapter, it was evident that there were many who thought Richards had a good chance of defeating Tilden. But the champion soon put all to rout and to any such illusions, taking three games in a row with dazzling speed and tactics of a sort to break up Richards's game. It is this ability of Tilden to rise to the heights in any emergency that makes him the favorite over Johnston today, in spite of the fact that the Californian's playing was far more impressive.

In 1923 Johnston won the first two sets and had a big lead in the fourth, yet Tilden then hit a streak of unbeatable tennis and Johnston suffered as heartbreaking a defeat as tennis records. Tilden is a player of unlimited possibilities, who rises to unassailable heights under stress, confounding his opponent when in the very jaws of defeat.

Nevertheless, the champion cannot afford to take Johnston lightly for a moment today, as he appeared to do at times in the match two years ago. When one considers the position held by Patterson as one of the leading players in the world and that Johnston made him look like a novice, it is apparent that Tilden is facing the stiffest opposition this afternoon he has encountered since he won the title in 1920.

Patterson, it is true, played miserable tennis, but not until he had withstood Johnston's crushing power for a set and then cracked.

There was not a lot of difference between the two players in the opening chapter. There were only two breaks through service, and in the first Patterson threw away the game by double faulting three times and in the second the score went to deuce twice. Double faults were costly to the Australian throughout the match, twelve being charged against him and in the second and third sets he erred constantly on shots of ridiculous ease until it looked as though he was throwing the points away.

Johnston's Control Perfect.

Perhaps he was throwing them away deliberately. The sort of tennis Johnston played might well have made an opponent lose heart and regard any effort as futile. Johnston not only had terrific pace but his command of it was perfect. In the second set he hit the ball out just once, and in the third set only twice. Such control as this is remarkable. In the three sets Patterson made a total of 40 nets and outs to Johnston's 27, just a double the number, while the American scored 32 placements to the other's 11. Patterson made more service aces, 6, to Johnston's 3, but his 12 double faults, two of which were the last two points in the match, nullified the advantage. Johnston made only 8.

Patterson's Service Weak.

Patterson's service was expected to be a big asset to him, as it had been all week, but not only did it cost him points, some of them on critical occasions, but Johnston fairly "ate" it, driving it back with murderous force for placements or smashing it at Patterson's feet as he came to the net, forcing him to hit into the net on half volleys. With Johnston it was always speed and more speed, until his strokes were flying with the heat of the sun.

From the minute he walked on the court it looked as though Johnston would have a battle on his hands against Patterson. The Australian had been playing so strong a game in his preceding rounds that it was expected that Johnston would have his hands full, and play at the start bore out this belief. Johnston won his first game at 4-1, starting off with a service ace and earning another point when Patterson was unable to do anything with his delivery.

The seventh game was bitterly fought, Johnston gained a lead of 40-15, Patterson pulled up to deuce and got the advantage on a drop volley, only to lose three points in a row. Johnston's forehand went across the net with the speed of a bullet in the next game, crowding Patterson with the ball and forcing him to make errors. The Australian was kept on the run from one side of the court to the other as Johnston stuck the ball in the opposite corners and the Californian broke through for the set.

Johnston in the Lead.

Johnston started off in the second set with two placements, one of them hitting in a far corner of the court and the other passing Patterson. The rallies were long in this game but Patterson could not match the other in steadiness. The Californian broke through in the second, catching Patterson as he came in behind his service by skillful trap shots that brought errors. Two errors off service by Patterson in the third were followed by two booming drives by Johnston for the game. The only point that Patterson got in the game was earned on a half volley off service. The Australian received the ball at the service line, taking it on a pick-up and barely dropping it over the net.

The fourth game was the longest of the match, deuce being called four times. Johnston gained a lead of 40—0 and Patterson pulled up to deuce, volleying Johnston's short return of service for placements. He then gained the advantage, but double-faulted and netted a backhand volley shot that was placed to make him leap for it. A service ace saved him, but Johnston forced him into faulty stroking on a volley shot and then palsied him in the next rally.

The loss of the game seemed to take all heart out of Patterson. His best efforts went for naught against the unfailing steadiness of his opponent and Johnston made his ground strokes useless by keeping the ball out of his reach. Johnston took eight points in a row for the set, Patterson getting only 15 points in the six games.

The third set was a procession. Patterson started off by returning service out of court three times in a row in the first game. In the second game he double faulted twice and Johnston, after recovering a lift, scored on a net cord shot. Deep volleys by the American compelled Patterson to make three nets in the next game and an out of service enabled him to take the game, making the score 3—0.

Johnston's strokes fairly smoked in the second. He whipped the ball over the net like a flash, followed it to the net to make short work of the returns and brought Patterson up short in his rushes to the net with cannonball forehanders at his feet. The Californian kept up his vicious hitting in the fifth game and, to cap an exciting rally, volleyed Patterson's backhand smash back across court for an ace. Patterson brought the rout to an end with two double faults in the sixth right after scoring on a service ace.

Johnston Has Won Four Times From Patterson in Title Play

William Johnston's victory over Gerald Patterson yesterday was the fourth that the American has scored over the Australian in championship play. Their first meeting was in 1919 in the all-comers, when Patterson carried Johnston to five sets, the last one going to deuce. In 1920 in Melbourne Johnston defeated Patterson in the Davis Cup challenge round at 6—3, 6—1, 8—1. Two years ago he overwhelmed Patterson in the challenge round at Forest Hills at 6—2, 6—2, 6—1. Yesterday's victory was the most decisive of the four. The two players have met in a number of exhibition matches, Johnston invariably being the winner. An exception was their meeting in an exhibition in Melbourne in 1920.

RICHARDS-H. KINSEY ON DAVIS CUP TEAM

DOUBLES PAIR UNNAMED

Committee Has Not Indicated Which of Four Will Be Selected—N. Y. Player Honored for 3d Time.

Vincent Richards of New York, Olympic tennis champion, and Howard O. Kinsey of San Francisco, national doubles champion, with his brother Robert, were named as the two additional members of the United States Davis Cup team yesterday following the play in the national championship at Forest Hills, L. I. The team in its entirety is now composed of William T. Tilden 2d of Philadelphia, the national champion; William M. Johnston of San Francisco, whom he meets in the final of the all-comers today; Richards, Kinsey and R. Norris Williams 2d of Philadelphia, captain.

The Davis Cup Committee, of which Julian S. Myrick is Chairman, refrained from naming the team that will play the doubles match in the challenge round and will not make known its selection until shortly before the challenge matches begin at Philadelphia Sept. 11. This decision is left in the hands of a board of strategy, which was announced last night as composed of Williams, Holcombe Ward and Karl Behr, all former cup players. Full charge of the team is put in their hands.

The selection of Richards and Hunter as the third and fourth members of the combination makes it pretty certain, however, that Tilden and Johnston, in addition to playing the two singles matches, will also team together in the doubles, and that Richards and Kinsey will be held in reserve. Richards could be used in either singles or doubles if needed. He played the doubles match with Tilden in 1923 against Australia. The fact that Patterson and O'Hara Wood were able to defeat this combination does not make it probable that Tilden and Richards will be called on again in the doubles.

Richards an Team for Third Time.

Richards's fine showing in the semi-finals of the national championship in carrying Tilden to five sets, as well as his success in winning the Olympic title, establish his ability to step in to fill the shoes of either Tilden or Johnston in the singles if either of the two should become unavailable. This is the third time that Richards has been named on the Davis Cup team. He was chosen in the 1923 combination also, but did not get a chance to play, Tilden and Johnston playing the singles and Tilden pairing with Williams in the doubles.

Kinsey is named to the team for the first time. The Californian has steadily risen in the national ranking and in the list based on the play of 1923 he is placed sixth. His work this season has been better than ever in the past and it is likely that he will go even higher in the national ranking. In defeating his achievements for the season are his victory over Johnston in the final round of the Seabright tournament, his winning of the Southampton tournament and his capture of a set from Tilden in the round before the semi-finals in the national championship at Forest Hills.

Kinsey's ability as a doubles player is known the world over. His greatest success was achieved with his brother when they defeated Patterson and O'Hara Wood in the final of the national championship at Boston. While he has paired with his brother exclusively for the last few years, Kinsey could be depended upon to team well with Johnston if called upon. He is particularly effective as a back court player, with his famous lob drive has a strong service and volleys in spectacular fashion.

May Play in Doubles.

It had been generally believed that the choice for the doubles team was narrowed between the Kinsey brothers and Johnston and Tilden. The latter looked to be the pair that would be selected when they appeared together in a practice match at the Longwood Cricket Club during the national championship, when the Kinsey's gained their unexpected victory over the Australians.

After that the California brothers, who had been under consideration since last Spring, loomed stronger. Tilden and Johnston have not played doubles together since they brought the cup back from Melbourne in 1920, but both are of such versatility that they could pair together without any preliminary practice. The fact that they practiced together at Boston indicates that they are getting in condition again, in spite of the fact that no public announcement has been made of the doubles combination. Davis Cup rules require that the full membership of the team be named ten days before play begins, but the player for each match does not have to be named until the day before the match.

Victory for the United States team has always been a fairly well guaranteed by the result of the play in the national championship. Johnston's victory over Lacoste and his triumph over Patterson can be taken as assurance that he will be able to hold up his end in the singles against either the French or the Australians, whichever team comes through in the interzone match at Boston this week, while it is not believed that there is any chance of Tilden being beaten in his matches. The outcome of the doubles match is therefore all probably not have any effect on the outcome of the challenge round, though Tilden and Johnston are probably strong enough to hold their own with any combination selected by the French or with Patterson and O'Hara Wood.

BRITISH GOLFERS TO LEAVE.

Walker Cup Team Will Go to Southampton for Practice Rounds.

The members of the British Walker Cup team bade good-bye to the Garden City Golf Club course yesterday for a week's time. A practice round in the morning and they called it a day's work, hiding themselves over to Belmont Park to watch Edward's in his test against the American horses. They will leave for Southampton today for the invitation tournament which will be played on the National Links beginning Thursday. They plan to tee off at Ploing Rock for a round this morning and then will proceed to Southampton for practice there tomorrow.

SARAZEN IS VICTOR IN THE MANHATTAN

REPULSE SPRINGS SURPRISE

The historic Manhattan Handicap, which gave way to the International Special as the feature of the opening day card for the Belmont Park Autumn meeting yesterday, fell easy prey to Mrs. William K. Vanderbilt 2d's fleet three-year-old gelding, Sarazen. In a small field of three horses that remained after the scratches had been announced, Sarazen flashed under the wire a length in front of the Greentree Stable's Cherry Pie with the Rancocas Stable's Mad Play third and last. Sarazen ran the mile in 1:36 1-5 and won $2,500 for his owner.

The Nursery Handicap for two-year-olds at six furlongs over the main course resulted in a surprise when John E. Madden's Repulse, a chestnut son of Spanish Prince II. and Soria, captured the winner's share in a thrilling finish from the Rancocas Stable's Nine, winning by a head, while Gifford Cochrane's Pocantico was third, another head away among ten starters. Repulse was quoted at 20 to 1 by the oddsmen. The race was worth $6,119 to the owner of Repulse.

After the running of the Manhattan Handicap it was regretted by many that Sarazen was barred, for he is a gelding, from competing in the International Special. He won his victory so smoothly and in such fast time that he might well have been a very important factor in the big race had he been a starter. The time for the first six furlongs of the Manhattan Handicap was 1:11 3-5, a fifth of a second faster than the time made by Wise Counsellor in winning the International event.

Scratches Cut Field.

Scratches cut the field in the Manhattan down from ten that were named originally to the entries, and took some choice of the interest out of the contest. It developed, however, that plenty of speed remained and Sarazen never left much doubt among his backers as to the final result once he made his bid. He had gone to the post a 6 to 20 choice.

Made to break from the start, the racer went up and set a sizzling pace for three-quarters of a mile. He pulled away to a lead of more than two lengths going around the turn out of the back stretch. Madden kept Sarazen in second position and had his racer restrain all through the early furlongs and waited until he was turning into the stretch to make his bid. When Sarazen flashed after the leader, Mad Play quickly dropped out of it and was not further heard from. Cherry Pie, which had been kept off the pace for six furlongs, moved up with a menacing rush as Sarazen went to the front. Cherry Pie made a determined effort and was lapped on Sarazen at the furlong pole. Sarazen then had a decided advantage. He did not have to use his whip and with a gentle ride he held the Greentree Stable entry safely through the stretch run and won handily by a length.

The Nursery Handicap, for two-year-olds, which annually serves as one of the bright features of the Autumn opening day meeting at Belmont Park, not only provided the big upset of the day among the form players, but also developed into a contest that matched the International Special for a thrilling finish.

John E. Madden's Repulse was so lightly regarded by the form players that he went to the post at 10 to 1 with few backers. Not even his owner had pledged much faith in him.

It is no exaggeration to say that the proverbial blanket would have covered the first half dozen of this field of ten at the finish line. The first four horses were only heads apart, while the second group was huddled together. Scratches brought the field down to just half of the twenty that had been named overnight.

BLOOMFIELD TEAM WINS TRACK MEET

The old adage that in numbers there is strength was illustrated again yesterday when the athletes of the Bloomfield Catholic Lyceum carried off the point trophy at the sixty-eighth annual outdoor track and field meet of the New York Caledonian Club, held at Ulmer Park, Brooklyn. With a team whose members placed in seven of the eight events on the program the New Jersey Club carried off the team prize with a total of 23 points, 11 points in excess of the aggregate accumulated by the representatives of the Salem-Crescent A. C., who were second with twelve tallies

The Washington Senators may be able to annoy the Yankees from time to time, but the Rex Sox are another matter again. Before a holiday crowd of 40,000 yesterday the Yanks pried two games loose from the unhappy Bostonians, 3 to 0 and 12 to 2, and in neither case were the world's champions unduly extended.

It seems that a kindly Providence ordained not only that the Red Sox should be in the American League, but that they should appear at this propitious moment. After losing three out of four to the Senators, the Yanks were flat on their backs and liable to be flatter, but the Red Sox arrived just in time to help the champions keep pace with the league-leading Senators, who also won two games.

Herb Pennock, the willowy southpaw from Kennett Square, chalked another of his shrouts in the first affair, and the Sox never had a glimpse of a chance, getting only two runners as far as third base. On the other hand, the champs shook up Curtis Fullerton vigorously in the sixth and seventh, when they made more than enough to triumph.

The big crowd had hardly ceased cheering over this fortunate outcome when the Yanks began helping themselves to more hits and runs. The second encounter brought Bob Shawkey and Bill Piercy head-on. At the end of the contest Robert was still visible around the premises, but William was nowhere in sight. He was batted out under a heavy shell and machine gun fire in the seventh.

This, by the way, was one of the largest hitting the Yanks have put on in some time. After Mr. Piercy had been rendered hors de combat, a Mr. Winters took up the gauntlet and was also knocked silly. Not until Hoge Workman, the former Ohio State football star, move into sight over the horizon did the Yanks consent to stop making runs. Twelve men went to bat in the single round, nine of them hit safely and eight scored.

Ruth was up twice in the inning with the bases full. The first time he lofted a board in the centre field fence with a husky line drive, but on the second occasion he graciously raised an easy fly and ended the carnage. Shawkey and Wally Pipp hit homers in the second game just to show that they could do it.

Fullerton Strong at Start.

Fullerton didn't allow a hit for four innings in the first game, but Ward singled in the fifth and Meusel, who was on first because of Shanks's wild throw, went to third. When Scott grounded to Shanks, Bob was hung up and put out between third and home, killing the rally.

However, the Yankees were back in the sixth and scored the first, and winning run of the game. Dugan walked and the Babe cracked a line double over the third baseman's head, Dugan pulling up at third. Jumping Joseph was too foxy for Wambeganss on Pipp's grounder to the second base. The first half and the plate and Wamby, after feinting a throw, didn't go through with it. He flung to the wrong spot, first base, and while this was in progress Dugan slid into the plate. Ruth, for a reason unknown, stayed on second all the while and thus deprived the Yanks of a run, for he could have scored from third while Schang was flying to Veach.

Ward's safe bunt and Fullerton's wild throw started the seventh inning, and the Yanks promptly picked up two more useful tallies. Scott sacrificed and Pennock hit to right for a base, going to second on Boone's fumble and scoring when Dugan pushed a hit past Wamby, who had plenty of time, but was feeble and slow on a grounder to his left.

The only Red Sox who reached third on Pennock were Flagstead in the third on a double and steal and Wamby in the sixth on his hit, steal and Schang's wild toss over second. In the latter inning there was only one out when Wamby reached the far corner, but Pennock settled down. Scott jumped for Harris's high-hopping grounder and attended to his man at first. Veach was hit, and with a double steal in progress Shanks lined over second base, but Ward, drawn over to cover the throw, was Johnny on the spot, and stepped in front of the drive—a piece of luck for the Yanks.

Two Yankee runs followed a pass to Witt in the third in the second game. Ward singled and did Ruth, scoring Witt and sending Joe to third. A double play, begun by Pipp, allowed Dugan to slip in.

Shawkey Hits for Circuit.

Shawkey hit for a round trip in the fourth, making it 3 to 0, but the Sox took a run back in the sixth, which Wambeganss and Boone opened with singles, the first-named cantering to third. Dugan made a beautiful pick-up and threw on Harris's tap and Wamby was out at the plate. At this point Hofmann attempted to catch Boone off second and threw the ball into the general direction of right field. Ruth couldn't find the handle to the pill and groped around long enough to let the slow-footed Boone trudge in from third.

In the seventh Scott smacked one to the furthest confines, but stopped at third at the suggestion of Miller Huggins. When Ezzell fumbled the return throw, Everett kept on to the plate and registered easily. Infield singles by Shawkey and Dugan and Witt's safe bunt filled the bases with none out. Ruth caressed one to the centre field wall for two bases, scoring Shawkey and Witt, and Fullerton was given a leave of absence good for the entire afternoon.

Winters, the next pitcher to be offered on the altar, served one that looked good to Pipp, and the Grand Rapids pickler knocked it to right for a base, scoring Dugan and Ruth. Meusel's single, a fielder's choice and a walk to Scott crowded the lines again, and Shawkey singled to score two. The merry fun kept up when Witt prodded a hit to left, scoring Scott. Workman succeeded Winters, and Lou Gehrig, batting for Dugan, walked, bringing up Ruth for the second time in the inning with the bases full. This time the big fellow elected to Veach.

Pipp clouted his homer in the eighth and the Red Sox attached themselves to a run in the ninth that didn't matter. The scores:

GIANTS BREAK EVEN, LOSE MORE GROUND

Bow to Braves in 11th, 5-4; Then Win, 10-2—Lead Pirates by Single Game.

BARNES BROTHERS VICTORS

BOSTON, Sept. 1.—The Barnes brothers, Jess and Virgil, put in a profitable afternoon today with the Giants and Braves splitting even in a double-header. Jess pitched for the Braves in the first game, which he won in eleven innings, adding some timely hitting to his excellent pitching, while Virgil pitched for the Giants in the second game, which proved to be a walk-over for the League leaders. The score of the first game was 5 to 4, while that of the second was 10 to 2.

The even break caused the Giants to lose still more ground, the Pirates cutting their league lead to one game, while the Robins are only three behind the champions.

Pitted against Jess Barnes for nine innings of the first game was Bill Ryan, but Bill was removed in the tenth and Claude Jonard came in to finish up and also suffer the defeat. Red Lucas was called upon to oppose Virgil in the closing combat and went the full distance, though the Giants rapped him safely seventeen times for a total of twenty-two bases.

The Giants suffered a rather serious loss in the first game when Hack Wilson was carried from the field in the ninth inning. Hack had made a triple in this inning when his troublesome ankle gave way beneath his weight as he thundered into third base. It is likely that he will be out of the line-up for a week or so.

Giants Score First.

A one-run lead for the Giants in the first inning of the first game was fashioned out of a base on balls to Frisch, a single to centre by Young and a sacrifice fly by Meusel. One was out in the fourth inning when Kelly's grounder went through Padgett. Young son sent Kelly to third with a single to centre and Jackson brought him in with a double to left. Gowdy was passed that the stage might be set for a double play, but Jess Barnes mixed up the play when Ryan hit the ball back to him. To the consternation of his teammates, he threw to McInnis for a play on Ryan and so permitted Wilson to score.

Gibson walked to start the Braves' half of the fifth inning and Jackson fumbled Smith's grounder. Barnes followed with a two-base hit to left centre and Gibson and Smith scored.

The Braves took the lead in the seventh inning, in which they thumped the ball vigorously. Tierney, first at bat, hit to short centre, when Wilson bagged the ball in the flying catch. Young did well to hold Gibson's smash to right to a triple and Gibson scored when Wilson lost Smith's long fly in the sun, the ball dropping to earth for a two-bagger. Wilson experienced some difficulty picking it up and Smith went on to third, to score on Barnes's sacrifice fly to Wilson.

Wilson's triple opened the ninth inning. When Hack had been carried from the field and McQuillan had been put on third base in his place, Jackson sent a sacrifice fly to Stengel and Hughie galloped home.

Braves Miss Chance.

The Braves had a chance to win in the ninth and another in the tenth, but were turned back just in time. Gibson singled to centre with one out in the ninth and after Smith had been retired, got to third on a single to right by Barnes. Here Ryan tightened up and Thomas wafted a fly to Meusel.

Ryan began the home half of the tenth by walking Padgett, whereupon he was taken out. Padgett advanced on a sacrifice by Stengel and McInnis drew a pass. Mann went out on an infield fly, but the situation became dangerous when Tierney got an infield hit that filled the bases. Jonnard then put on the screws and Gibson could produce only a foul fly that landed in Gowdy's mitt.

In the eleventh the Braves went through with it, though they had the aid of an error by Jackson. Smith led off with a single to left and Barnes, attempting to sacrifice, popped out. Thomas singled to centre and Smith pulled up at second. Padgett hit to Kelly, who threw to Jackson to start a double play, but the ball skipped off Jackson's glove and bounded away; Smith racing in from second base.

A four-run lead was secured by the Giants in the second inning of the second game, in which the Giants batted around. Meusel going to bat twice. These runs were the results of singles by Meusel, Jackson, Snyder, Barnes, Groh and Frisch and an error by Padgett, who fumbled a rap by Young.

This lead was sliced in half in the Braves' turn at bat in this inning. McInnis walked and got to third on Mann's single past Frisch, Mann taking second when Frisch, recovering the ball threw to third. McInnis scored while Jackson was throwing out Tierney and Mann scored when O'Neil grounded to Kelly. Smith and Lucas singled, but Young closed out the inning with a marvelous bare-handed catch of Thomas's drive to deep right centre.

Frisch Tries for Homer.

Frisch perished at the plate in his attempt to stretch a three-base hit into a home run in the fourth inning, but in the fifth the Giants converted a triple by Young into a run. Young remained at third base when Meusel expired on a poke to Lucas, but scored when Kelly lofted a sacrifice fly to Mann.

The Giants went to work on Lucas again in the eighth and scored four runs by putting together four singles, a double and a sacrifice fly. The singles were delivered by Kelly, O'Connell, Jackson and Barnes; the double by Groh, and the sacrifice fly by Frisch.

ROBINS WIN TWICE FROM THE PHILLIES

Triumph by Scores of 7 to 2 and 6 to 3 and Gain Another Game on the Giants.

WHEAT HERO IN SECOND

Special to The New York Times.

PHILADELPHIA, Sept. 1.—The gallant Robins continued their fight to overhaul the National League leaders here today. The Brooklyn team won two games from the Phillies, kept pace with the Pirates, and gained another game on the Giants. The scores were 7 to 2 and 6 to 3.

Rube Ehrhardt twirled for the Robins in the first game and was effective. It was his third straight victory, and the two runs made off him resulted from homers by Henline and Mokan. Clarence Mitchell, left-handed moist ball pitcher, opposed Ehrhardt and was hit freely.

In the second game the Robins had a harder fight on their hands. It was a see-saw affair in which the Robins did not get a comfortable lead until the ninth when Zack Wheat made a home run with Johnny Mitchell on first base. In the third inning of the combat Jack Fournier hit over the right field wall for his twenty-sixth home run of the season.

Art Decatur started for the Robins, but in the eighth frame he gave way to John Hollingsworth. Later in the session, Dutch Ruether was called upon to succeed Hollingsworth and Ruether held the Phils in check. Huck Betts and John Couch pitched for the Phillies. Betts was removed to make room for a pinch hitter in the eighth and Couch was the victim of Wheat's home run in the last frame.

Robins Score in First.

The Robins scored one run in the first inning of the second game on singles by Mitchell, Fournier and Brown, and in the third Fournier poled out his four-bagger. In the fourth a single by Taylor, Decatur's double and an infield out scored a run, and a single by Stock and Taylor's double in the sixth netted another Robin run.

The Phillies scored one run in the first on a triple by Williams and a single hit by Wrightstone. In the third, Wrightstone's single, a pass to Ford and an error by High brought in another Philly tally. In the fifth a pass to Williams and singles by Ford and Holke resulted in the last run scored by the locals.

In the first inning of the first game the Robins took the lead when they scored one run on a double by Johnny Mitchell and a triple by Wheat. The lead was increased in the third when singles by Ehrhardt, High and Wheat netted another run.

In the fifth Ehrhardt had a home run ball on exhibition and the Phillies tied the score when Henline and Mokan hit into the left field bleachers. Henline was first up and after he made his homer Clarence Mitchell was retired. Mokan then duplicated Henline's smash.

Four Tallies in Sixth.

The deadlock did not exist long for in the sixth session the Robins enjoyed a big round in which they scored four runs and made four hits. Wheat led off and drew a pass, Fournier doubled and Wheat stopped at third. A single by Brown sent Wheat over the plate. Stock hit to Ford, who made a wild throw to the plate and Fournier scored. Brown reached third and Stock second on the error and both scored on a single.

In the eighth frame the Robins picked up a superfluous tally when Ehrhardt, High and Stock poked out singles.

BABY BOOTLEGGER FIFTH

Other New York Entry Finishes Behind Baby Gar IV. and Woodfish—Winner's Time is 3:04:41.63.

DETROIT, Sept. 1 (Associated Press).—With a crowd estimated at 100,000 looking on, Gar Wood of the Detroit Yacht Club, who holds a score of speed boat championships, won the 150-mile international motor boat sweepstakes today for the second consecutive time when he drove his Miss Detroit VII. to a narrow victory over Cigarette Jr., New York A. C., in the second annual racing of the event.

There was less than two seconds difference in the time of the two boats, Miss Detroit VII. doing the fifty three-mile laps in the official time of 3:04:41.63 and the Cigarette Jr., driven by L. Gordon Hammersley, being clocked at 3:04:43.13. Baby Gar IV., another Wood boat, driven by Phil Wood, was a distant third, finishing thirteen minutes behind Cigarette Jr.

The race was one of the most spectacular, thrilling and colorful in the history of speed boating. It was featured at the outset by disaster to Gar Wood's Miss America, which sprang a leak through faulty planking. George Wood, her driver, succeeded in beaching her just as her stern went under water.

In the eighteenth lap the 999, owned and driven by Edsel Ford, and winner of last year's speed boat races at Miami, Fla., caught fire off the American shore and sank, stern first, in ten feet of water. The boat was in third place at the time. Ford and his mechanician, Jimmy Smith, jumed into the water and were rescued by a patrol boat.

Ford's other entry, Woodfish, well driven by R. C. Dahlinge, purred along consistently to finish fourth, with the Baby Bootlegger of the Columbia Yacht Club, New York, driven by Caleb S. Bragg, finishing fifth.

Baby Delphine III., a Horace E. Dodge entry driven by Paul Strassburg, was a menace to the leaders until forced out of the race when it was half over, crippled by a break in the steering gear.

Miss Detroit is the rebuilt Teddy and Miss America the rebuilt Bruin. The race was the climax of the Gold Cup regatta, which opened last Friday. The race was for $5,000 in merchandise, with a guarantee of part of the expenses of each boat to finish. Fourteen boats started, but only half of that number finished.

GOLDSTEIN DEFENDS HIS TITLE TONIGHT

The metropolitan district's delayed season of important fights will be ushered in tonight at the Queensboro Stadium, Long Island City, when Abe Goldstein, Harlem youngster, defends his world's bantamweight championship title against Tomy Ryan of McKeesport, Pa., in a battle listed for fifteen rounds, at the recognized bantamweight class weight limit of 118 pounds. The lads are scheduled to weigh in at the offices of the State Athletic Commission this afternoon, as has come to be customary in all championship ring matches since the memorable "public" weighing of Benny Leonard and Lew Tendler at the Cromwell A. C. last year. Each yesterday was reported down to the stipulated weight and ready for battle.

The opinion generally was expressed by close fight followers that Goldstein will experience a surprise when he squares off against the McKeesport challenger. Ryan is said to be one of the most dangerous rivals Goldstein could engage at this particular time. Many among the crush of fight managers, handlers, seconds and trainers along the Rialto declared it would occasion no surprise for them if Ryan left the ring the champion.

Goldstein, however, will enter the ring a favorite to win the bout and retain his title. The champion has improved since he beat Joe Lynch for the title, and is confident that with his speed, cleverness and hitting strength he will overcome Ryan's efforts to lift the title. The Pennsylvanian is credited with having forced Goldstein to extend himself in his previous encounters, but in these matches Goldstein declares he was not at his best fighting form. "I am going to try for a quick knockout tomorrow night," said Goldstein. "I realize Ryan is a rugged boxer, but in my present condition I feel confident I will be able to stop him."

A large crowd is expected to witness the match. Promoter Sl Piaherty has set a precedent in establishing a scale of from $1 to $3 for this championship bout and reported yesterday that the advance sale indicated a capacity crowd.

Sharing interest with the title bout will be a ten-round semi-final in which Bushey Graham, Utica bantamweight, and Jackie Snyder of Brooklyn, will be rivals. Graham is the boxer who gave Frankie Genaro, American flyweight champion, a spirited battle recently and has been promised a match against the bantamweight champion if he wins tonight's struggle. Charley Kohler of Ridgewood and Giovanni Salerno, Newark bantamweight, will clash in a six-round bout. The opening four-round preliminary will bring together Dick Murphy, Brooklyn heavyweight, and Gus Schola of Yorkville.

YACHT SONNY WINS, RHODY 16S. BEHIND

SOUTHWIND A CLOSE THIRD

Special to The New York Times.

LARCHMONT, N. Y., Sept. 1.—Sonny, the Star class yacht which is the property of W. L. Inslee and A. R. See, representing the Gravesend Bay fleet, won the first race of the international Star class championship today, defeating nine other boats representing various fleets of the class. The finish was close, as Sonny just managed to drift home ahead of Rhody, the Narragansett Bay representative, by sixteen seconds. Southwind, representing the Central Long Island Sound fleet, was third, forty-five seconds astern of Rhody.

The breeze for the stars in quest of the championship was not only very light but shifted to various points of the compass. The course chosen by Chairman Hoyt of the Larchmont Yacht Club Race Committee, who had charge of the race, took the ten competing yachts two and a half miles to Windward and return, twice around, a total distance of ten miles.

After the Stars had sailed the first leg to windward on the first round and had turned the mark south of Execution Light, the breeze hauled to due north, giving the boats a beat on both legs of the course.

The ten Stars were sent away at 9:30 A. M., the starting line being between the Larchmont Yacht Club committee boat and a mark one mile off the breakwater. The Star race was a preliminary to the Larchmont Yacht Club's Fall regatta, which was sailed this afternoon.

All were near the line at the signal, crossing on the starboard tack, with Rhody, the Narragansett Bay boat, in the lead by a few feet over California, which was to the weather of her; Southwind, Audrey, the Lake Erie representative; Sayonara, from Peconic Bays; Sonny, Stella Maris, the British Columbia boat; Porpoise, Chesapeake Bay; Sonny, Stella Maris, the British ern Long Island Sound, and Dot, representing Eastern Long Island Sound, crossing in the order named.

It was a long beat to the first mark, where Southwind was the leader with California second, Rhody third and Little Bear fourth. After the last yacht turned, the wind headed them again, and they beat back to the committee boat.

Southwind, sailed by W. J. McHugh and with F. T. Bedford as crew, led at the end of the first round, being timed at 11:16:47. California was second, more than a minute astern. Sonny went into third position by luffing Rhody off the course at the mark. Little Bear, Audrey, Stella Maris, Porpoise, Sayonara and Dot were strung out in the order named.

It was very flat as they started on the second round, the breeze equal, troubled, threatening trouble for the little yachts, but did not materialize. Puffs of sultry southerly breeze rippled the surface at times, sending them finally to the outer mark.

On the reach to the finish the ten yachts were practically becalmed at times, and Inslee, on Sonny, gave a fine exhibition of how to fan along without wind. Sonny took the lead a mile from home and fanned across the line ahead of Rhody.

The summary:

DAUPHIN AND BETTY SIX-METER VICTORS

CAROLINA LEADS FIFTIES

LARCHMONT, N. Y., Sept. 1.—The Fall regatta of the Larchmont Yacht Club, held off this harbor in Long Island Sound today, drew a fleet of ninety sailing yachts in the different classes, but the racing was marred by light winds and calms, as it has been so many times this season. The breeze was also so light and streaky that the different classes were strung out all over the course and true racing tests were impossible.

A fine fleet of American six-meter boats came out. The winner was Dauphin, of the American team which is to meet the British in the international races beginning Saturday. Dauphin seemed to move well in the uncertain air, but only beat Question, one of the older division, by twenty-one seconds at the finish of 5¾-mile triangle, sailed twice around. Question did not try for the American team in the recent trials, but seems to have remarkable qualities in a drifting race.

A feature of the afternoon beset by calms was a special start for the British six-meter boats, which were sent away following the rest of the fleet and on another course, in order to give them clear going. The British boats sailed a six-mile triangle, twice around, and as has been the case with them in previous races, showed speed on mill-pond seas, with a minimum of breeze.

Zenith Has Better of Start.

Zenith had the better of the start, which was made at 2:25, crossing near the committee boat, but had Betty just on her starboard quarter. They drifted across the line, their sails making long reflections in the water. Thistle was 100 yards astern, with Echo crossing last, nearer the leeward end of the line. They drifted and sailed alternately and Thistle was the leader at the end of the first round, but with Betty only eleven seconds astern, Zenith fifty-five seconds back of Betty and Echo more than five minutes astern of Zenith.

Although the Chairman of the Race Committee, Fred M. Hoyt, sent the British boats to the eastward in order to keep them away from their American rivals, the fleets managed to come together at the buoy moored off Hempstead, in Long Island Sound. As far as comparisons were possible, it seemed that the British boats did well in the wandering breezes. Some of the American boats finished ahead of them, but the invaders made a later start and sailed a longer course.

All four of the British six-meters were timed ahead of Paumonok, a member of the American team. Betty was an easy winner, crossing the finish line almost an even five minutes ahead of Zenith, with Thistle third and Echo fourth.

Carolina Is Victor.

In the larger classes one New York Yacht Club fifty-footers again showed their amazing ability to move quite speedily with little wind to fill their sails. Their tall rigs caught whatever breeze there was and Carolina, the winner, covered the 2¼-mile course in remarkably good time under the circumstances. She crossed the finishing line from the Long Island mark, her big reaching jib having a world of power and all sails setting well in a breeze that happened to be freshening.

The fact that Iroquois II., sailed by Paul Hammond, was almost eight minutes astern of Carolina at the finish, and that Spartan, the third boat in the class, was more than twenty-three minutes astern of Iroquois II., shows how uncertain the breeze was.

Harry Lewis's Banshee was the winner in the New York Yacht Club 40-foot class, finishing more than three minutes ahead of Holland Duell's Rowdy, with W. B. Bell's Mistral twenty-nine seconds astern of the Duell sloop. Captain Lawrence Morell did not sail his yacht, because of illness, but viewed the race from the side lines.

STRIBLING WINS ON POINTS

Fitzsimmons Threatens Referee After Losing—10,000 See Bout.

MACON, Ga., Sept. 1.—W. L. (Young) Stribling received a referee's decision over Young Bob Fitzsimmons at the end of a fast ten-round fight at Central City Park this afternoon.

Stribling was the aggressor all the way, and, according to newspaper men, he had the better of every round. At the close of the bout, Fitzsimmons showed fight, shaking his fist in the faces of Stribling and the referee, because of the unfavorable decision. In the scenes that followed, telegraph wires at the ringside were torn down. However, no one was hurt. One woman fainted. A crowd of 10,000 persons saw the battle.

Ed Alexander of Savannah, the referee, is said to have given Fitzsimmons three of the rounds.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

All important financial and commercial markets were closed for the Labor Day holiday yesterday, and there were no quotations.

Wall Street habitually comes back to work, on the day after Labor Day, with a vague idea that the period of vacation idleness is abruptly terminated and that the Autumn activities will be instantly in evidence. This expectation is never fulfilled. During the first part of September, financial markets and the business community are in much the same mood as housekeepers who have reopened their Winter residences and who, while waiting patiently for their much-delayed Summer luggage and the vexatious Autumn housecleaning, are hardly officially at home. Precisely as September is a month without plan or purpose in our social life, it is apt to be a period of uncertainty in the markets.

There is possibly more reason than usual, however, for the coming month to raise some definite guideposts to the course of events this Autumn, from the fact that the midsummer markets have moved in an unusually striking way in one direction or another, have halted or reversed their movement in the last week or two, and have appeared to be waiting for some early indication as to the financial and industrial future. Some definite signs as to whether orders from merchants are to increase, as to whether basic indices like steel production are to present a more promising aspect, as to whether money rates are to stay at the midsummer level or will rise, cannot very well be long delayed. All of these financial weather-signs will be closely watched this month.

The course of events in early Autumn has been varied in the last few years. Last year, it will be remembered, the stock market stood motionless for a month in face of the Japanese earthquake, Italy's threat to Greece and threatened strikes at home. It declined when these influences were past and did not revive until November. In 1922 the railway shopmen's strike overclouded the September markets; the course of prices was absolutely halting and uncertain.

Underlying all of that season's financial perplexities, the planning of heavy purchases at home and abroad, which led to the sudden and violent trade recovery of the ensuing Spring, was quietly in progress; yet Wall Street did not notice it, and the markets did not begin to reflect the coming "trade boom" until December. Even in a year like 1920, when the sweeping readjustment of trade and credit, actually foreshadowed as far back as the Spring, was destined to overwhelm the structure of finance and industry in November, the stock market for a month after Labor Day was engaged in a futile effort to bid up the railway shares and "discount" better business.

All that is proved by this experience of other recent years is that the full trend of an Autumn situation does not always become visible until the season is well advanced. It may be so this year, or it may not; but it would seem that, at any rate, some doubtful points of the present situation must be made clearer before very long. When the character of the situation has become unmistakable—say in the week after election, or in the Christmas holiday season—Wall Street will probably look back at the close of August or the beginning of September and wonder where its power of observation was, when whatever happened later ought really to have been guessed at from the visible combination of influences in Labor Day week.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

The Markets After Labor Day.

Now that the Labor Day holiday is past, Wall Street and investors are expected to again give their attention to the Autumnal trade developments and the probable course of the stock market during this period of trade expansion. Labor Day is usually a pivotal day in any year of uncertainty. During the Summer months when doubt is often expressed as to what conditions may prevail during the later months of the year, the optimists usually declared that "conditions will improve after Labor Day." In view of the developments of the past few months, Wall Street believes that the outlook today is brighter than it has been for some time past, and in view of this the expected revival of trade is expected to be shortly reflected in the securities markets. The Dawes plan is expected to be placed in operation in the not distant future. This will help stabilize conditions in Europe and world trade in general. Grain has started to move and the farmers will soon be receiving funds for their crops. The effect of this on business is well known. Steel orders have increased, and some mills which have been idle during the Summer are resuming operations today. On the other hand, several large foreign loans are to be floated in this market over the next few months and it is expected that "the market will be kept a-boiling while these loans are being placed." On the whole Wall Street returns from its holiday more optimistic than for some time past.

State of Oil Industry.

It has been many weeks since the oil industry has shown signs of even looking for better times, but the improved sentiment in oil trade circles last week gave Wall Street the impression that the industry is about to turn the corner and that a firmer tone may prevail during the remaining months of the year. While much of the improvement is still confined to sentiment, there were two actual developments last week which may be looked upon as straws in the wind. The one was the announcement of the Texas Company to take 100 per cent. of all oil produced along its lines. The other was the announcement of the Tide Water Pipe Line Company that it would pay a 25 cents premium over the posted price for Bradford district, Pennsylvania, crude oil. Both developments were viewed as significant in trade and financial circles. Within a short time the Government is expected to publish figures which will show a sharp drop in surplus stocks as of the close of July. The August statement, which will not be issued until October, is expected to make even a more favorable showing. In addition the trade, provided weather conditions are favorable, expects two months more of heavy consumption and consequently a further reduction in surplus stocks. Production of crude continues high, because of the flush output of Cromwell and Tonkawa in Oklahoma. Efforts to tie up these fields through pro-rating were unsuccessful early in the Summer. The industry now views this as favorable, because if the pools were shut down these pools would be still overhanging the market. When their production settles, they will then be out of the way, and the industry would have little to fear regarding new production until 1925.

New Foreign Government Financing.

Offering today of $30,000,000 of bonds for the Kingdom of Belgium has revived for consideration the question of how much foreign financing will be undertaken in the remaining months of the year and what effect, if any, this operation will have upon the money markets of the United States. All told, it was stated last week by investment bankers, the American market will probably be called on during 1924 to float upward of a half billion dollars of bonds for foreign nations. But this work, it was believed, could be done with very little drain upon the unparalleled wealth of the country, the transfer of this amount of credits representing actually but a small fraction of the total credit now available, which has been estimated at not less than sixty billions of dollars.

Fewer Speculative Leaders.

One effect of the era of railroad mergers which many persons believe is now being entered by the United States will be seen in a reduction of the number of stocks which can serve as leaders in speculative movements in stock market operations. Such, at least, was a suggestion heard last week in the Wall Street district, and while past experience has shown that the elimination of one set of market leaders is almost invariably followed by the creation of new speculative captains, the theory attracted considerable attention. Other factors said also to be at work in limiting the number of speculative mediums were said to be found in the much closer supervision of market operations being exercised by the New York Stock Exchange. At all events, the cry of some speculators has already been raised, contending in part that the merger operations in the railroad field may be extended to the specialty stocks and also that the very close check-up on market operations kept by the Exchange authorities have combined to take much of the joy out of their work.

Purchases by Farmers.

It had generally been believed that the agricultural population was now purchasing goods in fairly heavy volume, but during last week the Federal Reserve Agent at New York set before the public a report tending to show that mail order sales, in this district at least, had shown no perceptible improvement. But whether or not the experience of the New York district could serve as a dependable barometer was challenged by some observers, who pointed out yesterday that the New York report covered conditions in July, a month in which farm products were rising rapidly, but in which much of the farmers' effort was spent in liquidating loans. As a consequence, it was contended that the real test of any improvement, if indeed there has been an improvement, will be delayed until the earning and sales statements of some of the large concerns catering to the farm trade are published in the next few weeks covering the month of August. In this connection it was interesting to note that on several occasions the commercial reviews and also of the Reserve districts of the Middle West have testified to somewhat better farm buying.

The Market Foundations.

One of the largest of Wall Street's banking institutions in predicting a very considerable business expansion this Fall enumerates the following cornerstones for this expansion, and notes that they are "concrete things which plainly are designed to improve business sentiment during the remainder of the year":

A return of health to the Western farming community, a setting back of politics to second place as a business influence; a long step completed toward real peace in Europe; a situation of unparalleled domestic ease, and an undersupply of factory products.

Coupon Bonds in denomination of $1,000 and $500, not interchangeable

J. P. MORGAN & CO. AND GUARANTY TRUST COMPANY OF NEW YORK, FISCAL AGENTS

The following statement in regard to these Bonds and to the general resources of Belgium has been prepared from information furnished by M. Georges Theunis, Premier and Finance Minister of the Kingdom of Belgium:

PROVISIONS — The Bonds are to be direct external obligations of the Kingdom of Belgium. They are to be issued under a Loan Contract in which the Kingdom of Belgium will covenant that if in the future it shall issue by public subscription any loan having a lien on any specific revenue or asset, these Bonds shall be secured equally and ratably with any such loan.

PURPOSE — The proceeds of these Bonds are to be used to retire $18,500,000 Five Year 6% Gold Notes due January 1, 1925, and $8,550,445 6% Treasury Notes due January 1, 1925, and to that extent this issue does not increase the debt of Belgium.

ECONOMIC POSITION — Economically Belgium has recovered from the war. Agricultural production is practically as large as in the years immediately preceding 1914. Industrial plants have been reconstructed with more modern and efficient machinery. There is practically no unemployment in the country. The output of the metallurgical, textile and glass industries, Belgium's chief industries, has attained or surpassed the prewar level.

DEBT — The debt of Belgium on June 30, 1924, consisted of internal loans of 31,985,923,094 francs and external loans amounting, at present exchange rates, to approximately $451,000,000 (not including $171,780,000 advanced by the United States Government prior to the Armistice) of which the external debt in the hands of the public, after giving effect to the present bond issue and to the retirement of the 6% Dollar Notes maturing January 1, 1925, is $161,666,000 calling for interest and sinking fund payments of $16,709,000 per annum.

BUDGET — As a result of its policy of increased taxation and reduced expenditures, Belgium has made considerable progress towards budget equilibrium. Estimates for 1924, based on actual results for the first seven months show that revenues, including 1,300,000,000 francs German reparation payments of which over 80% has already been received, will exceed all the general and reconstruction expenses of the Government, exclusive of 857,000,000 francs to be spent on capital account for public works and railways.

Taking into account the expected yield from the new tax measures now before Parliament, it is expected that in 1925 Belgian revenues from taxes and operation of public properties will be sufficient to balance all expenditures by the Government exclusive of expenditures on capital account and reconstruction. The Government has announced a policy of limiting reconstruction expenditures, which it is estimated will not exceed 1,500,000,000 francs after 1924, to such sums as may be received from Germany. The London Agreement having been signed by the various governments concerned, after due ratification by the legislative bodies of France and Germany, reparation payments to Belgium, available for reconstruction and debt amortization, will be governed by the provisions of the Dawes plan.

The Government has taken measures to the end that no resort will be had to borrowing except to consolidate existing floating debt or to cover expenditures for income producing property.

WE OFFER THE ABOVE BONDS FOR SUBSCRIPTION, SUBJECT TO ALLOTMENT, AT 94% AND ACCRUED INTEREST, TO YIELD OVER 7%.

Subscription books will be opened at the offices of J. P. Morgan & Co. and Guaranty Company of New York at 10 o'clock A. M., Tuesday, September 2, 1924, and will be closed in their discretion.

EASE DEVELOPS IN BRITISH MONEY

September Disbursements of £28,500,000 Benefit the London Market.

CONTINENTAL BONDS RISE

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Sept. 1.—The September divided disbursements of £28,500,000, of which £20,000,000 came out of the Treasury, brought a certain amount of ease to the money market, which, however, has not yet experienced the full benefit of the disbursements.

Call money was offering at 3 per cent. and rather under at the last. Discounts were firmly maintained, as the present monetary ease is regarded as "temporary." A further reaction of francs in relation to sterling shows the ratification of the London agreement to have been fully discounted.

Speculative accounts, opened for the rise, were being closed, but business started again, owing to the American holiday. The market was very interested in what New York may do tomorrow. French francs closed at 83, against 82⅞ Saturday; Belgian francs at 89¾, against 89½, and the dollar sterling rate at $4.49¾, against $4.50.

German, Prussian and French bonds were active upon the ratification of the agreement. German 3s rose to 36s 6d, 4s to 27s 6d and the 3½s per cents. to 26s 6d; Prussian 3s to 34s, the 3½s per cents. to 38s 6d and the 4s to 31s 9d. French bonds, however, showed no change for the day. Chinese securities were weak, as civil war is reported inevitable.

Steel shares were depressed by the decision of the Bolckow Vaughan call-up liability of 8 shillings per share on partly paid shares, the buyers of which were offered 2 shillings a share to relieve holders of the liability.

Underground Railway stocks flattened, owing to fears that the Wembley Exhibition will not reopen next year. Copper rose 15 shillings, to £64 a ton. Tin jumped 85 shillings, to £256 7s 6d.

At the opening of the Trades Union Congress today the Minister of Education stated it was quite possible that the opposition to the Russian treaty would decide the fate of the Government. A strong Labor opposition to the German loan was foreshadowed.

RISING 'PRODUCTION INDEX' FOR EUROPE

Has Now Risen to 83⅞, as Compared With 60⅞ in 1921.

H. Murray Jacoby, who has returned yesterday from an extended trip to Europe, has constructed an index number of European production jointly with the European economist, Dr. Oscar Stillich. These figures indicate that the agricultural recovery which took place two years ago, has subsequently spread to the industrial field, but still leaves much to be desired.

Taking European industrial production at 100 in 1913, the index was as low as 60.3 in 1921, but has since advanced to 83.8. The agricultural index in 1921 was already 103.2, that is to say, above the pre-war status. This index subsequently was reduced to 102.8 so that no further recovery took place. These figures are based on the production of England, France, Germany, Italy, Belgium, Holland and Rumania and include among other products wheat, potatoes, potash, coal, pig iron, steel, &c.

WHY FRANCS DO NOT RISE.

London Bank Sees Accumulation of Foreign Exchange in France.

Considering the possible effect of the contemplated London agreement on reparations upon the foreign exchange market, the Monthly Review of Lloyds Bank of London gives the opinion that under such circumstances "there might well be another rapid rise in francs, but the French are well aware that in the end the finances of the country and the balance of trade are the vital factors in a real as opposed to a fictitious improvement.

"It is also well known that large quantities of exchange have been accumulated in France and, should there be a sharp rise in the valuation, it is thought that much of this would be thrown upon the market in an attempt to check the movement."

AUDITS BROKERS' BOOKS.

Consolidated Stock Exchange Reports Gratifying Conditions.

The Consolidated Stock Exchange's Bureau of Auditing and Accounting has just completed an examination of the commission members' books. The results, President Thomas B. Maloney announced yesterday, are satisfactory. So far as is known this is the first examination of the kind ever conducted by a stock exchange.

"The results," said Mr. Maloney, "have been gratifying. All of our houses are in a sound financial condition and show a marked increase in business. What is more important, perhaps, is the fact that never before has the business of our members been conducted on so high a plane, both as to ethics and the speedy execution of contracts."

To Use a New Billing System.

The Public Service Electric and Gas Company will place in service on Oct. 1 a new billing system which will enable the company to place bills in the hands of the customers within three days after the meters are read, as compared with the two or three weeks under the present system. Under the new system an average operator will be able to turn out upward of 1,500 consumers' bills, with coupons attached, in a day.

PICTURE GERMANY AS A COMPETITOR

Month-end reviews of banks devote considerable attention to the Dawes plan and its adoption by the allied nations and by Germany. In several instances conjecture has been centred on the probable effects German restoration will have on the rest of the world. The review of the Mechanics and Metals National Bank, although prepared in advance of the appointment of Gates W. McGarrah, Chairman of the bank, as a Director of the new German bank, holds because of his appointment, an added interest. It says, in part:

"The purpose of the reparations agreement is to re-establish Germany as an export nation, so that it can meet its debts. At the start there is no question that products laid down on German wharves from outside will overbalance what is exported. As the reparations plan gets under way, this situation is expected to reverse itself. By this is meant that in the course of time German competition will grow—it will have to do that if the reparations agreement is successful—and it is likely that as Germany and the rest of industrial Europe get back into efficient production there will be intensified competition in world markets.

"It is an extremely interesting economic experiment upon which this nation, with those of Europe, is about to launch. It is one in which Germany, in order that it may be enabled to export large quantities of goods for reparations payments, is to be financed extensively by nations which are themselves large exporters, and with whom, to be successful in its enterprise, Germany will have to compete in the markets of the world. The United States is expanded industrially and agriculturally beyond its own domestic requirements, and needs to sell its surplus products in outside markets. Europe has always been, and presumably will be, the chief market for goods of American output. Yet nearly every large State of Europe is now in debt to this country, and contemplates the ultimate settlement of its debt by the export of its goods. We, as time goes on, will seek to export to them while they, to pay their debts, will seek to export to us.

"The United States counts upon continuing as the world's greatest export nation on balance, and counts at the same time upon being the world's greatest creditor nation. Here is apparent inconsistency which no other trading nation has yet found a way to reconcile satisfactorily."

"So far as the United States is concerned, it seems probable that the revival of Germany will have a direct effect in increasing that country's demands upon us for such raw materials as cotton and copper and probably for meats. Unquestionably competition will be sharper in the lines of manufacturing in which Germany is proficient, and the effect of sharp competition in world markets will be to lower industrial costs and prices.

"In one of the lines in which Germany is proficient, however, the manufacture of electrical equipment, the world demand is likely to be large enough to keep the capacity of all countries fully employed for years to come.

"In the long run, however, and when the readjustments required to restore the world's equilibrium have been made, the recovery of Germany unquestionably will be generally beneficial. Whatever disturbance there may be will result from the fact that new and strange conditions are created, and that readjustments are necessary. The tendency always is back to normal."

LIVERPOOL COTTON PRICES ARE EASIER

Fair Demand Results in Sale of 8,000 Bales, Including 5,000 American.

LIVERPOOL, Sept. 1.—There was a fair demand for spot cotton in the Liverpool market today despite the easier prices. Middling sold for 15.47d, compared with 15.76d at the previous closing.

Sales totaled 8,000 bales, including 5,000 bales of American cotton. Receipts were 3,000 bales, including 600 bales from the United States. The market for futures closed quiet.

October	13.90	13.92	13.87	14.02
December	.....	.....	13.67	13.76
March	13.65	13.73	13.67	13.77

OUTPUT OF STEEL AND IRON NOW AND PRE-WAR

Increase in Nearly All of the Larger Producing Countries.

The recovery which has taken place in the European steel industry in the last five months is readily discernible if statistics of the pig iron and steel output are studied. The recovery referred to started late in 1923 and has continued right up to the present time almost interruptedly.

Official data representing the output of the five leading nations of the world, making iron and steel (except Germany, whose statistics are unpublished) are as follows for the latest date available. Figures represent average monthly production of the period stated; they are in thousand of tons:

PIG IRON—
Great Britain	855.0	619.9	687.4
Luxemburg	309.0	115.4	174.1
Totals	4,375.5	4,023.4	4,727.6
STEEL—
United States	2,908.4	3,603.5	3,818.5
France	384.5	408.3	558.1
Belgium	202.8	186.2	234.1
Luxemburg	108.0	98.8	150.1
Totals	3,942.3	5,003.5	5,320.8

*Five months.

From the pig iron data it appears that there has been a sharp recovery in output in all European countries over the 1923 rate, and that in each case the output is larger this year than in 1913 excepting Great Britain and Luxemburg. The United States is the only country in which the pig iron volume this year has receded below the 1923 rate.

The comparison in steel output are more striking. Each country, including the United States, to June 1 this year has explained its volume over the pre-war or 1913 rate. Again, however, as regards last year's rate, the United States is the only one whose present output falls below that of 1923.

Looked at as the world's output, the pig iron production of 4,727,600 tons per month to June 1 this year is, with the exception of 1923, the first in which the rate exceeded the pre-war or 1913 production. Except for the large American output, such would not have been the case last year. In steel the world's expansion is still larger—almost 25 per cent. to June 1 of this year, over 1913, or 5,320,800 tons per month, compared with 3,942,300 tons per month. This would have been still larger except for the depression this year in the American industry.

Their business is essentially the supplying of electricity for domestic and commercial needs. The Company also owns all the outstanding stock, except Directors' qualifying shares, of the Indiana Electric Corporation, which company owns a new central-station generating plant on the Wabash River with an initial electrical equipment installation of 40,000 kw. capacity.

Earnings: Consolidated gross earnings of subsidiaries, including other income, for the year ended June 30, 1924, were $6,691,687.50, consolidated net earnings amounted to $2,244,464.08, as compared with annual interest requirements of $1,351,780 on the Company's senior funded debt, including this issue, to be outstanding in the hands of the public. These earnings reflect no benefits from the large investment in the Indiana Electric Corporation, the operation of the latter's generating station having but recently commenced.

Examining Your Investments

Suitability of the Security to the Needs of the Investor

There is a form of security which best meets the requirements of each class of investor. We often find an investor holding tax-exempt or legal bonds which command a relatively high price because of features from which he derives no benefit. It is obvious, therefore, that an increase in income is obtainable by exchanging such securities for investments of equal merit but better adapted to the individual's needs.

Your list should be regularly reviewed that such a condition may be revealed and corrected so as to obtain the maximum earning power from your investments.

HARVEST RESULTS ON WESTERN FARMS

VALUE NEARLY DOUBLED

Special to The New York Times.

KANSAS CITY, Mo., Sept. 1.—With Summer past and a fairly accurate estimate of the season's return possible, the interior is trying to determine just what is to be the benefit from the production record and what effect it is to have on the trade of the next six months. Unquestionably the area of which Kansas City is the trade centre, reaching out 400 miles across Kansas, down through Oklahoma and north and east to Central Nebraska and Western Missouri, constitutes the most favored portion of the farm country this year. In this section has been produced one-half the Winter wheat crop of the nation.

The yield has surprised even the most optimistic observers, reaching more than twenty bushels to the acre in tens of thousands of acres, with all the grain of a quality unsurpassed in the wheat belt's history. Following has come a corn condition which promises to be fully up to that of the ten-year average and which in Northern Oklahoma, Kansas and Southern Nebraska, seems likely to surpass last year's record. Rains during the past fortnight have given helpfulness to practically all this territory, at a time when the final touch of growth is essential. Only an exceptionally early killing frost can prevent maturity.

It is not merely the fact of generous yields in a territory so favored, in a year when wheat and corn are showing less production in other States to the east and northeast, which constitutes the real basis for financial betterment. Prices have undergone a great change, giving the producer unexpected profit. The shortness of the corn crop taken as a whole, the Canadian wheat shortage, a world wheat crop 10 per cent. below last year, have given this particular area a very great advantage. The prospect that we shall have an export surplus of wheat reaching to 200,000,000 or 225,000,000 bushels, compared with our export of 126,000,000 bushels last year, and with the value of this year's export governed by materially higher prices, promises stability for the Middle Western producers' output well through the marketing season.

The Farmers' Changed Attitude.

It is easy to figure in round millions the added income to the farm country, and the total is imposing; but the vital fact is that throughout the territory where for three years there have been complaint, depression, reduced buying power, there is now a balanced return. Not every farm raises wheat; not all produce corn; but with both cereals returning liberal profits practically every farm has a share in the season's income. Virtually every producer has shared in the large fund of actual cash. It is this distribution that adds to the prosperity of the entire constituency and makes every family less nervous over the future.

Cheer has taken the place of discouragement, and new plans are under way with hopefulness of accomplishment. This psychological change is manifest particularly in the high plains country, where three successive crop failures have sapped the financial structure and where the country banks have struggled against heavy odds in their effort to carry their customers through to a turn of the tide.

On the basis of the Department of Agriculture report, Kansas, Oklahoma, Nebraska, Colorado and Texas this year will have 304,000,000 bushels of wheat; last year they had 177,000,000. The gain is 127,000,000. But this year's crop is being marketed at 20 cents a bushel advance, nearly doubling the cash returns and adding $17,000,000 to the proceeds of this one crop. Corn is not yet marketed; it will be harvested after Nov. 1. Present prices thus do not affect income yet, but with this territory having the only liberal normal output in the country indications are that Winter will see the price at least 15 cents a bushel over last year, and possibly much more. With such an outcome another $150,000,000 will be added to the 1923 figures. This does not take into consideration the rising price level for live stock and for minor crops.

How Will the Money be Spent?

The essential interest just now lies in what is to be done with this new wealth. How far will it stimulate industrial activity in the East? How far will it go to offset the lessened income in some other farm sections? It must be remembered that the prairie States are practically one-crop or two-crop sections. The older States, like Illinois, Ohio, Wisconsin, have many sources of income. The high prices for lessened crops will somewhat overcome their reduced yields of the major grains.

Out of this Middle West territory there has been for two or three years a notably lessened buying movement, due not only to the lack of credit but to the spirit of revolt against the disparity between the price level of commodities and that of products. The wave of indignation that began in the Spring of 1922, spreading over the interior with fierce intensity, when purchasing was for weeks at a standstill never quite subsided. Trade has felt its effect. Often it was made merely the excuse to cover lack of resources. But it did instill the idea that the buyer could do without—something that never was thought of during the early post-war period. Retail merchants fought the sentiment with every means at their command. Lavish advertising—small town dealers never advertised as during the past two years—special sales, "dollar days," "bargain sales" flourished. The wall of sales resistance has been weakened and it seemed only to require a revival of farm prosperity to complete the rout.

This season should see the passing of the buyers' deliberate ignoring of commodities. It should see the reestablishment of normal buying, giving the retailer some confidence for meeting the seasonable needs of his community and encouraging him in maintaining his stocks. Until that condition is reached the trade activity of the Middle West will continue on its hand-to-mouth basis, the effect of the buyers' revolt at the downward turn of financial affairs in the agrarian territory. How complete will be the recovery depends on how much of the income remains after the pressing necessities of the time are settled. The settling of obligations is a necessity. The bankers and merchants of the interior have taken no chances. They have not only the notes of the producers but these were backed by mortgages on the growing crop and on such personal chattels as were available.

Hence the first trek of the wheat-raiser when he left the elevator has been to the bank, unless he was one of these old-fashioned farmers who has played a safe game and kept ahead of the debts. Out in the plains country the notes are two and three years old. They were made when the first step came in the price level of products. The past year has added little to the total, for there remained little credit on which to base loans. Not counting the huge operators with dozens of farms and vast operations, often men who do not live in the West at all but make wheat-raising an annual gamble, it is estimated that 75 to 80 per cent. of this year's crop will go to meet old obligations.

"Even if we were not inclined to pay up," observed one lender who has just marketed 4,000 bushels of wheat out in Western Kansas, "it is the only policy. It is not reasonable to expect that good crops and high prices, due to partial failure in other States, will come next year, and we may want to borrow money again. If we do not play now, where will our credit be?"

The tenant farmer is the greatest problem. He can move on in a day; hence the banks in the sections where tenantry is most general have the severest trial. The banks are increasing their deposits; it is stated that $38,000,000 reduction has been made in loans in Iowa; Kansas expects to reduce its bank loans to normal, and Oklahoma is again getting out of the serious condition in which its people have been financially. If the cotton crop comes on as now indicated, there will be another element of income to help out Oklahoma during the Winter.

Another factor is the decreased "spread" between farm prices and commodity prices—a bone of contention for three years. Gradually the parity is coming nearer to the pre-war basis. Price maladjustment does not make for economic advancement and, while there is no likelihood of reaching the pre-war situation in the near future, the downward movement of manufactured articles and the upward movement of grains and other foodstuffs help to give a better balanced condition.

The Question of Corn.

There is, moreover, the reaction of live stock production to the price of corn. Expensive corn will presumably further the liquidation of breeding stock now in progress. The corn raiser is disposed to sell his product rather than take a chance on losing his labor and taking a risk through the fattening process. Country banks are not inclined to make heavy loans needed by feeders unless there is such a ratio between the feeding stuffs and live stock prices as promises a profit. So we may see a situation in which the interior is short on live stock, has marketed its grains over-liberally and has the money in bank, with debts fairly well cleaned up.

This, however, does not make for development, and bankers are taking the position that the wise procedure is to encourage the farmer to diversify his farming operations and prepare for the possibility of years less favorable. Many bankers are advocating a policy that calls for only such repayments as will stabilize the bank's condition, carrying over some of the obligations as a means of giving the customer courage and enabling him to maintain his progress. It is hardly to be expected that any such altruism will reach far; most bankers are inclined to clean up while the cleaning is good and trust to the future to handle its own needs.

As a consequence, banks are piling up surplus funds that will seek investment. The country bank cannot earn profits without utilization of its deposits in loans. If there is not a home demand, foreign securities are sought. Hence municipal bonds, foreign bonds, commercial paper and Liberties have found their way West. The higher rate of foreign bonds proves attractive and the banks have taken on many large holdings. Commercial paper at 4 per cent. is not sufficient for banks that pay their customers 4 per cent. on time deposits, as is the custom of country institutions. So there is likely to be through the late Autumn and early Winter much demand for paper that will fit the country bank's demands.

The West and the Market.

Investment houses are realizing the possibilities of obtaining business from the interior rural sections and are sending their salesmen into the territory early. The real estate mortgage bond houses are inquiring as to the best way to reach the rural investor. Their bonds with an interest rate of 6½ to 7 per cent. are counted on as proving attractive to the thrifty Westerners who have received the season's income and have some surplus for judicious investment. The possibility exists that the motor salesman will beat them to it.

It is too early to determine the reaction of the new condition on politics. The campaign will not warm up until the fall plowing—which by the way is started on a basis of a larger wheat acreage than last year—has been well completed. The soothing effect on the producer of a full pocketbook and a restored credit is likely to make him unresponsive to radicalism, and already there are indications that the unrest observable in Spring is much reduced. At the same time, with the remembrance of the experiences of the depression period, he is likely to acclaim any program that calls for lower taxes and lessened expense of Government. He is obsessed with the idea of economy and hence already favorably disposed toward any platform that stresses that idea.

The coming few weeks promise to give some interesting exhibits of the reactions of the Middle West to its new situation and its process of readjustment in financial betterment. The direction its buying public will take and the manner in which it utilizes its season's income ought to be a most interesting study, outside the effect on industrial activity in the East.

THE CHANGE IN THE NORTHWEST SITUATION

"It can at last be said," reports the Northwestern National Bank of Minneapolis in its monthly review, "that affairs in the Northwest have begun on an upgrade movement, giving signs of permanency, and that prospects are good for a gradual return to general prosperity. With a minimum of expense the 1924 crop was planted and now is being economically harvested; the yield is large, the quality excellent, and grain prices are substantially better than last year. As a consequence, the state of mind of the whole Northwest has quickened into an approach to its old-time buoyancy.

"A considerable distance must yet be traveled before we reach a satisfactory measure of prosperity over the whole of a very extensive territory. There are many burdensome debts to be paid; it is hoped—expected, in fact—that these will be reduced in a satisfactory manner, and that the essentials of the farm, such as repairs, fences and needed implements, will be accorded their proper precedence over expenditures of a less pressing nature. It will take two or three seasons of reasonably favorable conditions to bring the grain districts of the Northwest into the rightful swing of progress, but every dollar paid on debts will loosen up a tight situation.

"The current season of good production, particularly if late crops turn out moderately well and prices hold the ground they have gained, should clear troubled waters wonderfully well."

WELCOMED BY OBREGON.

American Industrial Mission to Mexico Receives Greeting.

E. M. Herr, President of the Westinghouse Electric and Manufacturing Company, and Chairman of the American Industrial Mission to Mexico, received the following telegram from President Obregon, welcoming the American business men in Mexico:

"It gratifies me to learn that you will shortly visit our republic. It will give me much pleasure to personally greet the travelers and I am happy to offer them the hospitality of our friendly nation."

In another message from President Obregon Mr. Herr was asked to name twenty-five members of the mission to attend the President at the ceremony of the Grito to be held at Chapultepec Castle in Mexico on Sept. 16. This is considered an unusual honor, as foreigners have never before been allowed to participate in these ceremonies.

Calls in $1,500,000 Notes.

Deere & Co. have called $1,500,000 of their 7½ per cent. gold notes dated Feb. 15, 1921. They will be redeemed at the office of the Central Trust Company of Illinois, 125 West Monroe Street, Chicago, or the Chase National Bank of New York, on Nov. 1, at par plus 3/4 per cent. premium, with accrued interest.

OFFER $30,000,000 OF BELGIAN BONDS

YIELD TO EXCEED 7 PER CENT.

Proceeds to Be Used to Retire $27,000,000 of Government Notes—Other New Offerings.

Offering will be made today of $30,000,000 Kingdom of Belgium external loan twenty-five-year 6% per cent. gold bonds by J. P. Morgan & Co. and the Guaranty Trust Company of New York. This is the first of a series of foreign Government loans expected to follow the clearing up of Europe's reparations troubles and follows within a few days the announcement that Germany through its Reichstag had approved of the Dawes plan. The new bonds will be sold to the public at 94 to yield slightly in excess of 7 per cent.

Proceeds will be used to retire $27,000,000 of Belgian Government notes maturing on Jan. 1, 1925, according to a statement made by M. Theunis, Finance Minister of Belgium, to the bankers. The external debt of the Belgian Government in the hands of the public, after giving effect to the present financing and to the retirement of the dollar notes provided for by this issue, is approximately $161,000,000 at present exchange rates, excluding advances made to Belgium by the United States Government.

A clause in the loan agreement provides for a sinking fund to retire, beginning Oct. 1 next, $1,200,000 of the bonds annually if they obtainable at or below 100. Any unexpended portion of the fund, which is to be employed in monthly purchases, is to be credited to purchase for the sinking fund in the next month following.

Figures furnished the bankers by Belgium's Finance Minister indicate that estimates for the 1924 budget of that country, based on actual results for the first seven months of this year, anticipate an excess of revenues over all the general and reconstruction expenses of the Government, exclusive of amounts expended on capital account for public works and railways. Included in the revenues are 1,500,000,000 francs as German reparations payments, of which in excess of 80 per cent. have already been received.

The Government has also announced a policy of limiting reconstruction expenditures, which, it is estimated, will not exceed 1,500,000,000 francs per annum after 1924, to such sums as may be received from Germany. The London agreement having been signed by the various Governments concerned, the bankers pointed out, the reparation payments to Belgium which will be available for reconstruction and debt amortization will be governed by the provisions of the Dawes plan.

Other new offerings of bonds announced for today total only $2,580,000. The largest issue consists of $1,500,000 Central Indiana Power Company three-year 5½ per cent. collateral gold notes, due March 1, 1927, which are being marketed by Halsey, Stuart & Co., Inc., at 99% to yield in excess of 5.60 per cent.

Freeman & Co. are offering $700,000 car equipment trust 5 per cent. gold certificates of the North American Car Company. The certificates will mature serially 1925-1934, are priced to yield from 5.10 to 5.25 per cent. and are secured by deposit with the trustees of title to 500 modern standard refrigerator cars, valued at $1,174,194. The same bankers are also offering $280,000 Shippers Car Line, Inc., equipment trust 5½ per cent. gold certificates, maturing 1926-1932, at prices to yield 5 to 5.50 per cent. These certificates are secured by 250 tank cars, valued at $350,000.

Spitzer, Rorick & Co. are offering a new issue of $100,000 Fort Pierce, Fla., 6 per cent. improvement bonds, due July 1, 1925-1932, at prices to yield 5.20 per cent.

S. W. Straus & Co. announce that permanent 6½ per cent. first mortgage serial coupon gold bonds of the $235,000 Coolidge Court Apartments issue are now ready to exchange for interim certificates outstanding.

HARVEST INFLUENCES.

Western Bank on Financial and Political Results of Large Crops.

The great volume of grain moving to market since harvest time, the Wells Fargo Bank of San Francisco reports, "reflects the efforts of farmers and producers in many sections to convert their crops into cash without undue delay. The movement in many sections of the Northwest, as well as in the Southwest, has brought about genuine improvement in conditions, as compared with last year. It has made it possible for many farmers to reduce or pay off long-standing loans, and thus to assist in the reorganization of various crippled banks in the area, which suffered so seriously during the liquidating movement of last year.

"Substantial gains in business handled by the mail order houses, which do most of their business with the farmers and other producers, add impressive testimony to the improved conditions shown in various sections of the West.

"It is said that these changes are likely to have an important influence also upon the Presidential campaign, as the 'apostles of discontent' may find it difficult to convince farmers of their distressed condition at a time when they are doing a profitable business and paying off long-standing indebtedness."

OIL INDUSTRY STILL GAINING

There has been substantial improvement in the oil industry during the past few months, and this improvement is continuing, according to a statement on conditions issued yesterday by William G. Skelly, President of the Skelly Oil Company.

"The restrictive policies being carried out by all of the large operators are showing good effects," Mr. Skelly asserted. "In Texas, for instance, the situation is in excellent shape, and pipe lines are now seeking more oil. Recently one big concern has been offering a premium for Pennsylvania oil on long contracts."

Mr. Skelly stated that the refining branch of the industry recently has shown a marked improvement. The Skelly refineries, during May, June and July, shipped 64 per cent. more gasoline than during the corresponding period last year.

BANKS SEEK LIGHT ON MONEY PUZZLE

OTHERS PREDICT NO CHANGE

Only World Demand, It Is Claimed by Them, Can Alter Credit Situation.

The money market is being closely watched at the present time by commercial bankers and business men in view of a widely heard discussion of prospective firming of money rates. Two distinct sides to the discussion have outlined themselves, one group contending that the general rate structure will move higher, and the other contending that only a temporary tightening, and that of small dimensions, can be expected. The latest weekly report of the Federal Reserve system was seized upon for evidence one way or the other, but as in previous reports of the last few months there was little to show that a definite trend had yet set in.

Labor Day is ordinarily selected as a marking point in the course of the money market; immediately preceding it dullness usually is predominant, and soon after Labor Day a perceptible increase in the demand for credit ordinarily takes place. This condition is by no means so well defined as to be classed as a rule, but nevertheless has many followers and to it may be ascribed much of the expectation of higher rates. The reason for this belief rests largely on the fact that the nation's crops are sold in the Autumn months, thus calling for more credit to move the crops from their fields to the market places.

In the last week, several interesting gains were registered in Federal Reserve activities. Taking the New York bank's report as an example, which in this case is particularly fitting because of the concentration in New York of a great part of the country's banking activity, the following changes over the week before were to be noted: Bills discounted during the week totaled $85,784,000 against $97,596,000 the week before, but still less than one-fifth of the total for the corresponding week of last year when the figure was $180,312,000. Bills bought in the open market—marking the clearest return to conditions of one year previous—amounted to $58,473,000 against $11,502,000 the previous week and against $53,440,000 for the same week of 1923. The totals of bonds, treasury notes and certificates of indebtedness held showed no decline under the preceding week, indicating that the central bank had found no occasion to release these holdings as yet, and compared with the figures for the same week of 1923, it was to be seen that the total of bonds on hand was four times in excess of the 1923 period, of Treasury notes on hand, twelve times in excess of the 1923 period, and of certificates of indebtedness on hand, nineteen times in excess of the 1923 period.

As a consequence, the reading of the report adduced facts which could be interpreted as in confirmation of the claims made by both sides of the discussion concerning a prospective advance. But in neither instance was there anything drawn with conclusiveness—the whole discussion stood just about where it had previously been when the week had drawn to a close, and, as has been the case now for nearly ten weeks, the financial community was in the position of "waiting for another week or two" for evidence that would conclusively show a definite trend one way or another—even in the period of declining rates there were many who thought that a change was "just around the corner."

Analysis of the argument in support of the claim that interest rates were about to advance disclosed three major premises on which the judgment of these bankers was supported. There was first the reasoning that a substantial demand for credit would be involved in order to move the wheat, cotton and oat crops, which already are beginning to go marketwise. Second there was the contention that considerable of the present slack would be taken up through the transfer of more dollar funds to Europe. And third there was the argument that new bonds and stock offerings were taking up large amounts of credit. The three factors, it was held, would inevitably work for higher credit demand, and this demand would be sufficiently great to bring about a general advance in rates.

Possibly a majority of bankers subscribed to this view, although against them was pitted a shrewd minority containing in its ranks some of the keenest observers of money market conditions in Wall Street. One of these bankers, who time after time has correctly diagnosed prospective markets and prospective changes, said that he had heard much of the discussion in support of a rate advance, but that he, personally, still held to the view that nothing more than a minor flare-up in rates would take place.

"Normally, these and other factors discussed would bring about an advance," he said, "but today conditions are very different. We are not operating upon a credit structure that is barely large enough to handle American business—instead, we are operating on a basis so large that world credit demand can be cared for right here. As a result, it would require a world demand for credit to produce any important change in the market conditions."

For that reason, he explained, he looked for only little change during the movement of the crops. "The banks are filled with money, are richer than ever before, and without the slightest strain can this year take care of crop financing," he said. As for the absorption of funds by new bond and stock flotations, he declared that history of the financial market during the last few years had shown that this financing could be cared for with little net change in the local condition. The important point, which he described as an unknown equation, had to do with the transfer of credits from here to Europe.

Rates and Reparations.

Already a substantial movement of dollars from New York to London has taken place, this because of the higher interest rates obtained in London, and tourist requirements have drawn considerable money from the United States. But the combined influences of tourist and commercial transfers of funds were said to have exerted little weight against the tremendous reserve built up in America. With nearly five billions of dollars in gold, it was indicated that the credit structure could take care of fifty billions of dollars of credits, and consequently it would take a movement of dollars and dollar credits to Europe on a tremendous scale to alter greatly the present situation.

The vital point in determining the future of money, it was generally contended by this minority view, which though weaker in point of numbers seemed to be stronger in point of weight of their opinions, would be found in the maze of doubt surrounding a German reparation settlement. If any banker could tell for certainty if and when a reparation settlement would be effected, it was said, he could tell when and whether to look for a firming of money rates. This, it was explained, was because of the conviction that a reparation settlement would be followed post haste with a German loan, and on the basis of that loan there would be what one bank President described as an "avalanche of credits." German industries, he said, were already inquiring for loans and, given a gold reserve for the country, which of course would be equally beneficial to the industries of the country, the industries of Germany could reasonably expect the advancement of credits on a large scale. So, also, he said, would other European countries anticipate credit advances from the United States.

As a consequence, it was contended, the only appreciable change in interest rates at the present time would depend almost entirely on the European situation. Domestic requirements would at best lead only to a moderate advance in rates even though the country's commercial demand were suddenly to increase to large proportions.

INVESTORS AWAIT PRODUCTION FIGURES

With Reports of Increase Orders Signs of Large Output Come Slowly.

With information coming to hand from virtually all industries relating to improvement in business, increased orders, a larger scale of production and predictions that business over the remaining months of the year will be favorable, Wall Street and investors in general are now awaiting publication of official figures indicating to what extent business has improved during the past few weeks. In some quarters the statements covering the operations in the basic industries, to be issued during the next few weeks, are awaited, as it is believed these may throw some light on the situation.

Opinions as to the extent of the recovery in business vary, and some influential trade leaders express the belief that the forthcoming statements, which will cover operations for the month of August, will not show any material change from the statements of the previous month, except in the case of only a few industries which might record some improvement. Interests which take this view state that there has been increased demand for products in many lines of industry during the past few weeks, but this new demand, it was pointed out, will only begin to be reflected in the production figures from September on.

In commenting upon the optimism which prevails in many lines of industry, prominent trade leaders admit that much of it has been based upon sentiment more than fact during the past few weeks, but of late there have been definite signs of improvement which will make themselves felt both in the placing of new orders and in the production schedules of the more important industries.

The first real signs of improvement in the basic industries, it is expected, will be shown in the statements of pig iron production, steel ingot production, unfilled tonnage of the steel companies and the cotton consumption figures. The figures covering operations in the petroleum and copper industries at the present time throw little light on the outlook for these respective industries, as conditions in both are described as abnormal, in the first because of the heavy surplus stocks prevailing and in the latter because of the character of the buying.

Probably the first important statement covering August operations to make its appearance will be that of pig iron production. This probably will be issued in the current week. Just what this will show is a matter of conjecture, but there is a belief in some quarters that it might actually show an increase as compared with July. But in the opinion of some leaders a further reduction will not be considered important, as it will merely reflect past conditions in the industry and not the improvement now going on. Certain prominent interests in the trade predict that the September statement, which will be issued early in October, will show the first sign of the volume of improvement. The statement covering production of steel ingots will be issued either Sept. 8 or 9. The showing in this statement is expected to conform with that reported for pig iron as both generally move in unison.

On Sept. 10 the United States Steel Corporation will publish its statement of unfilled orders carried on the books as of Sept. 1. This showing to be made by the company is as much a matter of conjecture as any of the other reports to be issued within the next few months. Trade leaders, however, when questioned on the probable showing call attention to the small decline of about 75,000 tons reported for July as against a drop of more than 600,000 tons reported in June. Attention was called to the fact that Judge Gary this past week announced that new orders increased 10 per cent. during the first twenty-two days of August, but on the other hand shipments in the first sixteen days of that month increased to the extent of 16.5 per cent. In view of this it is highly possible that the statement of unfilled orders as of Sept. 1 may show another small increase or be about even with the total reported at the close of July.

In connection with the unfilled orders of the Steel Corporation, one leader went on record as predicting that the statement covering new business for the month of September, to be issued early in October, will surely show a definite sign for better, provided the report to be issued Sept. 10 covering August operations does not show any improvement. To back up this prediction attention was called to the large number of rail and equipment orders now overhanging the market for Fall, Winter and next year's requirements. Most of these orders are expected to be placed within the next few months.

The report on cotton consumption for August will be issued on Sept. 14. In connection with this report some increase in consumption is looked for because of the larger number of spindles which are understood to have been in operation during that month. But even in the case of this industry the real turn for the better is expected to be recorded during the current month. The more favorable feeling in this industry is based upon two developments. One is the recent decline in the price of raw cotton, which makes it possible for a larger number of mills to operate on a profitable basis, and the other is the number of announcements made during the latter part of August that "production will be resumed after Labor Day."

The keynote to the optimism which prevails in most lines of industry so doubt was sounded last week by Judge Gary of the United States Steel Corporation, following a meeting of the Board of Directors of that company, at which conditions in the industry and business in general was discussed. Judge Gary upon calling attention to the new business the corporation was receiving and the increased operating schedules, said that the present improvement in business is not artificial, but is based upon growing confidence in the business world and the increased purchasing power of the world in general.

Judge Gary called attention to the favorable crop reports and the higher prices which the agricultural district receive for their production. High prices and good crops are the best foundation upon which business can build. Prosperity in the farming sections has a most far-reaching effect and virtually every industry in the country is expected to share in the benefits of the restoration of the buying power of the farmer.

Commenting upon European conditions, Judge Gary said that operation of the Dawes plan will benefit Europe especially, and also the world in general. In regard to the restoration of Europe, however, opinion varies as to what effect it will have on trade conditions in this country. There are many prominent interests which believe it will benefit industry in general in this country. On the other hand, however, some interests believe that the benefits will be spotty. There is little question that there will be world-wide improvement in trade following operation of the Dawes plan. There is also little question as to the amount of business the raw materials industries in this country will receive. But as regards manufactured products, many interests expect unusually keen competition from Europe at a not distant date.

Surplus Cars Show Decrease.

Surplus freight cars on the Class 1 railroads on Aug. 14 totaled 278,476, a decrease of 18,030 compared with Aug. 7. Surplus coal cars on Aug. 14 numbered 127,801, a decrease of 10,524, and surplus box cars in good repair totaled 177,111, a decrease of 6,224 within a week.

OBREGON'S MESSAGE REVIEWS YEAR'S WORK

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

The part of the message referring to the work accomplished by the Secretary of Foreign Relations cited the recognition of the Government by the United States with the naming of Mr. Warren as Ambassador.

The message recited the Cummings case and the dispute caused by the terms of the note delivered by Mr. Cummings from the British Government, ending by the departure of Mr. Cummings from Mexico. It cites the murder of Mrs. Evans and the results that the investigations brought to light. It said that at that time the British Government was expected to recognize Mexico soon.

Referring to the Commission on Claims now meeting in Washington, Obregon said that it is expected that this commission will succeed.

The War Department's report touches on the organization of the army during the past revolt, praising the new Cavalry Force and the Aviation Branch, which was of great value to the Government on the Western front during the de la Huerta revolt. The message says the cost of the revolt includes arms and ammunitions and equipment purchased for about 10,000,000 pesos. The desertion of Generals Sanchez, Estrada, Maycotte, Cavazos and others gave the War Department an opportunity to reorganize, it is added, making large saving in expense and permitting the army to eliminate a number of elements that were a source of trouble. It is pointed out that the army is down to 55,000 men.

The Secretary of the Treasury report states that when de la Huerta abandoned the Treasury Department he left his successor, Albert Pani, a difficult economic problem which, when made public, caused a split among the revolutionaries who had signed the famous plan of Agua Prieta, which led de la Huerta to start his open revolt against President Obregon. The department presented the new income tax plan and annulled the decree which planned to establish the new bank, because the bankers did not comply with the clauses in the Lamont-de la Huerta agreement regarding the providing of funds to establish the National Bank.

A heavy tropical rain, falling early in the afternoon, dampened the usual crowd of sightseers, but the galleries of Congress were crowded. President Obregon, entering Congressional Hall, passed down the aisle amidst wild cheers. Taking the Speaker's seat, Obregon then read a few sentences of his message, which was fully read by the Secretary of Congress. President Alberto Ramos of Congress answered the message with the usual formalities, which, owing to the heavy rain, was virtually unnoticed.

BIG ESTATES UP FOR TAXES.

Vanderbilt and Bourne Properties on the List for Sale.

RIVERHEAD, L. I., Sept. 1.—The large estates of the late William K. Vanderbilt and Frederick G. Bourne at Oakdale are among the properties listed for sale Oct. 13 in default of county taxes. There are $17,138 arrears of taxes on the Vanderbilt estate.

Disagreements among heirs of Frederick Bourne, who was President of the Singer Sewing Machine Company, are believed to have caused his estate to be placed on the unpaid-tax list.

600,000 AT CONEY; LIGHTNING KILLS 1

GOVERNOR SMITH AT BEACH

For the second time in two days 600,000 persons went to Coney Island to spend the holiday and to keep cool. Long Beach, the Rockaways, Rye Beach, Asbury Park, Atlantic City and other seashore resorts reported that yesterday's visitors were as numerous as the record crowds on Sunday.

Governor Smith was among the hundreds of thousands who spent Labor Day on the beach. He visited his sister, Mrs. Mary Glynn, at Sea Gate, went for a swim of twenty minutes, and then stayed on the beach for an hour before starting back to Manhattan.

Coney Island was caught in a brief thunderstorm which lost itself at sea in the forenoon after releasing a stroke of lightning which killed a bather. Victor Pressman, a traveling salesman, 2,852 West Twenty-seventh Street, Brooklyn. His body was brought ashore by a life guard. The dead man was burned on the side by the lightning.

It was estimated that 300,000 persons went in bathing at Coney Island. Seventy-five lost children were found on the Coney beach and finally restored to excited parents and relatives by the police. Sixty men arrested for disorderly conduct in early morning raids in six bungalows, pleaded guilty before Magistrate O'Neill and were fined $5 each.

On charges of wearing too scanty bathing suits, 100 bathers received summonses. Ambulance surgeons answered twenty-five calls for bathers who had cut their feet on clam shells and other sharp edges.

Miss Beatrice Miller, 31, of 377 Jackson Avenue, Jersey City, was severly injured when she fell down the stairs of the Ocean Parkway Station of the Brighton Beach line of the B. M. T.

Mrs. Philomena Mancuso, 378 Monmouth Street, Jersey City, fractured her right leg when she fell on the beach at the foot of Fifteenth Street. Philip Levine, 132 West 123d Street, Manhattan, fractured his leg while jumping at the foot of Twenty-fourth Street. He and Mrs. Mancuso were taken to Coney Island Hospital.

Aaron Kiplens, 10 years, 1,402 Play Avenue, Bronx, was injured when he fell from the boardwalk fifteen feet to the pavement on Stillwell Avenue. He was treated by Dr. Logue of Coney Island Hospital.

Railroads, steamboats, ferries, subways, elevated lines and automobile highways were taxed by the enormous exodus of city residents to the beaches and country resorts. Staten Island ferries were inadequate to handle the crowds bound for the countryside and beaches of Richmond.

Stationmaster William H. Egan reported that 300,000 persons passed through the Pennsylvania Station in the course of the day. One hundred extra trains were run to accommodate the enormous volume of passenger traffic. Mr. Egan estimated that 4,000 taxicab rides began or ended at the station, and that 75,000 passengers bought tickets for Long Island, including 9,300 who went to Belmont Park for the international races, 8,000 to the tennis matches at Forest Hills, 15,000 to Long Beach and 10,000 to the Rockaways.

Stationmaster W. A. Cramer of the Grand Central Terminal described the crowds as the largest ever handled on a Labor Day. He said the volume of incoming travel was 75 per cent. larger than last year and traffic was particularly heavy on local trains.

ATLANTIC CITY, N. J., Sept. 1.—The biggest crowd ever seen at Atlantic City was here to spend Labor Day and to see the beauty pageant. According to railroad and police estimates, the week-end crowd numbered 594,000. The Pennsylvania Railroad reports that it handled a 50 per cent. larger volume of passengers this year than last.

Bridge tenders on motor routes who were instructed to keep count of traffic reported that from noon Friday to noon today 46,000 motor cars from every State in the East and from many parts of the South had rolled into Atlantic City.

PRODUCTION RISES IN NEW ENGLAND

BOSTON, Sept. 1.—Business is now better in New England than it was in the Spring, according to the monthly review of industrial and financial conditions in the New England district, issued today by the Federal Reserve Bank of Boston. In several leading industries, the report states, production has increased. Employment reports for July, however, were not as favorable, the majority of industries reporting declines in the number employed.

In discussing business conditions the report states:

"Activity in June in the cotton textile industry was practically as low as during the worst of the depression in 1920-21, but since that time there has been an increase. New England mills consumed more cotton in July than in June, while the mills in the cotton-growing States of the South consumed less in July than in June."

New England woolen mills increased their consumption of wool in July by about 5 per cent, the report continues.

Regarding the shoe industry the review states:

"New England factories, according to preliminary reports issued by the Department of Commerce, actually produced slightly more shoes in July than in June, whereas, taking the country as a whole, production declined by nearly 4 per cent.

In metal working establishments production has not expanded. "However," the report states, "prices of several nonferrous metals have increased."

"The majority of the industries reported a decline in the number on the payroll, yet more industries reported an increased number of employes in July than in any month since March," the report said.

A seasonable decline from June in the value of contracts awarded for construction in July was noted, although it was said the total was substantially above that of 1923, with construction slightly lower than in the Spring.

"Money rates during August," the review stated, "were slightly stronger than in July, although they are still very low. The most noticeable change in the New England banking situation in recent weeks has been the sharp rise in commercial loans to customers."

GERMAN SHIPPING SMALL.

Merchant Fleet Only 4 Per Cent. of the World's Tonnage.

HAMBURG, Sept. 1.—The German merchant fleet constitutes only 4 per cent. of the 1924 world tonnage, as against 12 per cent. in 1914, according to the annual report of the Hamburg Shipowners' Association. The prospects for further construction, which so far is only 50 per cent. of the German prewar tonnage, is designated as exceedingly gloomy. The operating expenses are now declared to be equal to the world's standard.

The association deplores the lack of commercial shipping agreements with most countries as handicapping German shipping. It opposes excessive protective tariffs, and supports the principles established at the international shipping conference by virtue of which every country will tax its own shipping and permit foreign ships to be immune.

The report declared that the inauguration of the Dawes plan will enliven world trade so that shipping eventually will profit.

POLICEMAN KILLS MAN IN STREET ROW

SAYS HE WAS ATTACKED

An Avenue A wedding party broke up early yesterday morning and some of the guests gathered at the avenue and Eighty-fifth Street. An altercation started. Policeman Richard Graham of the East Sixty-seventh Street Station, off duty and in plain clothes, became involved. When three policemen arrived on the scene they found Graham holding two prisoners and a third man lying mortally wounded on the sidewalk. Graham said he shot the man after he himself had been attacked. The policeman had been so badly beaten up that he required the attention of a doctor from Flower Hospital.

The wounded man died at the hospital. He was John Slattery, 30 years old, a chauffeur, of 438 West Fifty-second Street. The two prisoners were booked as George Gallagher, 35, a chauffeur, of 1,614 Avenue A, and Edward Schaefer, 26, of 324 West Eighteenth Street. They were charged with felonious assault.

The shooting is being investigated by the police and the District Attorney. Graham, after being questioned by Captain John J. Noonan, went home on sick leave. He is reported to have told his superior that he had been visiting some friends in the neighborhood and that he was merely doing his duty in trying to stop an altercation. He had fired two shots after the men had attacked him, "to drive them off" and "to bring help."

Graham was not in the Harlem Court when the two prisoners were arraigned before Magistrate Corrigan. The Magistrate expressed surprise that Graham had not been held. "There are too many people being killed by the police, it seems to me," was his comment.

According to the story told in court, Graham was about to enter a taxicab when three men attempted to drag him out of it. In the fight that followed Graham fired twice, both shots striking Slattery in the abdomen. Mrs. Slattery, carrying her 6-months-old daughter Rose, was with the men.

"The police have got this all balled up," Gallagher said in court. The wedding had been held at his home, he said, and he took no part in the affair, but ran into the street when he heard the shots. He said he found Graham alone and lying on the sidewalk, drunk.

Detective Cordes denied that Graham was intoxicated. He said the police surgeon who examined him found he was "fit for duty."

Gallagher said a policeman who arrived told him to go back into the house, and he did so. Later, he said, he returned to accompany Schaefer to the station house and was arrested by order of Graham, who said: "I'll make charges against him, too."

The prisoners were held in $1,000 bail each for examination tomorrow. Policeman Graham has been on the force four years and has borne an excellent record, it was said. He lives with his wife at 274 West 199th Street.

THAT isn't nearly so disastrous as having some place to go and no clothes to go in. The man who is all dressed up is at least ready in case he's invited. The first step in success is to dress up for it in advance. You will not only look the part, but you will meet with less opposition than if you are dressed like a stranger. And the better the fabrics and the better the workmanship, the better the impression you will create.

Outstanding Success

The real worth of the Moon Motor Car Company today and yesterday is expressed in unmistakable figures by current sales records.

Popular demand for the new Moon models during June, July and August has even surpassed the similar period last year which was the greatest of all the seventeen years of Moon history.

This record is the natural climax of steady sales up-curve during which Moon multiplied its volume fourteen times in four years and passed 25 automobile manufacturers.
